ALL FASHIONABLE SOCIETY INTERESTED IN THIS FIGHT

How the Battle of Two Women for the $100,000,000 Left by William Weightman Is Dragging from Its Closet a Grisly Family Skeleton.

A GRISLY family skeleton threatens to break out of the fashionable Philadelphia closet whose barred and bolted doors are bulging from the efforts of litigious relatives to drag it forth.

Perhaps this result will be achieved in October, when the suit of Mrs. Jones Wister against her sister-in-law, Mrs. Anne Weightman Walker, to break the will of the late multi-millionaire, William Weightman, is reached on the court calendar. But, on their knees to drop the fight, although possibly one of the two women who are warring for the old chemist's hundred million dollars may haul down her colors rather than permit the doors of the family skeleton's closet to be opened wide to the public.

At present both seem willing to regale society by full information of what old William Weightman's eccentricities really of the son of the erowus chemist, later were, of just how and in what terms he proposed marriage, or at least something like it, to the beautiful and gracious and law left a codicil to the will which gives all very powerful Mrs. Jones Wister, the widow of his son, of how he spent the days at main document and giving to each of his which—although Mrs. Jones Wister kept Mrs. Walker out of the inner circle of Philadelphia society, whose invasion was the latter's great ambition—Mrs. Walker won from her and from her children the enormous wealth of the old chemist.

Society wants to know, too, just why the five daughters of Mrs. Jones Wister refused to take any part in her effort to break their grandfather's will, and, after begging her that fight meant many millions to each of them, finally turned against their own mother and threw themselves to the side of her bitterest enemy.

Mrs. Jones-Wister, who was first Sabina d'Invalliers, daughter of a family which claimed kinship with the kings of France, later Mrs. William Weightman, Jr., wife

"Ravenshill," his estate at Chestnut Hill, which is like the country place of some English baron, and finally, the social feud between the two women in daughter of William Weightman, is a woman with red hair and the kind of temper that often goes with it, who has an excellent a business brain as any man and a power of organization as great as her father, was left absolutely by him at his death his millions and his gigantic business, and ran the latter single handed and successfully for a while and then sold it to his ancient rivals, keeping the millions realized from the sale.

She claims that there is no codicil such as Mrs. Jones Wister mentions, and that her sister-in-law, by her own actions, caused the disinheriting of herself and her children.

The stake—Nominally one hundred million of dollars.

The real stake—Revenge on the part of Mrs. Walker for being thwarted in her dearest ambition, that of entering the real social circle of Philadelphia, and on the part of Mrs. Wister for being thwarted of her share and her children's share of the old chemist's wealth and for the humiliating against her of those same children.

Shuttlecock Between Two Women.

Between the two women, William Weightman, now growing old, was a shuttlecock, the prize, though he knew it not, for which they strove. He was subject, or at least so Mrs. Jones Wister and her witnesses say, to fits of curious eccentricity.

Whatever these eccentricities were it is one phase of them that forms the skeleton in the closet.

Some of the least amazing, though sufficiently curious, are known. The police about Ravenshill still tell of the enjoyment the quinine king got from hiding in the grounds and then blowing her whistle.

He was growing old and wanted her. The next day the proposal was renewed, and it was made again and again after that.

But it is said further that, insanely jealous of his beautiful daughter-in-law as the old man was, he did not confine his offers of marriage to her. It was strongly suspected that even some of his grandchildren and certain employes shared in the proposals.

Queer Proposals of Marriage.

Now all this time Mrs. Weightman was being wooed by Jones Wister. Her children knew it and, it is said, strongly objected to their mother taking another husband. Old William Weightman knew nothing about it. It happened after awhile that her suitor became impatient. Finally the woman consented. One day before the marriage the old chemist was told.

When Mrs. Jones Wister returned from the honeymoon and went to Ravenshill to again take control, she found Mrs. Walker and her husband there and was told that she had been deposed.

The daughter now had the reins and firmly she held them. She took charge at once of her father's business. Her husband became his private secretary. She lightened the load that the chemist's subordinates had been carrying and began at once to run the great chemical concern.

Napoleon Her Great Hero.

So time went on. Mrs. Walker's husband died and the whole work of the Powers & Weightman concern fell upon her. She had apparently given up all thought of social career. Instead, she solaced herself with gathering rare old lace and relics of Napoleon, who is her great hero. The five daughters of her sister-in-law, three of them now married, took up much of her time. They were with her weeks, where they were with their mother minutes.

But all this bitterness, this whole struggle, covering many years, had been secret. The outside world knew little of it.

Came then the sudden death of William Weightman. A few days later his will was read. It was very brief. It left everything he possessed save the sum of $100,000 apiece to each of his grandchildren, to his daughter, Mrs. Anne M. Weightman Walker. There was no mention of the woman to whom he had proposed marriage.

Soon after came the explosion, and society and the world caught a glimpse of the battlefield of years. Mrs. Wister publicly announced her intention of battling for the hundred millions.

Papers were already made up and the effort to break the will practically begun when another amazing thing happened.

After a conference of the five daughters in Philadelphia they went to their mother and begged her to give up her attempt to gain for them the millions she thought were in justice theirs. They were satisfied, they said. They could never bear to go into court, and on the witness stand before a gaping public, tell of the life of their grandfather.

Then Deserted by Her Daughter.

One thing was certain, that if their mother persisted in her attempt not one of them would help her in the least, and they would do all they could to help Aunt Anna. Yes, even on the witness stand.

Under this blow the determination of Mrs. Jones Wister flagged for a while. It is known that thereafter followed a period of conferences.

From New York, where Mrs. Walker had taken herself after she had sold the firm of her father to his rivals, there came only one answer to all overtures.

"No compromise."

There were more conferences between mother and daughters. It was finally reported that the whole suit was to be dropped.

Then there came an astonishing flank movement of Mrs. Jones Wister that showed that she was determined to carry on the war to the bitter end, no matter what the cost either in money or in scandal.

The courts were petitioned to declare Charles d'Invalliers, the brother of Mrs. Wister, the legal guardian of Miss Martha Weightman, her youngest daughter. At the time no one knew what this meant. In fact, it was thought that the action was probably inspired by Mrs. Walker as another means of humiliation.

It was not long before the nature of the move became apparent. Mrs. Wister had determined to break the Weightman will and to take the stand as a witness and not as plaintiff.

Charles d'Invalliers filed an appeal before the Register of Wills asking for the opening of the probate of the old chemist's testament. This appeal was granted and it was followed by the filing of a brief before the Orphans' Court of Philadelphia setting out what grounds the petitioners had for believing that the will should be broken.

Its pages bristled with allegations of undue influence, of charges against Mrs. Walker, of averments of the weakness of the will maker's mind. It proved strong enough for the judges, and in October the first gun in this women's war will boom.

When the officers would run up to assist, as they thought, the old man would jump from behind the shrubbery and laugh at them. Then he would distribute gold pieces, and the police would go away, alert to rush forward again at the whistle's call.

As for the skeleton part of the affair—this can only be guessed at from certain incidents and talk, notably one incident of which the still beautiful widow of the old man's son was the heroine and which is related by her.

One night Mrs. Jones Wister, who was still Mrs. Weightman, was sitting at the side of Weightman's bed. He had to be fed like a child at this time. She says, and she was waiting until he went to sleep. Suddenly the old man took her hand and then—proposed marriage to himself in the grounds and then blowing her whistle. She refused. He offered her his millions.

ENGLISH SOCIETY AS I FOUND IT

BY

MAXINE ELLIOTT

MAXINE ELLIOTT has returned from England wearing the laurels of the best kind of social favor ever won by an actress in that country where King Edward has reigned so long as fashion's arbiter. The cables have been unanimous about this. Though an actress, and the wife of Nat Goodwin, American comedian, the cables declare that her beauty and suitability caused to fly open to her doors upon which many a woman of America's smartest set has knocked in vain.

She was one of the five fair Americans at whose feet all types of British social lions knelt most persistently—the others being Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Cruckenthorpe, daughter of General Sickles, and wife of a diplomat; Mrs. Townsend, also of the diplomatic corps, and Mrs. Shaw. All her rivals were already of society's charmed circle, while the beautiful American actress had not yet gained a place equal to that held by reigning "show girl" idols.

But when Mrs. Newhouse began to champion her, and men like Lord Rosebery, ex-Prime Minister, and Alfred Rothschild could not refuse invitations to places where she was expected, social distinctions were showered upon her which the Edna Mays of her profession never dreamed of winning. The spectacle of Mrs. Potter Palmer being reduced to the necessity of begging Maxine Elliott to "bring Lord Rosebery" to her dinner leaves nothing more to be said on this point.

In this country all sorts of contradictory things are said about fashionable English society. It is easy to get into. It is next to impossible to get into. You can't get in without money. Your money won't help you. You must be championed by an American duchess. You must be beautiful and an actress.

Just one thing, however, is certain—the thing most patent to every intelligent observer of English social life, particularly in the London social season—Englishmen of the leisure class, even those high in political and government affairs, appear to consider it their sacred and pleasant duty to sit at beauty's feet. They seem to vie with each other in chivalrous and disinterested attentions to beautiful women.

In the case of Maxine Elliott, the stage attribute seems to have been eliminated. Her social triumphs seem to have been purely social—which lends additional value to her own account of them printed herewith.

Three New London Photographs of Miss Maxine Elliott.

By MAXINE ELLIOTT.

IT is embarrassing for me to write about the charming hospitality of my English friends. I could not do it if so much had not already been written about it by others. Some of these statements are true and some are exaggerated. It is true that this year in England I was an invited guest at several of the very best houses. Although I am not a society woman and do not belong to any "smart set," I was received in those houses just as Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Mackay and many others have been.

On the same basis that they met them I met many of the most influential men and women in England. Nothing but the rigid observance of social precedence in going into dinner—which every one in England takes for granted and thinks nothing about—indicated that my status had not been fixed for generations on as high a plane as that of any of my fellow guests.

The manners of the best English society are cordial, natural and wholly charming. Its members are valued by each other according to their personal qualities. If you command the right kind of an introduction, after that it all depends upon yourself. Your money wont help you. Unless you are a very exalted personage your pedigree may better be left at home. Your achievements in almost any branch of human endeavor—except money getting pure and simple—will carry you along smoothly, especially if they are in the fields of art, science or literature.

For Mutual Entertainment.

Especially if you talk well you have nothing to fear. The members of the best English society do not assemble for the purpose of boring one another. A bore has no standing there. I will not except even persons of very high rank, because even the least well endowed of these as well understand its social arrangements, comes nearer the main essential of social occasions that they are apt to positively shine as listeners to the talk of others. Indeed, perhaps there is no surer way for any one to be considered always agreeable.

If English society once accepts you your position is secure—"during good behavior." Society will be generous to you. It does not ask you to maintain an expensive establishment and give expensive functions. It asks nothing of you but to appear when you are invited and to make yourself agreeable.

The great houses in England—in London and in the beautiful English country—are so many, and their hospitality is so lavish, and the men and women of wit and brilliant achievements and of beauty are so numerous, and the manners of them are all so unaffectedly cordial, and their taste in dress and in all else so irreproachable, that city functions and country week-end parties are occasions of which one can never weary.

Social Lions for Every Set.

The opportunities for introduction to first-class social circles are much more numerous than in America. Of course, the King is the great central figure in English society, and court functions the grandest social occasions. But while in America, as I understand it, the circle of which Mrs. [illegible] is the head, assumes to be the only [illegible] and is rigidly exclusive, in England people who are persons grain at court are loosely organized into a great many sets, each with its centre—as in London, for instance, the Duchess of Sutherland's set, Lady Lansdowne's set, the Countess of Dudley's set, besides various political sets like the Chamberlain set.

I think Washington, on a small scale, in its social arrangements comes nearer to English model than any other American city, with its old Washington set, its Cabinet set, its purely political set, its diplomatic set, etc.

Each of the English social set has its lions of literature, science and art, and numbers of bright young men and women of special talent, or beauty, or of good family who are making their way in the world. They do not neglect society, for society is a great help to them.

Except during the short London season, English society is delightfully rural, that is, big country houses are its centres. Even during the London season from Saturday over Sunday the city is deserted. Every one who is any one at all is at some country house. Every one who is any one is either entertaining or being entertained.

English people who have learned how to live certainly are the most rational-minded of any in the world. At these big country houses as a guest you are very nearly as independent as the host and hostess themselves. You are bothered by none of the fussy attentions, the constant obligation of "entertaining" so characteristic of the American houses. Upon arriving with your baggage you are conducted to the apartments reserved for you, and after that you are governed by your own sweet will—with one exception: you are expected to be duly mindful of the dinner ceremony.

Where Everybody Is Somebody.

You may ring in the morning as early as you please, go foraging in the breakfast room, walk or ride, amuse yourself according to opportunities that invite you, return for luncheon when the pangs of hunger drive you, and occupy the afternoon in the same independent fashion—but when the evening dinner hour approaches, then you must remember your social duties, the first of which is to be prompt at the only ceremonious occasion of the day, appropriately dressed and ready to meet your fellow man or woman on the most civilized basis.

Whether in the city or the country, all these occasions are most delightful. Nowhere can the members of an assemblage be more congenial. Everybody has a reason for being really interested in everybody else. Everybody is somebody, and the majority of these somebodies have made themselves so. What can be more delightful than to find that the man who is sitting next you at dinner to-night is the author of the book you read with so much pleasure yesterday? Or that the dance you are "sitting out" is with the painter of the picture of which every one is talking?

If it is an afternoon affair, how charming it is to receive a cup of tea from the fair hands of the girl who composed the song that every one is humming. Perhaps a near-sighted, distinguished man trips on your skirts. All your resentment vanishes when you discover that he is the distinguished pathologist who discovered the latest new disease!

All the time you are meeting people you have read about, or whose works you have enjoyed, and whom you have always longed to know. Now you are meeting on a common level, and both of you are in your most amiable mood. There is no constraint, no affectation, no artificiality, because you both know that the presence of the other at this occasion is not only a guarantee of his worth, but of your mutual fellow-feeling.

London society materializes for you names that have long been household words, but whose possessors were vague, misty figures, hardly human. Then you become aware that the author of "The Little Minister" and "Alice Sit by the Fire" is almost as unterrifying as ordinary men; that Lord Rosebery, ex-Prime Minister of England, can make a joke and see one; that Alfred Rothschild is as agreeable and unassuming as other rich men with no international finance behind them. Great figures come out of the radiant mists that have surrounded them and you know them as of your own species.

Cleverest Young Man in England.

I met Lord Hugh Cecil, son of Lord Spencer, who was once Prime Minister. Lord Hugh is considered the cleverest young man in England. His speeches in Parliament are renowned as masterpieces of oratory. In society he is fascinating. He is not handsome; he doesn't need to be. Other fascinating men I met at English houses were not handsome. Their manners and their conversation are something to be remembered.

Until I became a guest in these houses I never imagined what an interesting subject politics is. In English society everyone talks politics. They don't argue and get excited about it. They make their points pleasantly and wittily; if there is a sting it is concealed by a smile and an attitude of impersonality. Women talk politics constantly. They do it so tactfully that the foundation can be swept from under a cabinet minister without his presenting it.

Englishwomen, because of their soft and beautifully modulated voices, can say many things that would sound harsh coming from the lips of an American woman. Yet the latter are exceedingly popular for conversational gifts which their English cousins so often lack. I think the most admired American woman in London this year was Mrs. John Jacob Astor. She is not only very beautiful, but exceedingly gracious and charming. For popularity Mrs. Jack Leslie vies with the ever popular Duchess of Marlborough. Mrs. Cruckenthorpe is of a striking type of beauty, with her fair hair and dark eyes, and her lovely complexion. Mrs. Newhouse is welcome everywhere, and among the American women who entertain extensively Mrs. Potter Palmer has to yield the palm to no one.

If I may be forgiven for mentioning beauty as a qualification of value in gaining admission to English society, I would like to throw a bouquet or two at English gentlemen for the chivalrous attitude they maintain toward that gift in women. To be man, almost, they seem to regard that gift—when not handicapped by any sort of disadvantageous notoriety—as meriting their frankest admiration and devotion. Without rivalry, demanding nothing in return, they vie with each other in words and acts of devotion.

If King Arthur and the good Knights of the Round Table were to awake to-day in London from their long sleep and mingle with these modern knights, I am sure they would approve the conduct of their descendants in this respect. There are exceptions, of course; but they only prove the power, quite that cultured Englishmen can be, and usually are, most chivalrous toward the fair sex.

I dare say that some day our American social affairs will become invested with the same charm that distinguishes those of England, but hardly, I think, until the ideal of social fitness broadens considerably, and not until American society can divest itself of the notion that it is "one and indivisible" with one headquarters and all else beyond the pale.

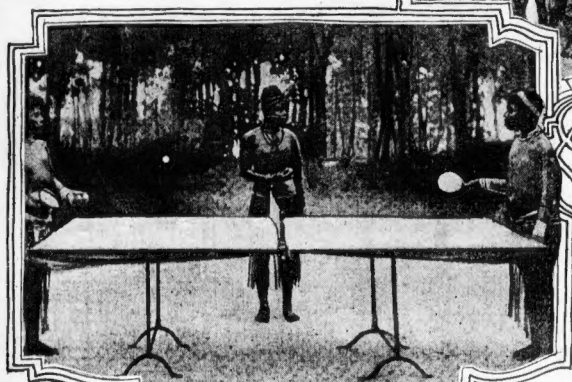
A Phonograph Concert in the Middle of an African Forest.

QUEEREST HOME YET OF THE PING-PONG CRAZE.

THERE is no more "Darkest Africa." Away down in the wilds of the head waters of the Nile, where Stanley found Livingston, the half naked Bantus have given up head hunting for the superior joys of ping-pong.

Dusky belles clad mainly in a girdle of beads and brave warriors even more carefully attired in an indoor game—had enticed its devotees away from all healthful sports out of doors. It was the blow that almost killed golf.

And now ping-pong has fastened itself upon these poor African savages. These wall-oiled primitive creatures probably never will come out of their trance. Not knowing any better, they may be expected to remain enthralled to the end of the chapter. But there is one ping-pong circumstance in their favor. Their small, smoky wattled huts are impossible as ping-pong parlors, so in Africa, ping-pong has become an open-air game.



Uncivilized Natives of "Darkest Africa" Playing a Game.

An enterprising traveller has snapped his camera at such a scene, as the accompanying reproduction indicates. In a pleasant forest glade the earth has been smoothed and levelled, and there the ping-pong table has been set up. You can see two natives just beginning a game while another stands by to settle disputes which—in Africa—are sometimes quite bloody.

Who is responsible for peaceful scenes like this, where once all was contentious and sanguinary, is not quite clear. It is reported that a missionary who was captured by a savage and hungry tribe, having his suspicions excited by the way the chief poked his well covered ribs and pinched his rotund thighs, bethought himself of the ping-pong outfit carried in his baggage, and forthwith exhibited its workings with a view to making it a peace offering. It is said that when the chief played one game his hunger vanished and he agreed to build another throne wide enough to hold both the missionary and himself.

At any rate, ping-pong is now a settled institution among these African savages. Whether it will prove the greatest civilizing medium ever yet tested, or whether another little attribute of effete civilization that has charmed these African savages beyond words. That is what they call the phonograph. At first the machine scared them half out of their wits. It brought the supernatural a bit too near for the comfort of their overburdened consciences. But gradually this effect wore off, and now the household of any chief which is not equipped with one of these modern conveniences, wherewith guests may be entertained with "Mr. Dooley" or some choice bit of oratory, is hopelessly outside of the African savage smart set.

All of which must fill with dismay the breasts of budding explorers and hunters of big game. Imagine latter-day Stanleys pushing their way amid terrific hardships into the heart of some primeval African forest on the trail of another Okapi or another race of pigmies, with knives in their teeth and fingers on triggers, only to come finally face to face with a peaceful native ping-pong party!

Think of the futility of trying to bag tigers and elephants in jungles which resound with phonographic strains of "Hiawatha" and "The Blue and the Gray." How long will wild game stand that sort of thing?

And how can the adventurous and frugal trader hope to swap strings of glass beads for tons of raw ivory any longer, with savages so sophisticated that they can play ping-pong without coming to blows, and who go about humming the next to the latest songs popular on Broadway?

But all these comforts of home should make it easier for the missionaries. The phonograph and the game of ping-pong assuredly come under the head of the arts of peace. It should be easier for missionaries to lead these children of nature from ping-pong to Sunday school than from the warpath to the reading of tracts and lesson leaves.

"The big mouth in the devil box" is [illegible] about the wherewithal with which they are clothed are batting the hollow little cellulold balls about day and night, while the native forests ring with their gleeful shouts of "Twenty love!" "Forty love!" and "Game!"

Hunting the tiger to get necklaces of his teeth, hunting elephants to supply greedy traders with ivory, hunting each other, together with stray missionaries to keep the family pot boiling—all these traditional industries have had to give way before the fascinations of ping-pong.

The land of the Bantus is probably the only place remaining on the map where that extraordinary craze has not played itself out. Two years ago, in the hottest July weather, all along the Summer resort coasts of the United States all day long and far into the night men and women of all ages and conditions perspired over ping-pong tables, while bathing suits invited moths in their trunks. Up in the Adirondacks as late as September ping-pong spared the life of no wild deer by causing mighty hunters utterly to forget the arrival of the "open season."

And then, almost in the flicker of an eyelash, the craze passed. All of a sudden those multitudes of obsessed brains cleared. Those who had been ping-pong mad smiled foolishly at each other, and forthwith all the little balls, paddles, tables and nets were hustled away into dark garrets never more to be seen until resurrected by great-grandchildren wherewith to illustrate a supreme folly of their great grandparents.

For ping-pong designed to while away to stormy evenings within doors—being necessarily an indoor game—had enticed its devotees away from all healthful sports out of doors. It was the blow that almost killed golf.

And now ping-pong has fastened itself upon these poor African savages. These wall-oiled primitive creatures probably never will come out of their trance. Not knowing any better, they may be expected to remain enthralled to the end of the chapter. But there is one ping-pong circumstance in their favor. Who Will Win Saddle Horses Prettiest Girls at

ALTHOUGH every possible effort was made during the past week to reach a verdict in the competition for the five saddle horses to be awarded to the five prettiest girls at the Summer resorts, the committee of judges appointed to make the decision found it impossible to complete their work in time to announce their verdict to-day.

This was due principally to a perfect avalanche of "eleventh hour" photographs which arrived almost too late to be considered. They had to be admitted and passed upon, of course, although the delay has necessitated prolonging the contest until next Sunday. It is too late now to submit photographs in this contest, as no more can be considered.

The competition for the five horses, all saddled and bridled, has already narrowed down to a contest between a dozen exceptionally pretty girls, and the keenest good judgment will be required to decide which are the five prettiest of them.

Whatever way the judges decide, it is evident that the winners will be widely scattered. Both coasts, the Middle West and the South are represented in this last week's contest. Any five out of those remaining would easily win if it were not for the remaining seven.

However, hard as the task will be, the judges assure us that they will come to the momentous decision in time for next Sunday's issue.

The quantity and the quality of the beauty which has been brought to light by this competition are most remarkable. It was not to be supposed that all localities would be so well represented. There was not a State or Territory that did not give the judges material for careful judgment.

The five saddle horses which will be presented by this newspaper to the five prettiest girls at the Summer resorts this season will be all saddled and bridled. Indeed, the saddles alone are a most valuable prize. They are the very highest grade "Crosse" London-made side-saddles—the handsomest product of the Black Cross Company, headquarters of the fashionable set in both England and America for harness, saddlery and ultra-smart travelling and small leather goods. The five saddles are of the very finest English pigskin, and have the fashionable new flat seat now in favor among

Teaching English Girls How to Walk and to Be as

What the English Girls Are Doing to Gain Suppleness.

THE latest fad among Englishwomen is the fad for American athletics.

Constant praise of the American girl's grace and beauty has at last aroused her English cousin to the necessity of doing something toward her own improvement.

"What is the matter with me?" she has asked over and over. And at last she has gone to the root of things to find out. By that we mean that she has studied the American girl to some purpose.

She has come to the conclusion that grace may be acquired, that beauty may be improved, and that the English girl, who has hitherto held among all the women of the world the palm for strength and robust health, may by study add to it the qualities that have won for the American girl the plaudits of foreign countries.

Year after year our fair ones, both with limited and limitless capital, have crossed over to the other side of the water. Year after year we have heard how this one or that one, scarcely noticed over here among a myriad of others as charming, has won the heart of the London beaux.

"The American girl? Oh, she has a certain grace, dontcherknow, a certain style in the way she wears her clothes, a peculiar gliding gait, a suppleness and lithesome all her own. Then she throws back her shoulders and carries her head in the air, as though she owned the world, dontcherknow."

That's what the English girl has heard over and over when she inquired of her brother why it was that the American girl abroad swept all before her.

Then, having brains, if she hadn't grace, the English girl decided to emulate her rival. How? By studying her methods.

American Athletics and Grace.

The first thing to be done was to find out some one who would tell her what was wrong and how to make it right. Who could do this better than an American?

At the academy of Mme. Hainsbury, a training college for women at Dartford Heath, Kent, are employed American professors of athletics. These, what may be called the fad for American athletics, began. There the English girl goes to acquire American grace.

"I saw," says Madame quite frankly, "that compared with the American, the English woman is heavy and unwieldy. Her walk is bad. She may cover the ground, but she comes down on her heels instead of on her toes. She carries her shoulders forward and no under her ears. Her neck is shortened and she stands as badly as she walks.

"The reproach that she doesn't know how to wear her clothes is a natural consequence of her bad carriage. When she learns grace she will learn at the same time how to put on her clothes so that they will not seem to have been thrown at her from the other side of the room.

"Athletics for women should tend toward the development of beauty and grace, grace of movement and body, beauty of form and face."

On those principles Mme. Hainsbury has established her academy. Finding that the American woman was every year becoming more supple and graceful, she determined to go to America for her teachers. Their importation has made a course at her school one of the fads of the fashionable, vigorous English girl. In fact, she doesn't consider herself quite "finished" until she has learned what she describes as a thing or two about walking, standing, running, dancing, etc.

Americanizing the English Girl.

It is a good step in the right direction, and all over the kingdom colleges on the plan of Mme. Hainsbury's are springing up.

"Can you teach me to be as graceful as the American girl?" is the invariable question.

And the answer is "Yes, if you will give us time—yes, for you have taken a step in the right direction; you have discovered that you have faults to remedy, and that grace may be acquired like manners, and even in many cases like beauty.

The course includes exercises to develop the arms, back and shoulders; bending over a bar to give suppleness to the back and waist line; dancing and balancing, first on one leg and then on the other with fairy-like lightness; standing, walking, vaulting.

At the beginning merely correctness is aimed at. Ease and grace come later.

First, those who want to succeed like the American girl are taught how to stand. "You can't walk properly," say all good athletes, "until you have learned how to stand."

"As an actual fact," says Madame Hainsbury in addressing her pupils at their very first lesson, "not two women out of a hundred know how to stand. As a rule they put the thigh joints forward, lower their shoulders, sink their chests and decrease

Rowing a Boat Above the Clouds.

The First Successful Test of the New Aerial Rowboat.

A FEW years ago it would have required far more than a mere wild stretch of the imagination to conceive the possibility of rowing a boat through the air high above the clouds. Today the thing is not only possible, but an actual reality.

Mr. Alex L. Reynolds, of Los Angeles, Cal., has constructed an aerial rowboat which, as the accompanying photographs show, has been put to actual use. The daring operator, a young woman, who has been rowing the boat in a series of trial trips, is of the opinion that as a pastime aerial boating is far superior to ordinary rowing or paddling about on water in a little skiff.

The aerial rowboat is composed of a gas bag, whose equator is much nearer the front of the bag than is usual in the most modern airships. Attached to the gas bag is a light frame work which supports the occupant. The boat is raised and lowered, propelled forward and backward by the pair of wing-like oars, following closely the style of construction used in the wind mills of a windmill.

By the use of weights the balloon, or gas bag, as it is called, can be made to raise just half a pound less than the weight of the occupant. Then gravity is overcome by the use of the oars. It is claimed by Mr. Reynolds that any one who knows the least little bit about rowing an ordinary rowboat can step aboard the aerial rowboat and sail away in any direction desired. You can row until you get tired or want to stop. Then the half pound difference between your own weight and the lifting power of the gas bag at the best shape and position of that.

One of the most interesting features of the new aerial rowboat, from the viewpoint of the average man or woman, is that the cost of building a car and bag sufficient to carry one person is but a trifle over $100. A speed of from four to ten miles has been attained by good oarsmen. With a favorable air current it is claimed that twenty, or even thirty, miles an hour is possible. There is always the drawback, however, in the case of the ordinary rowboat, that it is an difficult to row against the current, or ward swing, somewhat resembling the action rather, in this case, against the wind. of a bird's wings in flight. The operator

Mr. Reynolds claims that his aerial rowboat "No. 1" gives nothing beyond an idea of the possible development of the aerial boat of the future. In other words, he sees almost unbounded possibilities for his invention.

"When I constructed the 'No. 1' it was merely for experimental purposes only and to test the practicability of my theories. I think I have successfully demonstrated my claim that the aerial rowboat solves the problem of aerial navigation. With that accomplished, I intend to develop the ideas along the same practical lines in the construction of a larger aerial rowboat, which can be operated much more easily than the 'No. 1,' and which will carry from four to a dozen oarsmen and passengers.

The increased lifting capacity, as every novel craft can be put in the future. In claimed by Mr. Reynolds that any one who one will understand, is simply a matter of arranged just the same as in an ordinary rowboat, so that the oars can be manned from either side or single. There will also be a great American pastime.

When the aerial rowboat "No. 1" was first tested some interesting experiments were made with the different air currents found at varying heights. During one of the most successful trial trips the lifting capacity of the balloon was so nicely regulated that only a slight downward movement of the large oar blades was sufficient to lift the boat from its resting place. The oars are worked with a downward and backfinds after a very little practice in a dead calm that he is able to raise and lower the boat at will, to row it backward or forward, and even to turn it around upon its own center by rowing forward with one oar and "back-watering" with the other.

The new aerial rowboat presents possible advantages over the earlier types of aircraft in that the motive power of which is derived from miniature gasoline engines. There is not so much danger of the motive power breaking down at unexpected moments, and the operator can row just as far as he pleases without being entirely at the mercy of a power machine.

With the aerial rowboat an accomplished fact, it is a very simple matter to suggest many interesting uses to which this novel craft can be put in the future. In the absence of contrary winds and during favorable weather conditions they may be extensively used. They may even become a craze just as much as the bicycle and roller skating were in their day. And aerial boat racing, all the way from singles to eight-oared craft, may eventually become as popular as any other the space that should belong to their lungs. The effect is ungraceful and even unhealthy. If you stand correctly the weight will be lifted from the vital organs and you will improve ten per cent in beauty."

At the word beauty every scholar in Madame Hainsburg's academy sits up straight and redoubles her attention. Then one of Madame's specially imported Americans takes her stand. She is perfectly graceful. That, by the way, is a feature of Madame's academy.

Certain exercises, of course, such as vaulting, jumping, dancing, etc., are executed in bloomer or gymnasium costume, but when it comes to a simple demonstration of how to stand, how to walk, how to sit and how to enter a room, then simple, well-hanging, well-cut gowns are worn.

The American professor then gracefully glides to her feet and stands with her hands loosely thrown back, her chest leading, her head up. Her whole attitude denotes buoyancy and strength. She looks as though she had conquered the world.

Every woman in the room is at once desirous of being exactly like her. They take their places to be taught. The American leads them, holding a long pole before them till their toes and their chests touch it.

"Now then—so—that's it, heads up—back —relax," you hear all over the room.

Pass out of there, and a little beyond those who have learned how to stand and to walk are studying the difficult and astounding art of dancing. It is here that the American women excel. English women are heavy. Springing on the tips of their toes is absolutely foreign to them.

Watch them in a ball room and you will see that their partners have to pull them around instead of merely guiding them. Their feet seem to cling to the floor and their bodies stiffly refuse to yield to what is commonly known as the poetry of motion.

To dance well one must be symmetrical, supple, pliable, yielding—and all these things mean grace, the present fad of the English girl.

Dancing like the American Girl.

When they dance Mme. Hainsburg's pupils are supposed to be as light as fairies. Their exercises have made their joints flexible and ready to yield to any command. Now they respond gracefully, dancing with their whole bodies, with their hands, their arms, their eyes, their lips, their feet, their bodies.

Pass on to the gymnasium proper and you will find the English girl in her most strenuous mood making her muscles flexible, so that she may learn later the intricacies of dancing. There she is busy developing her back and shoulders, bending backwards over a bar as far as she can, feeling at first that she can scarcely bend at all, then gradually gaining more and more suppleness, more and more flexibility until finally she banishes aches and pains and feels that she really has control of her muscles. These exercises also give her suppleness. She sees herself gradually acquiring the things she most envied—grace and freedom of motion. The knowledge really makes a new woman of her.

You think so as you pass on through the academy. You come across her pupils sing on a log trot, with as much apparent ease as she walks, breaking into an occasional burst of speed just to relieve the monotony.

All over the place you will find her practicing her walk, poising her body perfectly, throwing her chest forward, her abdomen in and springing on the tips of her toes. Forever and ever she has disregarded the short, quick, choppy steps of former years, and the old use of her whole foot from the heel forward. She glides with her head thrown up high, and she looks happy, for she knows she has improved.

She looks at herself in the glass, of course—what woman doesn't—and it seems to be that she has improved, certainly improved; that, well really, she looks like an American.

She finds that her skirts hang better and her carriage follows the lines of her figure more exactly. She seems to fill it out. And there is certainly a new lightness and suppleness about her walk. As for the "certain style" that her brother remarked in the American girl—well, she decides to patronize the American girl's tailor and see what will happen.

Lo, and behold, there follows nine times out of ten with the graduate from Mme. Hainsburg's academy the thing most calculated to make her happy—some one mistakes her for an American.

Culture of Better, Brighte

THE modern miracles recently performed in plant life by Professor Luther Burbank are known the world over—how he has made the cactus grow without its prickly spines, how he has created a plant which bears tomatoes on the branches and potatoes beneath the ground among its roots—a stoneless plum which grows to the size and flavor of the common fruit, but is solid meat—and the giant black raspberry, a combination of the raspberry and blackberry, much superior to either in flavor and size. Professor Burbank is now turning his wonderful powers over Nature toward the human race. What he has done for trees and plants he will try to do in a broader, nobler way for the boys and girls of the coming generation.

The Rev. Dr. Lee outlines on this page the general aim and scope of Professor Burbank's new field of usefulness. The remarkable achievements of others along somewhat similar lines are also told below; especially the great work of Dr. Barnardo among the ignorant, vicious and diseased waifs of the London slums and the gratifying successes of Dr. Groszmann, Dr. Walter and others who have triumphed in making over half-witted and feeble-minded children into useful and worthy citizens.

Bandage to Keep the Mouth Shut, Compel Breathing Through the Nose and Relieve Throat, Lung and Adenoid Troubles.

By the Rev. Dr. James W. Lee,

Pastor of St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church of St. Louis, Mo.

MR. BURBANK has twenty thousand visitors a year from all parts of the world at his laboratory at Santa Rosa, Cal., and because of his absorbing work he can see very few of them. When I called a few days ago at his home he granted me an interview.

When I said to him that I realized how precious his time was, and that I did not intend to take much of it, he remarked:

"My time is worth $250 per hour."

While looking at some of the marvellous results of his scientific experiments in the plant kingdom I said to him that in a sermon delivered before the National Conference of Charities and Correction in Portland, Ore., I said that the time had come when we should apply the scientific principles used by Mr. Burbank in the transformation of plants in the bringing up of children.

Mr. Burbank's eyes flashed, and he remarked with deep feeling, "That is the great aim and object of my life."

This remark of my host no surprised me that I at once asked him if he had considered the work of Dr. Thomas J. Barnardo, of London. He said that he had, and that Dr. Barnardo was doing in the realm of human life what he was doing in the realm of plant life.

He said:

"I care but little for these weeds, these flowers and these trees except as they afford me opportunities to show what can be done by directing natural forces.

"My hope is that what I am doing to show how the natural forces may be guided in the finest specimens of each species of plants will be adopted by those in charge of the young life of the children.

"A plant is responsive to only a few influences, such as are found in the soil, sunshine and rain, but a child is infinitely responsive.

"Weeds are weeds because they are cropped, trampled upon, burned by fierce heat, tormented by innumerable pests, or perhaps permitted to suffer from cold, wet feet.

"There is not a weed in the whole realm of nature that, if given proper nourishment and sunshine, will not grow up into a beautiful and useful plant.

"The undeveloped, dwarfed, diminutive and broken specimens of the human kind are such simply because they have grown up without having the elements which environed them and the possibilities to which their natures are related brought into touch and contact with them. The diminutive specimen of the daisy that we pass unnoticed has possibilities wrapped up in it of the magnificent schuster daisy; all that is necessary to turn the little, poverty-stricken daisy into the beautiful schuster is simply to touch the potentialities within it with the elements of its environments to which it is related."

Mr. Burbank then moved across the room to a table, and, picking up a manuscript, said:

"This is the original of the only speech I ever made for children. I delivered it at the closing exercises of the San Rafael Public School."

He then read to me from that speech these words:

"I love the sunbeams, the blue sky, the trees, the flowers, the mountains, the green meadows, the running brooks, the ocean when its waves softly ripple along the sandy beach, or when it is pounding the rocky cliffs in its thunder and roar; the birds of the field, the rainbow, the dawn, the noonday and the sunset, but I love the children above them all.

"The vast possibilities bound up in each child are far beyond anything else which we shall ever see or know."

According to Mr. Burbank, in order that children may grow up and realize and fill out completely and beautifully the outlines of the life pattern, capsulate in each one in their young lives, it is necessary that the spiritual forces environing them must be recognized.

He said for a while he had worked with the idea, tha

Weakness of the Legs Being Associated with Mental Weakness, This Exercise of Pedal and Spiral Springs Strengthens the Legs and (Reflexly) the Mind.

Astonishing Results with Idiots and Feeble-Minded Children.

PATIENT effort and scientific experiment have produced astounding results in building up the brains of half-witted children and in correcting the paranoid misformures of little ones. Indeed it has been found that many forms of feeble-mindedness are related to bodily weakness, and that when the latter is strengthened the brain becomes active and strong. Thus Dr. Max Walter, impressed with the weak leg powers of many idiot children, devised the ingenious machine shown in the picture on this page for the strengthening and development of the legs. A spiral spring and pedal appliance attached to a chair in which the child sits overcomes a weakness of the brain which is associated with lack of power in the leg muscles, thus showing that it is the muscular act and not the mental effort that nourishes the real seat of the weakness—the brain.

Many doctors believe that the real future of medicine lies in learning and making use of the interdependence of the brain and nerves on one hand and the muscles and organs on the other.

The strongest hint in this line is the well-attested fact that in the insane and feeble-minded there is almost invariably a weak or disordered circulation of the blood. Where the mental trouble has existed from childhood there is a striking lack of physical development.

Weak Thumb Caused Epilepsy.

That the development of so small a member as the thumb could influence the brain would seem impossible. Yet in the records of Vienna's largest hospital is the case of a man who was cured of epilepsy by amputation of his left thumb. The patient, strangely enough, suggested the remedy himself, and with great difficulty persuaded the doctors to perform the operation.

Since childhood he had been subject to terrible attacks of the disease, which were invariably preceded by a pain in his left thumb. The thumb was shriveled and weak, and always had been since his early days, when he had acquired the thumb-sucking habit.

After amputation of the member he had just one attack, while the wound was still unhealed, but it was the last. Proper development of the thumb in youth by exercise would, it is thought, have done just as well and have saved the thumb.

Dr. Maximillian P. E. Grossmann, principal of the School for Defective Children at Washington Heights, New York, speaking of the wonderful effects on the mind produced by alleviating bodily difficulties and developing the muscles, said:

"The fitting of glasses will often prove an effective cure for bad temper. I have had many cases where a habit of lying was cured by treating the stomach for indigestion.

"Adenoid vegetations, catarrh of the throat and stomach often have a profound effect on the moral and mental growth of the child. When a child seems to be born naturally wicked and perverse there is usually a 'devil to be cast out,' and that devil is quite often easily located and made to depart in the form of an adenoid growth in the nasal passage, a run-down anæmic constitution or a disordered stomach.

"It is a well-known fact that backwardness in children may sometimes be entirely cured by fitting glasses to myopic or hypermetropic eyes. Many suffer from cold feet and general chilliness. Measures to improve the circulation and nutrition generally will bring immediate results, I find.

"The immense value of physical improvement in muscle and bone is evident from the fact, generally recognized by psychologists, that every thought has its muscular counterpart, which is a part and a vital part of the thought. This can be seen when any one is swept by a strong thought or emotion—the muscles of the body move with the currents of the brain. If the person is carefully watched at such a time it can be seen that every portion of the body is in the grip of this 'reverberation,' as Professor James, the eminent psychologist, calls it."

The half-witted child has certain unmistakable earmarks, such as a shuffling gait, a curved spine, dangling arms, an open mouth, pallid skin, toes turned in, etc. In the schools for the feeble-minded it is the practice to remove all these peculiarities as the method of cure. Children too backward to pay attention to advice in regard to picking up their feet when they walk are made to walk back and forth on the floor over a ladder. The patient is obliged to lift its feet to step over the rounds of the ladder. This repeated patiently day by day brings a change in the gait which becomes permanent.

The exercising chair already mentioned is used in connection with the ladder, as weakness of the leg muscles is part of the cause of the shuffling gait.

Weakness and malformation of the spine have a great influence for bad upon the brain. The spinal column is, however, a much harder portion of the brain to alter than the legs.

Straighten Spines by Hanging.

For this a special harness is made. The patient is suspended from the floor by his or her neck, as shown in the illustration. Part of the weight is eased by a strap from the waist, but there is enough of a pull on the neck to stretch and straighten out the spine.

Along with the physical development the mind itself must be exercised. The instructors of feeble-minded children find it impossible to make their charges pay attention to abstract things. A page of print will at best hold a child's attention but a few seconds at a time. The child will become unhappy and even sick if its teacher attempts to force it.

Instruction can be given, however, by means of bright colors and striking objects. A very backward patient can be taught the alphabet and learn to read and write from large blocks with raised letters on the sides, painted in bright colors.

On this page is an illustration showing how a boy was taught all about the peacock, after exciting and holding his interest by means of a feather from the bird. This child had failed to gain any information whatever from repeated attempts with a book and unillustrated explanations.

Though most infants learn the difference between bitter and sweet and sour as soon or sooner than they learn to talk, a half-witted child requires often a long series of experiments before he can be sure which is which.

Dr. Grossmann is shown on the right-hand side of this page in the act of giving alternately tastes of sweet and bitter substances to a blindfolded youth. This poor fellow had apparently learned the difference very quickly at a previous lesson which the doctor had given him without a blind. But on changing the colors of the two substances he was using the doctor found his patient all mixed up. He had been ignoring his poorly developed sense of smell and had made his answers wholly from the difference in color.

Of most vital importance of all is the amount and quality of the circulation of the blood in the brain. The nourishment, growth and development are entirely dependent on this. There can be no thinking in the brain, psychologists have found, except when there is circulation of the blood. When normal people go to bed at night the blood pressure in the brain gradually slackens, their thoughts grow vague and confused, and finally unconsciousness comes in the form of sleep as the blood pressure becomes too low to allow of thought. Occasionally some condition of the body such as a noise striking the ears or a little indigestion in the stomach, has a reflex action on the brain and sends a little local current of blood through some small area. The result of this is a dream. If the stimulus from the body is strong and lasting enough to cause a sufficient quantity of blood to go to the brain the person wakes up.

A poor sleeper is unable to shut off enough of his blood to keep his brain quiet all night. A person with a sleepy disposition goes through the day without enough blood in his brain.

Half-witted children suffer from lack of blood in their skulls.

Pumping Blood to the Brain.

Dr. Walker's method, shown herewith, is a device by which blood is forced to run up through the head and brain by a series of movements of the patient's arms and legs. These movements send the blood in great waves to the ill-nourished head of the nervous system and are said to bring marked results.

The exercises not only temporarily feed and stimulate the brain, but open the way and make it easier for the blood to get up there naturally—sort of opening up the road.

Walking a straight line is a difficult task for many stupid children, and practice in doing it is a very potent way of developing a certain portion of the brain. The sense of balance is governed partly by the feelings of the muscles, partly by the sense of sight and in part by an organ in the ear. The brain area represented by these three is much strengthened by the practice of walking along a straight line.

Simple games in which there is as much interest as possible and little need of complex co-ordinated action of mind, eye and muscles are a large part of the day's schedule in the most approved schools for backward children.

In the same way bed-making, gardening, mowing, etc., are preferable to sewing or drawing.

As the throat is so near to the brain and all blood must pass by it to reach the brain, anything that affects the throat is certain to be represented in the condition of the brain.

If catarrh or adenoids are present they switch off a large share of the blood which should nourish the brain.

Sleeping with the mouth open as is well known, leads to aggravate all throat troubles and from the general lack of use in the breathing passages.

Against these things, snoring is caused by the open mouth, and even in children a gasping, choking sound can be heard which is the precursor of the snore which they will have in mature years.

The noise of snoring is a constant irritant to the nerves of the snorer, doctors say, though he only partly guesses the fact when he "snores himself awake." The nerves of the ear are kept just a little on the alert and there is always lack of complete rest for the centre of hearing in the brain.

The bones of the skull also vibrate and keep waking up various localities of the cortex of the brain.

A device used by doctors of the insane and feeble minded with success is shown on this page. It is a bandage to close the mouth and compel breathing through the nose.

MEN— Prof. Burbank, Whose Genius Has Accomplished Miracles in Plant and Tree Life, Will Now Give His Mind to the r, Stronger and Morally Nobler Children —

Experiments that have Already Been Made on Wicked Children and Little Street Waifs.

y the natural forces were sufficient, but that, in pursuance f his studies and experiments, he had been led to see that, f in order to get the human results out of child life, that he of was getting by gilding the natural forces in the plant life, the spiritual life in which every child lives, moves
, and has its being must be considered and utilized.

By the American-Journal-Examiner.

The experiments which Dr. Barnardo has been making with child life for the past forty years demonstrate the correctness of Mr. Burbank's view.

Dr. Barnardo began in London with one little waif boy who touched his pity and opened for him the marvelous career which he has had, and during the forty years of his work he has trained to work and educated and tangled sixty thousand waif children picked up in the streets of English cities. He now has ninety-three homes in Great Britain. Out of the sixty thousand children who have been sent from his homes into the world to make their way less than 2 per cent have turned out badly.

Even Mr. Burbank with his wonderful achievements in the plant world can show no such record as this. This establishes the principal that in the plant world invironment counts for but little, but in the human world it counts for everything.

The two men to-day who are doing more than any others on the face of the earth to advance the progress of the human race are Luther Burbank, of Santa Rosa, Cal., and Dr. Thomas J. Barnardo, of London, England.

Dr. Barnardo practices exactly the same methods in developing his waif children that Mr. Burbank does in developing his weeds into plants. And in changing the thorn cacti into the thornless cacti and interbreeding the wild potato with the tomato and true potato he developes a specimen that bears tomatoes on top and Irish potatoes in the soil.

Mr. Burbank simply by living with plants, sympathizing with them and watching them day and night, has learned the elements in their environment for which they have an affinity and he has brought the undercurrents of influence in touch with the plants' interior possibilities.

Dr. Barnardo recognizes that a child is not simply an animal capable of being fed and nourished by food which builds up the body, but that it has a mind which must be called forth by the truth to which it is related, and that it has a spirit which must also be put into harmony with the spirit of God, which also environs it; hence, every child who leaves Dr. Barnardo's home goes out with hands trained to work, with mind trained to think, and with heart trained to love God, as revealed in the most perfect life known among men that of Jesus Christ, the world's redeemer, the world's guide and the world's perfect and complete specimen of human life.

Dr. Burbank remarked in closing that whenever it came to be generally recognized that children were infinitely spiritual, were susceptible to the spiritual environment, and that the same scientific principles were observed in bringing the undercurrents of a child's life in correspondence with the spiritual facts environing it, that the human race would enter upon a new realm of hope, holiness and happiness. Hitherto, old theological theories, long out of date, have stood in the way of human progress. Assuming that children are totally depraved, dead in trespasses and sins, it has been thought proper to let the little things grow up with old Adam in them, sow their wild oats and in God's good time come back to a happy and normal life. But to Mr. Burbank they are neither sinners nor saints by birth, but bundles of palpitating possibilities.

In the speech to which reference has already been made Professor Burbank says:

"Well-grown trees and shrubs and flowers speak of loving care by some one, and they are full of responsiveness, as far as it is in their power, to all the care bestowed upon them. But how much more appreciative is a child? Just watch these sensitive, responsive, quivering creatures of sunshine, showers and tears. In all the world you will never find anything so sensitive to its surroundings.

"These young lives for a few years are at our mercy; then we and all who follow are at theirs. Here, in child and youth life, is the material for building up knowledge, beauty, health and strength, and with them happiness, or to wreck and twist into ugliness and pain that which is now a precious possibility."

The experiments of Dr. Barnardo are based upon science. That the child must be taught in hand, mind and heart is not dogmatic, no more than the experiments of Mr. Burbank are dogmatic. It is the truth, firmly established beyond a doubt.

Breaking a Young Girl of Shuffling Gait by Making Her Walk Over Rungs of Ladder and Lift Her Feet.

DR. THOMAS J. BARNARDO

BY Dr. Barnardo.

WE have been making history very rapidly. First of all, I have to-day nearly 9,000 children in my care, and none of the books published by us are sufficiently up-to-date to tell you that. Of these, over 1,000 are little babies; about 1,400 are cripples or incurables—children refused practically at every other door, whose chances of life or of succeeding in the battle of life are practically nil—they are so heavily handicapped at the start.

We do all we can for these children, and it is surprising what can be done for them, Numbers of them are helped to acquire such modes of industry and employment as enable them to earn their own bread, although the majority must be helpless incurables all their lifetime. For the latter we can only secure a happy childhood.

Our main principle is that no destitute child shall ever be refused admission on any ground whatever; age, sex, creed, color, race, if destitute that child has a claim upon us that is never denied. I have been working for forty years in the slums and during all that time I have never refused a destitute child on any ground. Even when we had no money, which is often the case, it doesn't affect us. I have always said that is not my business. It is the business of the great Christian public to see that our work is not stopped for want of means. My business is to see that no destitute child is refused admission who pleads for it.

Seeking Out the Unfortunate Children.

The unique principle of our work is this—it is only one, but it has not any parallel that I know of in the world—we not only admit all the destitute who come to us, but we seek them out. We are at work in sixteen cities, with expert agents, day and night ceaselessly, and have been so for forty years, searching in the slums and the lowest purlieus of the city, where children would otherwise escape our notice, and we find those who would never apply of themselves. There are vast numbers who would never apply—those in the possession of criminals, profligates, in houses of ill fame; those who with a false love for liberty prefer to sleep in the common lodging houses if they can pick up a trifle by an adventurous life upon the streets.

On an average thirteen permanent admissions are made every day to the homes, or about ninety a week. Last year we admitted 3,827 fresh cases, which is a little lower than our average admission. We maintained during 1904 in the homes 10,905 children; we have admitted up to the last day of July this year 59,200 children—that is to say, that number have been rescued and passed through my hands, and have been trained and placed out in life. A vast number of these go to situations in England, others go to sea, while others are placed or in callings for which they are suitable. In addition we send abroad every year about 1,200—last year we sent 1,206. We have placed out successfully in Canada and our other large colonies up to the end of last month 37,510 children. Of these not 2 per cent have failed. When you remember the class from which they are taken, the degree of misery they have attained is perfectly marvellous. Numbers of them have educated themselves and by their own natural merit have forced themselves to the front. I have two members of Provincial Houses of Parliament, several doctors, many clergymen of all denominations, barristers and solicitors and merchants in various colonies; but of course the vast majority are either agricultural laborers or farmers. The girls have married well—in a great number of instances far beyond their station in life.

I mentioned that we do not reject any children or young people because they happen not to be English. It is not generally known that the United States send us quite a considerable number. Boys come over here in cattle boats, or are stowaways, or even over for sheer adventure, without a prospect of paying their way or maintaining themselves. They find themselves in bad weather upon the streets of London. I have had some very smart American here. One boy started to go round the world with only a dollar in his pocket, and did it. We found him at Liverpool, brought him up here, looked after him for a while and then sent him back. In a few cases we have had the children of Americans who have settled in London, but who did not succeed, and so the children came under my care. These people from the States, of course, lost their foothold and sank down into the morass of the slums. Now, with regard to the spiritual principles underlying our teaching, this has to be remembered—that our whole work is based on the Christian idea of bringing these children to Christ Himself and leading them into Christian ways. We, for example, do not believe in any kind of rescue work whatever which has not for its object the spiritual welfare of the individual. Take a child who has been with either immoral or criminal people. You may train that child in decent habits and keep it for a few years, but the danger is that it will revert to the original type or be dragged back if its former associates get hold of it. The only barrier to that is to infuse the mind and heart with deep, true, personal religion—first of all, a belief in the loving Father, the knowledge of His word daily instilled, then a firm belief in the efficacy of prayer and the need of it. With these three things there comes an uprising of conscience in the individual—that vital perception which is more than perception, that vital perception and controler of life which enables men to see the evil and to avoid it, to see the good and to choose it.

Then, as to our scientific method, there is not much to be said, except this: that we have demonstrated here superiority of environment to heredity. I suppose there has never been such an example in the world as our institution affords of the great fact that heredity is not so invincible a foe to human life as has been thought.

We have proved that if a child who is a son or daughter of criminals or prostitutes, and also the grandson or granddaughter of the same, and of whom we can prove that the great grandfather or great graadmother were of the same class—if that child is taken early enough from its evil environment and planted down in an absolutely new, fresh and Christian environment, and kept in it long enough, the power of heredity appears to be neutralized.

I have had some cases like that who have been damned from their birth, who are now living virtuous, honored and respectable lives, upon whom no breath or shadow of evil has ever fallen. And the same thing is true as regards the degeneration of type from the physical point of view. We have been as a nation almost frightened to death with tales of our physical degeneration, and doctrinizers who have come to me to gain proof of their view have been overwhelmed with evidence to the very reverse. Puny, ill-developed, emaciated children, born in the gloom and shadow of a sunless life, surrounded by filth, vice and every incentive to badness, have come to me, haggard and emaciated, looking like little old men or little old women, while they were still under the school age. These have been taken in hand, and in some cases twelve months, and in other cases two or three years, have sufficed to wipe out all those physical impressions which appear to be ineradicable, and a healthy physical life, joyous childhood, developed in mind and body, has been the result of the special physical training, of the feeding, of the influences, moral and Christian, which have surrounded these children. I have pointed to some of the worst examples that come to me as triumphant proofs that such physical degeneration as has been deplored is not incurable.

Funds for the homes have sometimes been extremely low, but whenever they have been at their worst something unexpected has invariably rescued us.

I could tell many stories of our Heavenly Father's providential care. Here is one:

On one of the worst of the moneyless days, when things were very bad and there was no prospect of them becoming any better, I was informed that "a person" wished to see me. She declined to state her business or leave until she had seen me. So she sat down among messengers, porters, several poor boys making application for admission, and a huge bale of articles being packed to send away. She sat there for some time until I came down to see another caller. I had to pass my pertinacious visitor.

$15,000 from an Unknown Sympathizer.

"You are very hard to approach," said she.

"Not exactly so," I replied; "but I am very, very busy, and unless those who call have some definite business I leave them to my kind helpers."

"But I have some money for you," she went on.

"Thank you," I responded. "Please sit down for a moment and I shall be free."

At length I called my pertinacious friend into an inner office. Tears were rolling down her face as she said:

"I bring you this money because your doors are never closed to any poor child. Go on with your blessed work. Never turn away one destitute child. God will surely help you!"

And, to my astonishment, she placed in my hand a Bank of England note for 1,000 pounds sterling. I fairly gasped for breath, while wonder and gratitude struggled for expression.

"And I rejoice to know," she continued, "that your children are kept free from the workhouse badge of taint and that you seek to bring them up in the fear of the Lord." And then another note for one thousand pounds was placed in my not unwilling hand. My feelings increased to utter bewilderment when my visitor slowly took a third note for a thousand pounds from her bag and placed it with the others.

Declining to give her name or accept any receipt, but assuring me she was familiar with every detail of our work, my visitor, who was deeply moved while bestowing her generous help, turned quickly, and was gone ere I was aware.

And so with many trials and many triumphs the work grew. Bit by bit, as we gained more friends and more supporters, we extended our aims and added home after home until we became the comprehensive organization we are to-day, having some 120 branches all over the kingdom and Canada, and having 8,000 boys and girls under our daily care.

To maintain our 120 odd different institutions, their staff of workers and our 8,000 boy and girl waifs cost a very large sum each year. We need at least 240 pounds sterling a day—that is, 10 pounds per hour—to pay for food alone.

And only 100,000 friends (of whom the greater part are poor and in humble circumstances) out of Great Britain's forty mill-

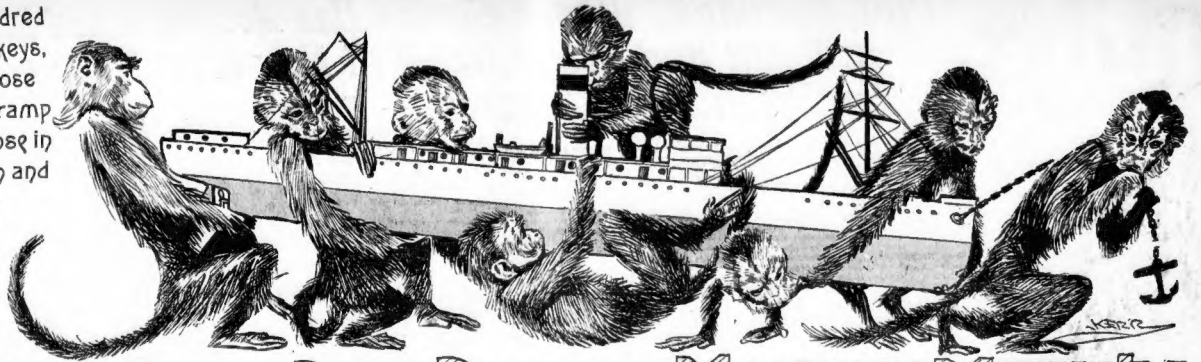
Two Hundred Monkeys, Breaking Loose on the Tramp Ship Montrose in Mid-Ocean and Taking Possession of the Vessel, Inspired this Masterpiece of Nautical Literature.



A CABIN BOY'S DIARY OF A MONKEY MUTINY

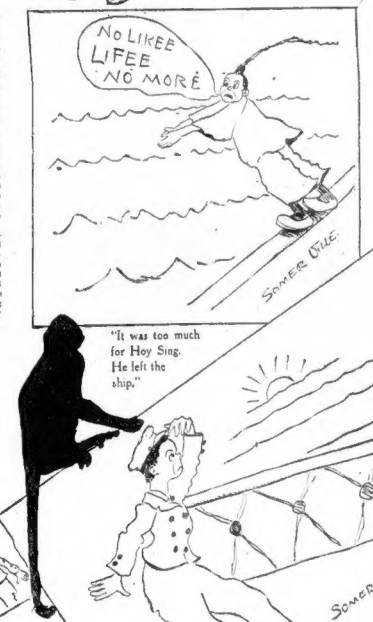
MUTINOUS monkers—a whole cargo of them—made the last voyage of the steam tramp ship Montrose a nightmare to her crew during half the trip from Yokahama to New York. Their malicious pranks daily so preyed on the mind of Hoy Sing, their Chinese keeper, that he threw himself into the sea and was drowned.

When the quarantine doctors boarded the Montrose at the port of New York they thought they were on a floating lunatic asylum. The sailors were half hysterical and the ship practically in charge of two hundred monkeys of all sizes, which had broken out of their cages. They had overrun the rigging, disabled the engines, fooled with the rudder, raided the food supplies, drunk the ship's rum, driven their Chinese keeper to suicide, and moved the bright English cabin boy, Master Georgie Hawkins, to keep a diary of their doings.

That diary probably will pass into maritime history. It is printed here very nearly word for word as the most graphic narrative possible to present of this cruise of a monkey-manned ship.

The Awful History of Monkey Doings That Nearly Wrecked a Ship.

AUG. 10.—This ship ain't no fit place twenty blooming monkeys to a cage. Such for a human being. Monkeys own cages to put in monkers what is devils' this ship. As how everywhere you Such cages! Just made of wicker work— look there is monkeys. There are whole that's all—wicker work to hold monkeys bunches of monkeys squeaking up in the what now the whole ship's crew can't hold. rigging and now it is night and if you go The fastenings of the cages was a shame on deck just so sure as you try to walk and ridiculous. All these was was sticks to the dark a monkey'll jump on your pushed through bamboo loops. It fooled neck and pull your hair and then up the rigging with him, chattering like a fury. Just a little while ago Lon Tom, one of the Chinese sailors, give an awful yell. He was getting into his bunk, being off watch, when a monkey jumped out at him. A monkey stopped the ship early in the evening. He got tangled up in the cuglua.



"It was too much for Hoy Sing. He left the ship."

Marquis ITO, leader of the mutineers, from Georgie's description

Master Georgie Hawkins, author of the diary, looking from the Montrose's deck.

That's one monker less, but it don't do no good, for there is 200 more still all over this ship.

It's getting worse. A monker just jumped down the companionway and tried to snatch this diary out of my hand. He got a fairly good bang on the head for his pains. But a Christmas card that Susan Mapes, of Lancaster, sent me dropped out and the rotten little monkey got that. I used to put it under my pillow when I was younger and soft on Susie, and then I'd dream about it. Of course, I'm almost a man now and no girl gets me foolish any more, but just the same I don't like the idea of that rotten little monkey chewing up Susie's Christmas card.

MacPherson, the engineer, says as how he don't believe with all these monkeys in our hair we are ever going to get into port at all, and I'd better write the awful history full and clear so that when the blooming monkers send us ashore by fooling with the rudder. I'd be all ready to have a true account to put in a bottle and let the world know what has befel us.

Everything would have been all right if it wasn't for Hoy Sing.

There ain't nobody on the ship likes Hoy Sing.

The mep say he ought to be kicked overboard and Mr. Nelson, the second officer, says he ought to be tarred and feather and have vinegar poured in his eyes; but Mr. Harmstrong, the first officer, says as how nobody need worry about Hoy Sing getting what he deserves—just leave it to the monkeys.

Mr. Harmstrong says it is a certain thing that the monkeys had passed a resolution to have Hoy Sing's life. Well, it will serve him right. It is all his fault. He was made keeper of the monkeys when they was brought aboard at Kosahama. They was brought aboard in ten cages—had a big head with a little roof of straight gray hair on top. MacPherson said that to have Marquis Ito watch you with his big eyes made you walk away as though you had done something you hadn't oughter done. I am sure one day when I stood looking at him the old rascal laughed at me. Mr. Harmstrong named him Marquis Ito. He says as how he look the dead spit of Marquis Ito, who is a Japan duke.

Well, I have written awful long. I will write to-morrow just how it is this ship is owned by monkers and all the things they are doing. I am going to sleep with my head all wrapped up down to the cage to have a little fun monkeys and sometimes you could hear the to blankets, so none poking sticks at the monks, and I see monkeys plainer.

It was only yesterday, but it seems like and shut them again a month, that the monkers has owned this one day I went ship. It was a nice day. It was all sunshine on deck. The Chinamen were laying out in the sun singing and smoking and sleeping, and some of them holding up fool-ish little gods what's made of ivory and praying to them. All had gone shipshape and well over the China Sea and the Bay of Bengal, the Arabian Sea and the Gulf of Aden and the Red Sea through which place we had made our way, and we was going slow through the Suez Canal.

Captain Forster and Mr. Harmstrong was walking aft to get-ther, and Mr. Nelson, the second officer, was in charge, when up comes Hoy Sing from the freight deck for'ard. He let us know he was coming. As how neither was he coming alone. He was all over monkers. They was hanging onto his legs and his arms and sitting on his head, and two four monkers was a-shrieking and a-screaming, sailing behind on his blooming pigtail.

And back of him was more monkers — monkers and monkeys and mad monkeys — little monkers the size of fox terriers, and Marquis Ito, the biggest monkey of all. Marquis Ito was leading the pack and he jumps on Hoy Sing and says something to the other monkers, which is orders, and they leaves Hoy Sing alone and entirely to the Marquis Ito. Mr. Nelson tells to the other Chinamen to hurry up and for the Lord's sake get Marquis Ito off of Hoy Sing, because he is killing him. When the other Chinamen goes to take Hoy Sing away from all the other monkeys interfere.

Every Chinaman gets baraded with monkers. You never yeard such creaming and squeaking and yelling, and you never in your life sees such jumping and running and fighting. Sometimes the chinners made more noise than the monkers for a while but Marquis Ito didn't watch Hoy Sing opening and shutting the cages for a whole month for nothing. Hoy Sing, not having no Christian sense and letting Marquis Ito see as plain as your eye just how he pulled out the sticks from the loops. I noticed Marquis Ito. Everybody eyed him because he was the biggest of all the monkers and he Captain Forster takes Hoy Sing by the collar and makes him tell all—how the monkeys came to get out. Hoy Sing he points to the Marquis Ito and weeps and the Marquis Ito shakes his fist and cusses at him some more and shows his teeth wild and fierce. Hoy Sing says he no sooner turned his back after bringing them grub than Marquis Ito works the combination on the cages and slips out the bolt and him and nineteen other monkeys walks out. Hoy Sing, tries to chase them back. But the monkeys chatter at him and jump on him and they bang on his legs and he can't do nothing while Marquis Ito goes down to every one of the cages, making speeches to the other monkers and opening the doors like he had seen Hoy Sing do so often. And all the monkers is out, and all the monkers make for Hoy Sing and Hoy ran for his life.

August 12—Monkeys own this ship. Its worst at night. In the day time they stays up in the rigging mostly, except when two or three sneaks down that you don't see till you see them running up the rigging again with something they have stolen. But it is worst at night.

Used the Cabin Boy for Bait.

Hoy Sing came on deck for a little smoke in the night, thinking maybe the monkers couldn't see him. He was found insensible, and we all thought first that the other Chinamen had murdered him for letting the monkers out, but it was blood. He had been bit by Captain Forster's bottle of Chili sauce, which had broke on his head.

I've got the worst job which a boy ever had, because Captain Forster and Mr. Harmstrong and Mr. Nelson, before they will try and walk across the deck under the monkeys, sends me out kind of like bait so's the monkeys will throw things on me and not on them afterward. I think it is a blooming outrage. I've four knobs on my head which came from canned goods.

August 14—Every night the monkers visits Hoy Sing. No matter how he tries, they finds him. He put a dummy in his bed, but they got hold of him somehow or other trying to sleep under a coil of rope near the donkey engine. There ain't no night they don't bite and scratch Hoy Sing. He says Marquis Ito is a spirit of some ancestor that he didn't pay enough attention to in his prayers, and he says Marquis Ito will haunt him till he dies.

September 10—I haven't been able to tell of the tragedious end of Hoy Sing, because I didn't know where my blooming diary was until MacPherson got hit on the back of the neck with it early this morning.

Hoy Sing is dead. He took his own blooming life—what Marquis Ito and his crew left of it.

On the morning of August 18, in latitude 20 degrees and I don't know what longitude it was, Hoy Sing came on deck and went to the rail. He turned to look at Marquis Ito who has his headquarters on the for-ard mast rigging, up top, and says quite a good many things in Chinese and then Hoy Sing chucks himself over the rail and the waves goes over him and the captain stops the ship and puts out a boat, but Hoy Sing has gone to that place from which no traveller ever returneth. Marquis Ito looked mournful but it wasn't as how he was grieving for having drove Hoy Sing to death in the awful deep, I thinks. It was because Hoy Sing had left the ship.

Monkeys With Fighting "Fags."

September 13—We are all glad we are alive, because the monkeys found a barrel of rum. They stole down in the night and found it under an awning in front of the cook's pantry, and they monkeyed with the spigot until they got it off and the rum spilled all over the deck and the monkeys drank it off the deck. We had got used to the screaming and the shrieking up in the rigging and all over the ship every night, but this was awful the noise they made. And monkeys is like sailors because they get fighting drunk.

September 14—We are nearing port, and we are glad. It is good it didn't happen near land what happened the other night. The monkeys came down and took possession of the man at the wheel and tore and broke the compass and everything and pulled the rudder chains all out of gear, and we were miles out of our course before they got the steering gear fixed up right. Captain Forster has now got a guard around the food every night and all day. He had had them for a week.

September 17—Captain Forster says Thank God, because Marquis Ito fainted and fell off the mast to-day, and we caught him. Where he come to be was so proud he wouldn't eat, but all the other monkers was wailing, and not knowing what to do, and when we carried Marquis Ito back to the cages, them as didn't fall off crawled down and came up to us crying, and we put them back in the cages and cook made a big pot of condensed milk and hot water, and gave them some, and now they are not devils no more. You'd never think they'd done nothin'.

We are near New York. There ain't no monkers frowse in this part of America, and I am glad of it. A sailor's life is a hard one. When we get into port I will have to try and match the Christmas card that Susie sent me, which has been eat, because Susie will be sure to ask for to see it when I get home.

For the Autumn Bride

By Mrs. Osborn,

Creator of Fashions for the Fashionable Women of America.

Satin the Proper Thing for the Wedding Gown of the Autumn Bride.

Necks of Wedding Gowns Made a Trifle Open in the Front.

The bride's trousseau is quite a different matter now from what it was some twenty years ago, when, in this country, many a bride of highest social standing could get all of her trousseau into the saddlebags beneath the pillion upon which she sat as she started for her new home upon horseback, sitting upon her husband's horse and beginning her new life by literally clinging to him for support.

A contrast to this picture is afforded by a recent elderly husband, who started upon his honeymoon with a young and handsome bride.

"I have had," said he, "to pay excess baggage rates upon twenty-two trunks."

He wasn't complaining. No doubt he was pleased that his fair bride did not bring anything like all of her trousseau upon that trip.

The bride's trousseau does not now consist of such a great number of gowns, but it includes a wonderful and complex variety of other garments and their accessories, which make up a sum total exceeding that afforded a few years ago by a bridal trousseau in which the bride thought it correct to provide a quantity of gowns that seemed to indicate that she did not expect her husband to be able to add to her wardrobe for some time to come.

This attitude was considered correct until quite recently, when the bride realized the folly of buying a lot of gowns that would go out of style before she had a chance to wear them. The sensible woman now gets only enough gowns to last a season—and that includes quite a number, for there are so many functions given in her honor and she likes to look particularly attractive wherever she goes.

The new wedding gowns are made of satin, as a rule, for satin possesses the traditional sentiment attached to a wedding gown. The modern bride, however, instead of having a gown made which will, after the ceremony, be folded away and looked at tenderly, or sadly—as the case may be—in after years, has one built for practical purpose.

Its bodice is so cut that by a slight alteration it becomes a smart dinner gown. The train is reduced in length and the dress worn out during the season. With the alteration of bodice and train and the removal of orange blossoms and addition of roses in their place, the wedding gown becomes unrecognizable as such. The practical bride may, if she likes color, have pale pompadour effects appliqued upon her gown afterward to carry out the fad of this season for pompadoured satin in evening gowns.

Short skirts, which are so sensible for all outdoor purposes, are being replaced abroad by long skirts so that the bride will, perhaps, have few, if any, in her trousseau. I would advise that all gowns for street wear be made short, especially those intended for walking purposes in the morning, but as a general thing gowns are made long all around, with a modified train upon afternoon and house gowns, which become longer in dresses intended for evening wear.

The circular skirt is cut so on the bias that it can never be made to hang evenly all around to short lengths unless one constantly takes up the hem upon the sides. As a consequence most women wear this style of skirt so long that its stretching and sagging merely becomes graceful instead of slovenly.

The wedding gown shown in figure A is popular for this Autumn, although women with perfect figures will be apt to wear a princess robe, and women who like extreme styles will, perhaps, select a quaint Empire gown.

The gown illustrated is both practical and smart. It has a Louis XVI. bodice draped over a closely fitted lining, with a high bust effect and somewhat deep curve over the belt of the skirt in front. A drapery of lace, in a double flounce is put around the neck of the bodice, coming down the front in surplice style and leaving the neck open in a small point.

To one side of the front the lace surplice is caught up by a spray of orange blossoms and from here a fall of lace hangs to the skirt, where it appears a continuation of a lace ruffle which outlines each side of the front panel of the skirt.

The small sleeves are slightly puffed at the top and lace motifs are let in the fitted lower portion. This terminates just below the elbow in a frill of lace.

The gown is made with a very long train built upon a foamy foundation skirt which clings at the top and is a billow of lace and fluffiness at the bottom. The satin hangs in long glistening folds, unrelieved by any trimming except around the bottom of the skirt, where a deep flounce of diaphanous lace is caught up in scallops by means of clusters of orange blossoms.

The front of the gown consists of a panel richly embroidered in orange blossoms and outlined by a fall of lace. This is quite narrow at the top, but increases in width toward the bottom, turning back into the lace flounce which trims the train.

The bride's veil is cut so as to be small at the head and to fall in graceful folds. On the coiffure it is gracefully caught up by orange blossoms and the border of the veil is edged with narrow lace. The veil of white tulle is still the favorite and it is within the means of all classes of brides.

To accommodate the fashion of the day the bride's white satin slippers and silken hose are both embroidered in orange blossoms, and these dainty symbolic flowers furnish the decorative scheme for all the embroidery upon the underwear worn with the wedding gown.

The bride's sleeves are of the three-quarter length so that her gloves are long and she carries the regulation shower bouquet which, up to this time, seems to be the favorite bride's bouquet. White orchids, mingled with lilies-of-the-valley, are smart flowers for this bouquet, but white roses are also worn.

A pretty feature in a smart bridesmaid's costume is the pillow muff of white down on old maidenly forms mounted upon chiffon or velvet. These floral muffs—which may be of any color, with ferns—are newer and smarter than the usual bouquet carried by the bridesmaid.

The material of the going-away gown depends upon the direction of the wedding journey. Cloth, henrietta and ponge silks of different weights are all good materials of which to make the going-away gown, and there is quite a fancy for ponges, which comes in lovely colors and qualities.

The gown illustration in figure B is made of heavy ponge in any of the smart colors becoming to the bride—such as blue, dark green, plum or garnet. Natural ponge color, too, is smart. If made of cloth or henrietta, the short Eton jacket shown in figure B will make a good substitute for the long, loose wrap shown with the suit.

The skirt is a full, plain circular. If trimming is desired, it may be put on in a shaped fold, trimmed with straps and buttons at the bottom, or by bias folds in parallel rows.

The coat is loosely fitted to the figure, following its lines more closely in the back than in front.

A coat of this style is very useful in traveling, but where one fancies a short coat the one in figure E is a good style. The collar may be faced with a different material but, except for the trimming on the sleeve, the little garment is severely plain. It just reaches to the top of the belt and shows at the neck—as does the loose coat—something of the lace chemisette in the gown. The lace on the front of the loose coat may be of velvet, taffeta or ponge.

The afternoon gown illustrated in figure C is a simple, practical afternoon gown, and is made so that the bolero which forms a part of it will give a good effect no matter how thin the figure of the wearer may be.

The gown is fitted by means of pleats, stitched invisibly from bust to hip and becoming narrow and tapering at the waist line. The release of three pleats at the hip makes the skirt of the gown very full. As will be seen, it is long all around, with a slight trail in the back.

The gown shown in figure D might be made of any of the pompadoured foulards and chiffon satins now in vogue, or of thin silk, or crepe.

WOMAN AND THE BATH.

"Bathing parties are given."

By Rene Bache

THERE is not the slightest exaggeration of fact in saying that the fashionable woman of to-day considers it of more importance to be well-groomed than to be beautiful. True, she is quite as anxious as any female of our species ever was to enhance her outward charms, but even more indispensable is it, as a means of obtaining the admiration she craves, that her person shall exhibit in every detail of physique and toilet the niceness and perfection—how impossible, indeed, does it seem to find terms of adequate definition—which satisfy the eye and defy the scrutiny of the most critical observer.

In the tout ensemble which she presents to a critical world the fashionable woman of the twentieth century must be, above and beyond all things, "smart." If she cannot be that, she might almost as well be nothing at all. To be smart, without being in the least beautiful, is entirely possible—many a woman has solved that problem—but to achieve this distinction without being well groomed is practically out of the question.

And this remark is applicable to the loveliest, as well as to the ugliest, of her sex.

Hence it is that the "modish" woman—the adjective hardly deserves polite acceptance—is anxious first of all to be well groomed. After that she seeks to be merely beautiful. The latter aim, indeed, she can afford to subordinate to the former, inasmuch as the one contributes most importantly to the other. But it is an old story that beauty is not to be achieved without trouble—not, in fact, without suffering, always—and it is a circumstance in point that many a jolie femme in these modern days devotes at least half of one day in every week to a bath!

Of course, my lady fair takes a bath in a tub every morning of her life. But that is different. So far as it goes it is a means of beauty, but if she would utilize bathing in a systematic and scientific way for the cultivation and promotion of loveliness, she must patronize the fashionable and completely equipped Hammam, where everything that is up to date in ablution, with incidental treatments of all sorts for health and prettiness, is procurable. In New York there is such an establishment, exclusively for women, not far from the Windsor Arcade, and similar resorts for beauty-making—proprietary bath from which men are altogether excluded—are to be found in other large cities.

There are a good many women in New York who make a regular business of spending half of one day in every week at such a beauty factory, and to undergo the complete course of treatment on each occasion may require as much as seven hours. The hair, it must be remembered, has to be dressed, after the ablutions, etc., are finished, and the fair bather, under such circumstances, not infrequently elects to partake of a dainty luncheon before she departs.

A small, but well-equipped cuisine, indeed, is an indispensable attachment to a "bath parlor" of this kind. Thus it is made practicable to give what are known nowadays as "bath parties"—that is to say, "treats" of an abstinency description, in which one woman plays the hostess, taking four or five friends with her. It is a morning, they eat lunch together for a while, wrapped in blankets, if late in the day, they have tea or supper.

To promote health, to improve the complexion, and to retard the progress of that inexorable enemy, age—these are the three main objects for which the fashionable woman goes to the baths. She may be on an errand for the cure of which special treatment is given at the Hammam. Sometimes she is sent thither by her physician; but a properly equipped establishment of the sort has a capable medical adviser on the premises, who offers judicious suggestions.

"Hair is dressed at the bath."

The first operation to which my lady fair is obliged to submit on going to the baths is the taking of her weight and a series of careful measurements for a record. She is then ushered into an attractive dressing room to undress, and when she is ready is escorted by a maid into the first hot room. After passing through the steam room and plunge, with incidental lounging in steamer chairs, accompanied by hot lemonade and the reading of the latest periodicals, she is put into the "pack," as it is technically called—in other words, wrapped in hot blankets and laid upon a couch.

All of this, so far, is commonplace and familiar enough. What follows, however, is more new and interesting. After being scrubbed and kneaded in the customary way, the fair patient is rubbed with salt to stimulate the circulation of her blood—a most wholesome and invigorating performance. It is a very coarse and cheap kind of salt that is used, and the masseuse applies it as vigorously as possible all over the body. Then the beauty seeker, when she has been parayed with hot and cold water, is dried off with towels and placed upon a cot bed in her dressing room, where she is rubbed with alcohol heavily charged with essential oil of violet or of rose.

Incidental to the performance above described, if she has flesh that she wishes to get rid of she is subjected to a rather odd and peculiar treatment, a stream of water as hot as she can bear it being thrown at to the body of the patient through the nozzle of the masseuse. While extremely painful and refreshing, it is said to relax nerve tension stimulate the circulation, incidentally taking out of the face (when applied to the features) the lines of care and worry. Even the contour of the face is changed by it, so they say, and by local stimulation it builds up tissue where the latter is wanted, while, on the other hand, it will get rid of a double chin or other such superfluity of plumpness.

A part of the treatment at the up-to-date bathe for women is in the line of physical culture, for the development of the chest, and to give the erect carriage and poise. It is important that a woman, if she would have a "smart" appearance, should walk well and be "well set up."

"The hostess will wear a white dress literally covered with glass beads."

Another idea, however, which is not "difficult," is to write the words on a plain card in this mucilage and sprinkle them immediately with fine diamond dust. The entire house should be made as glassy as possible. Mirrors should be hung everywhere, and only glass vases and bowls used for the flowers, and glass beads be made into lamp and candle shades.

The hostess will wear a white dress literally covered with glass beads, with a tiara and chain as well as bracelets of glass beads. Just to be ridiculous, she might imitate the Eskimo women of Alaska and hang a girdle of tiny glass bottles around her supple waist.

The lings lord may be persuaded to adorn his shirt front with a few glass diamonds, and he may not. But at least he will not refuse to stand under a marriage bell made of strings and strings of transparent glass beads, or if he should happen to own a glass factory, or if he be a friend who does, he may succeed in getting a real glass veil for his fifteen-year-old bride.

As usual, however, the dining room table will be the pivot of attraction, and to matter what we do elsewhere in our efforts toward correct decoration, this should receive the most consideration and attention. Of course there must be a damask cloth as white as the driven snow, and then a huge piece of white glass for a centre piece, and to this, if this be an impossibility, we will use a very large mirror.

We will line our plate glass, if we have it, with pink or scarlet silk, and we will edge it with a border of flowers to match. We will then fill a big glass bowl with the same flowers to put in the middle, and we will surround our mirror or glass with glass candlesticks topped with glass, bead-edged shades. Between and around we will put glass bonbon dishes, with glass beads to match, and if these be compote dishes with stands as well as bowls the standards with rock candy stuck on with corn syrup.

When making the shades for the candles we should write the dates of the two wedding celebrations on them in mucilage, and sprinkle them with diamond dust. A monogram of host and hostess, together with the dates, could be put on each end of the tablecloth by the same method. These, however, should be well up on the cloth, between the centrepiece and the covers.

For name cards for this occasion we will have small round mirrors—they cost but a few cents each—and we will edge them with diamond dust. The name can be written on with a fine brush in red paint.

We will use glass plates for the food to be eaten from and we will drink our coffee from small glass mugs. We will not have a thing on our table but glass, with the exception of knives, forks and spoons. We may be able to secure glass spoons — we will at least for the bonbons, because I have seen them.

"We may expect all kinds of beautiful glass."

"We will drink our coffee from small glass mugs."

The 15th Wedding Anniversary.

By Mrs. Linda Hull Larned, Author of "The Hostess of To-day."

UP to this time many of the wedding celebrations have been amusing—some of them useful and others absurd and jolly—but none of them have as yet been artistically pretty. There was no opportunity for the things that mark these celebrations up to the fifteenth year, with the exception perhaps of the twelfth year—china—are of uncompromising unpretiness. But the fifteenth year, belonging in honor of so beautiful a material as crystal, should be marked by an entertainment more pretentious than any that have been given heretofore.

For this elaborate affair we must have music, not a song or two, or a painful piano solo to sit through, or talk through, as seems to be the custom, but inspiring, gay, rollicking music to dance by after the supper, or dinner, or high tea, or whatever the refreshments may be.

A stringed orchestra, together with the piano, or if this be out of the question, compromise on a harp and fiddlers three, and put them, if you like, behind a screen or green vines alternating with strings of bright colored and white glass beads.

But let us invite the guests first before we set them to dancing. If we are very rich we will have our invitations engraved on small oblong squares of cut glass and send them by messenger to the favored few, but I fear those who read these columns are not of that class. Years ago all just ordinarily well-to-do, perhaps, so we will makeshift with pieces of blisgass or even transparent semi-glassy looking cello-fold. And I will do no more than to use either, we will simply send the usual kind, the date alone marking the special significance of the day. Another idea, however, which is not "difficult," is to write the words on a plain card in this mucilage and sprinkle them immediately with fine diamond dust. The entire house should be made as glassy as possible. Mirrors should be hung everywhere, and only glass vases and bowls used for the flowers, and glass beads be made into lamp and candle shades.

The hostess will wear a white dress literally covered with glass beads, with a tiara and chain as well as bracelets of glass beads. Just to be ridiculous, she might imitate the Eskimo women of Alaska and hang a girdle of tiny glass bottles around her supple waist.

The lings lord may be persuaded to adorn his shirt front with a few glass diamonds, and he may not. But at least he will not refuse to stand under a marriage bell made of strings and strings of transparent glass beads, or if he should happen to own a glass factory, or if he be a friend who does, he may succeed in getting a real glass veil for his fifteen-year-old bride.

As usual, however, the dining room table will be the pivot of attraction, and to matter what we do elsewhere in our efforts toward correct decoration, this should receive the most consideration and attention. Of course there must be a damask cloth as white as the driven snow, and then a huge piece of white glass for a centre piece, and to this, if this be an impossibility, we will use a very large mirror.

We will line our plate glass, if we have it, with pink or scarlet silk, and we will edge it with a border of flowers to match. We will then fill a big glass bowl with the same flowers to put in the middle, and we will surround our mirror or glass with glass candlesticks topped with glass, bead-edged shades. Between and around we will put glass bonbon dishes, with glass beads to match, and if these be compote dishes with standards as well as bowls the standards with rock candy stuck on with corn syrup.

When making the shades for the candles we should write the dates of the two wedding celebrations on them in mucilage,

We will have a delicious menu all served in glass dishes and the sugar for the coffee must be of rock candy, and all the coffee must be of rock crystal if we can get them.

Now for the presents that our friends will give us. We may expect all kinds of beautiful glass, from Venetian, Bohemian, Austrian, as well as some of American make. There may be among them some choice pieces of Tiffany's favrile glass that make such exquisitely artistic vases and bowls for flowers and lamps. And we may expect ink stands and all sorts of glass things for our writing desk, and some beautiful bottles for our dressing table, besides the many, many lovely things for our table setting, and their name is legion. If any one chooses to give us a choice piece of rock crystal we will cherish it as one of the gems in our collection of bric-a-brac, and if some other elects to give us a dozen Colonial or gilt jewelled glass goblets we will be equally as grateful and pleased.

Our couple have been married long enough to begin to have friends who will toast them. One to the hostess, who, by being able to encompass after fifteen years of married life with a delightful entertainment to round up the circle of successful management, would be:

"Here's to the maiden of bashful fifteen,
Now happy in wedlock's delights;
But here's to the hostess who's twenty times fifteen,
Her husband's the happiest wights."

Honeymoon Hints for Young Brides

BY AN OBSERVING GRANDMOTHER.

IT is during the earliest days of the honeymoon that many young wives make mistakes, the consequences of which are likely to affect their whole married life.

Early impressions count for a great deal, and the woman who has just secured the man of her choice should carefully guard against representing herself in a doubtful light, either from exuberance of spirits or from the feeling that "nothing matters now we are married."

To the newly made bride I would say: Do not presume upon your new honors to constitute yourself your husband's teacher, or rather keeper. Often, in a mistaken sense of her fresh responsibilities, a wife is apt to assume on the honeymoon a playfully dictatorial demeanor toward her lord. At the boarding house where they are spending their first holiday together she consumes the quiet and disgusts the female residents by her attitude toward George at meal time.

"No, dear. You mustn't touch those pickles. You know pickles are not good for you." And poor George sees the coveted condiment placed beyond his reach as if he were a naughty little boy. "No, George. I cannot allow you to smoke any more this morning. That is the second pipe you have had since breakfast."

The unfortunate man's smoking materials are playfully annexed by his better half beneath the scarcely amused glances of a dozen onlookers. Perhaps in an ill-judged moment he asserts his right to choose and think for himself. There is a scene, and their first quarrel, when George, penitent, but sore, gives in. But if his wife has scored on this occasion, George is already dimly realizing the meaning of the term "henpecked."

Don't indulge in semi-public banter and badinage with your husband. I was recently visiting at a house where a newly wedded couple were staying. The man was good and reserved, his wife was of quite the opposite temperament, and in his attitude I could detect the dawn of impressions concerning his wife for which she will some day be sorry.

Her idea of amusing him was to perpetually pester him with frivolous banter, provoking elaborate answers to the most trivial observations, and generally, with gaddy-like persistence, keeping him on the move, under which treatment he was obviously ill at ease, and to which fact she was sublimely unconscious. On the day I left she was chaffing her young husband will about his wife's society.

Don't, when he evinces a desire to loaf quietly about the house on some hot afternoon, show your independence by marching off for an excursion in company of some one else. Few things disillusion a man more than the discovery that the girl whom he likes to regard as a tender, clinging plant, is able and willing to seek her amusement in her own society than his own. It destroys one of the most cherished illusions he possesses, and he is not inapt to realize in a very short time a sensation of pain and a feeling of neglect to the thoughtless wife even before the honeymoon has waned.

Don't expect him to be lavish of his affections in society. "George is so nice and kind to me when we are alone, my dear bride, "but when we are with other people, he treats me as if I were his maiden aunt."

She cannot see, silly woman, that she has married an average man, who detests making an exhibition of himself, even to gratify the only woman he loves. And by the same token, she should avoid imitating the German manner in this respect, for, much as the average American objects to playing the lover before an audience, he detests infinitely more to be fondled and called endearing names under the same conditions.

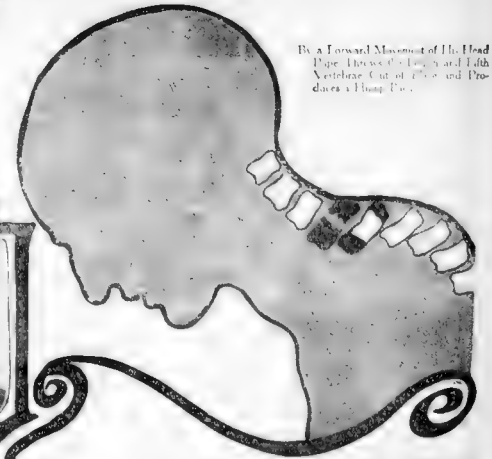
HOW I ROBBED THE STREET CAR COMPANIES WITH MY BROKEN NECK.

By Throwing His Head Back Pape Distorts the Muscles in a Line from the Fourth Vertebra, Making Them Stand Out Like Great Ropes.

By a Forward Movement of His Head Pape Throws the Fourth and Fifth Vertebrae Out of Place and Produces a Hump Back.



PEDGE'S GALLERY PHOTOGRAPHS OF EDWARD L. PAPE WITH AND WITHOUT HIS WIG.

The Astonishing Confession of Edward Pape, Who Made a Living by Tumbling Off Street Cars and Then Fooling the Doctors and Claim Agents Over and Over Again.

HOW an acrobat with a genuine broken neck made a living by tumbling from street cars and fooling the claim agents, doctors and everybody is told in the remarkable confession just signed by Edward L. Pape, in Philadelphia.

Pape, the star performer of the gang which travelled from city to city making a living from the electric car companies, had been a high diver and city marshal. He broke his neck at Coney Island and, though it healed, was in a helpless condition that he was able to make the surgeons think it a new break whenever he pleased. Under these conditions claim agents were glad to settle and doctors reported pleonomical cures of broken necks.

William Leach, one of Pape's pupils, was also an excellent performer. Having no broken neck to exhibit, he found it necessary to "get hurt" in a more orthodox way than did Pape, who merely fell off.

Doran was known in the circus as the human rubber ball because he could roll over and over or turn handsprings with lightning rapidity.

Doran's trick was to deliberately allow himself to be struck by the front of a car. He would lean his left shoulder against the dashboard and grasp the fender with his right hand. With the momentum thus given him he would roll with astonishing speed in front of the wheels of the trolley until the car stopped.

Inga Hanson, alias Jennie Freeman, holds the record for women who have made money out of the street car companies. A Chicago jury has just found her guilty of perjury in swearing to have been rendered deaf, dumb and paralyzed through being knocked down and dragged by a trolley car. All through the trial of her damage suit she was wheeled into court and pretended to be unable to speak, hear or move.

HOW I FOOLED THE SURGEONS AND TROLLEY COMPANIES WITH MY BROKEN NECK.

By Edward L. Pape.

I AM by profession a high diver and circus performer, but have also worked as a photographer, fresco painter and scenic artist, as a bookkeeper I have made my living, and I have done something in the literary way. "The Convict's Christmas Eve" was written by me while in Elmira Reformatory.

But of all ways of making a living I found tumbling off trolley cars and pretending to break my neck the easiest and most interesting.

The trolley companies and the hospitals taught me how to fool them without making it necessary for me to think it out at all.

I used to dive into six feet of water from a height of forty feet, and sometimes more, for an exhibition at Coney Island. One day I got careless and waved my hand to a girl in the crowd just as I was taking the plunge. I didn't get started right and struck the side of the tank, breaking my neck.

I woke up in the hospital, where they had my feet tied to the foot of the bed and a rope around my neck, tied over a roller to a 75 pound weight. This was to keep my head from falling down my back, as it would have if they hadn't pulled it out in this way.

I lay there for weeks, learning all about broken necks and not expecting to lose. Finally the bones in my neck grew together. I think they called them the fourth and fifth vertebrae, and I was told that I was a wonder and was liable to recover still my neck wasn't quite the same. It was crooked and there was a bump on the back and the muscles stuck out in knots. After experimenting a little I found I could distort the vertebrae in the same thing that made the neck look broken.

I never thought of getting money out of this trick of mine. I knew that I had a good thing and I was glad to get out of a Brooklyn car.

There were about ten of us getting back to Coney Island on the elevated road. We were all on, and as I was one of the last and the car was crowded, I missed my footing and was dragged a block, hanging on by my hands to the running board. Just before the car came to a stop I let go and dropped to the road, bumping my head on hard that I did not come to my senses until they had me in a bed in the hospital.

My feet were tied and there was a weight pulling on my head.

I supposed my neck was broken again, and after thinking it over a while decided it wasn't worth while to live through all the misery of having my neck set. So, after the nurses and doctors were gone that night I reached down and pulled the weight into bed with me, thinking that taking the pull from my head would kill me. To my surprise I felt relieved and discovered that my neck was all right and that the doctors had been fooled by the old break. I slept comfortably that night and in the morning replaced the weight in position, thinking that I would not say anything till the doctor made his rounds. While I was thinking what fun I would have with the doctor, a claim adjuster from the trolley company sent in his card. I thought I would give him a nice scare, and told the nurse to let him in.

Tumbled from Coney Island Car

When the man saw my head in the harness he began to get busy, and almost forced me to accept a hundred dollars and sign a paper. He looked relieved when I signed, and we parted, each thinking what a sucker the other was.

I soon spent the $100 and was broke. Every time a trolley passed me I thought to myself "easy money," and soon made up my mind to take another turn.

A New York lawyer named W. M. Fink told me that there were lots of people living on what they could make from the car companies. He gave me legal advice and agreed to represent me for half of any thing I might get.

The Coney Island and Brooklyn Railway Company is a nice, easy corporation, as I knew, "you might take a tumble from one of their cars." I went down to the Island one afternoon and looked around the ambulance. I found a fellow named George Heyman, who needed the money, and offered him five dollars to be a witness for me.

The Peculiar Injuries to Pape's Neck, Which Have Enabled Him to Mulct Railroad and Trolley Companies Out of Thousands of Dollars.

Heyman jumped at the chance, and we took the 10:30 p. m. car. We both stood on the running board, near the rear end, and when this car reached the corner of Bergen street and Franklin avenue, Brooklyn, I threw myself from the car into the street while the car was in motion. I did not hold onto the car, I simply made a clean fall. Heyman hallooed at the conductor and the car went a short distance and then stopped. I was picked up by George Heyman and carried over to the pavement, where I was laid down and remained in this position until the ambulance arrived from St. John's Hospital.

I instructed George Heyman before the accident occurred that he should notify Mr. Fink, and I gave him his office address. Mr. Fink called at the hospital on the following day to see me and informed me that he had already notified the Coney Island and Brooklyn Railway Company. I gave my name at the hospital as Edward Gorman. I was confined in the hospital for a period of three days. I claimed that I had been broken my neck [illegible] fainting [illegible] a claim agent from the railway company called at the hospital to see me and I [illegible] that claim against the company for $10[illegible]. About an hour after Mr. Fink [illegible] at the hospital.

Among one month after I had the cast removed from the car at the corner of Bergen street and Franklin avenue. I went at Mr. Fink's office in Brooklyn, and he [illegible] received $25 for his services. I [illegible] gen street and Brooklyn Heights [illegible] presented by Mr. Fink's office. Mr. Fink said [illegible] did, do you want to make some money. I [illegible] town in Coney Island?" He got [illegible] know Hershey? There is a [illegible] piece of Rockaway, owning to the [illegible] pavilion and in the center [illegible] work there is a pool which [illegible] about 18 inches, and if one was [illegible] fall over that pool they [illegible] man, meaning the man who had received the $5 in the Bergen street and Franklin avenue deal, and myself will be present.

I agreed to go into this deal with Mr. Fink, and to set up this job in Coney Island, and I left Mr. Fink's office about half past twelve, noon, in company with him, his brother, and the man who had received the $5, and after having lunch we boarded the car for Coney Island. On reaching Coney Island we all went to lunch. After a lot of waiting around Fink said that the doctor had got used [illegible] and was about [illegible] done. Fink said he knew a nice cool hole in front [illegible] Jack. But I like the cars better than falling down holes and jumping over gates, and told Fink I was going to tumble off a car that night.

Forms Syndicate of Tumblers

I met Joseph Burns in Little [illegible] and told him that I was going to [illegible] did it. Burns was keen to get [illegible] and we had a [illegible] the evening.

He placed me at [illegible] Although the idea, but wanted to get hurt, [illegible] he could make [illegible] lars. I told him to wait until after my case was settled.

We then walked over to Third avenue and Thirteenth street, and when this north bound Third avenue car [illegible] the south side of Thirteenth street. Make board the car. I ran after the car two or three steps after the car had started and grabbed hold of the hand rail. I allowed myself to fall [illegible] street, but still hung onto the hand rail and was dragged from [illegible] to Fifteenth street. Just before the car reached the south crossing of Fifteenth street I let go the hand rail, while the car was in motion, and fell into the street. I was picked up by Mike and some passengers and was carried over to the pavement, where I was laid down, and waited for an ambulance to take the Bellevue Hospital to arrive. On the following day the New York Hospital report showed that I had sustained a broken [illegible].

I remained in the hospital about five days, [illegible] and all the time that my neck hurt me. I made the doctors cut my clothes from me because it was part of the game to pretend that I was in such bad shape that the removal of my clothes caused unbearable pain.

That's where I made a mistake. Fink failed to get me the new clothes he had promised, and I had to walk out of the hospital in the chopped fragments of what I had worn in.

I had it all fixed to settle with the Metropolitan Street Railway for $900, when somebody tipped them off that it was a crooked job and I didn't dare come around after my money.

Burns introduced me to John Willmott, who he said would make a good third man for us.

We then formed a syndicate and agreed to take turns tumbling from the cars and to divide the proceeds equally.

We started for Philadelphia [illegible] as a base of operations hired a room at No. 153 North Eleventh street in that city.

Before leaving New York I gave an exhibition to show my partners how to do the trick. I allowed myself to be dragged a block or two on a car, and told the conductor to [illegible] that it was all right. It created a [illegible] and a woman on the [illegible].

We reached Philadelphia we had [illegible] to the next tumble [illegible] we went into a cafe and I [illegible] Burns and a dark [illegible] that whoever had the [illegible] should on front of him would [illegible].

Then Burns and started [illegible] on the corner of Second and Market streets. I jumped on a car, [illegible] and then Burns. And [illegible] on the car he at [illegible] and if it was early and [illegible] "I hurt my [illegible] shins on, let's get off." We spent the rest of the day looking the town over for a better place to pull off the trick, but didn't find any. Next day I had chills and fever.

So I decided I might as well go to the hospital anyway, even if it wasn't my turn. We three waited at the post office corner until a west bound Market street car [illegible] reached the west bound of Ninth and Market streets. Joe Burns and John Willmott then walked over and boarded the car while the car was standing still, and I stood right alongside of the car and waited until the car started, and when it did I took hold of the hand rail and made a jump for the footboard. I allowed my feet to slip from [illegible] and let my body drop down [illegible] the street and was dragged along by the car in this position for a distance of about ten feet. I then let go and fell into the street. I was picked up by John Willmott [illegible] and carried by hand [illegible] I remained in this [illegible] ambulance from the Jefferson Hospital arrived, when I was placed in the ambulance and taken to the hospital. [illegible] the hospital with me. I gave my name at the hospital as [illegible] Nelson. I [illegible] the doctors at this hospital to shave the hair from my [illegible] I [illegible] a rubber bandage, with weights at the end, to hold my neck straight. I remained in this condition with these weights on my neck for a period of [illegible].

[illegible] company for the [illegible] and then we started for Buffalo [illegible] same act. We changed our names and took lodgings at the Lenox Hotel, Franklin street. Burns made a [illegible] on the corner of Mohawk and Main streets he allowed a car to [illegible] and then let go [illegible] and walked off without saying anything to the [illegible].

Caught in Philadelphia.

Then Willmott said he would take a try at it. We boarded a car in front of Ashland Park, and after it had gone a block or two, Burns had a fight with me while it was in motion. The car stopped up for us, and when the car started off again, John Willmott grabbed the hand rail and allowed his body to fall [illegible] the street. He was dragged [illegible] about twenty feet, he then let go of the hand rail and fell into the street. Joseph Burns and I began to bellow to attract the attention of the conductor, and the car was about ten feet [illegible] before it stopped. The conductor came back to take Willmott's name, and I gave the conductor the name of Ed Forbes. Joseph Burns and myself then picked John Willmott up and carried him to the pavement and waited for an ambulance from the Sisters' Hospital, and when the ambulance arrived we put [illegible] and I [illegible] said we would [illegible] him to the hospital. We put him in a private room.

Willmott played the part in the hospital [illegible] and engaged [illegible] to [illegible] the case in the hands of a lawyer, who began suit for $1,000.

We then went to Cleveland and elsewhere and continued the same methods with returns until the rest of August, when detectives of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company arrested us.

DIRECTIONS.

Cut out and fold upward the sections A and the profiles of the woman and horns of the moon on the dotted lines. Fold at the point of contact and paste the sections B together as far as the dotted lines. Do the same to the sections X. Paste the woman's profile together, and paste together the sections A. Cut away the letters and dry thoroughly. Hold together the man in the moon. Turn over and you will see the woman in the moon. Turn over again and see the man in the moon smile.

SUNDAY AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER PATTERNS.

THE designs for two very pretty coats, to meet the requirements of late Fall and early Winter, are shown herewith. For several reasons they will appeal to the home dressmaker as being among the most interesting of all the fashion designs shown since the advent of Fall. The patterns for both these coats, together with full directions for making them yourself at home, are offered to-day for ten cents each. To obtain them it is simply necessary to fill in the proper blank for each pattern required and mail with ten cents in money or stamps to "Fall Coat Patterns," P. O. Box 260, New York City. The patterns ordered will be forwarded to you postpaid by return of mail.

While the model for the ladies' coat, No. 191—2947, is unpretentious as to trimming, easy to make, the very severity of its lines and the trig, jaunty air stamp it as being distinctly smart and chic. The pattern has been cut in six sizes, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. For a medium size 3¾ yards of material will be required.

Mistress Fashion is providing quite as pretty coats for little girls this season as for their mothers and grown-up sisters. The loose box coat design shown is one of the newest and prettiest. The coat (No. 192—2906) is very simply made, having but two seams, its modishness lying entirely in the cut. For a medium size 2¾ yards of 44 inch material are required. Pattern No. 192—2906 is in five sizes, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years.

Be sure when ordering to give the size of pattern desired, as orders for patterns for any sizes other than those given above cannot be filled.

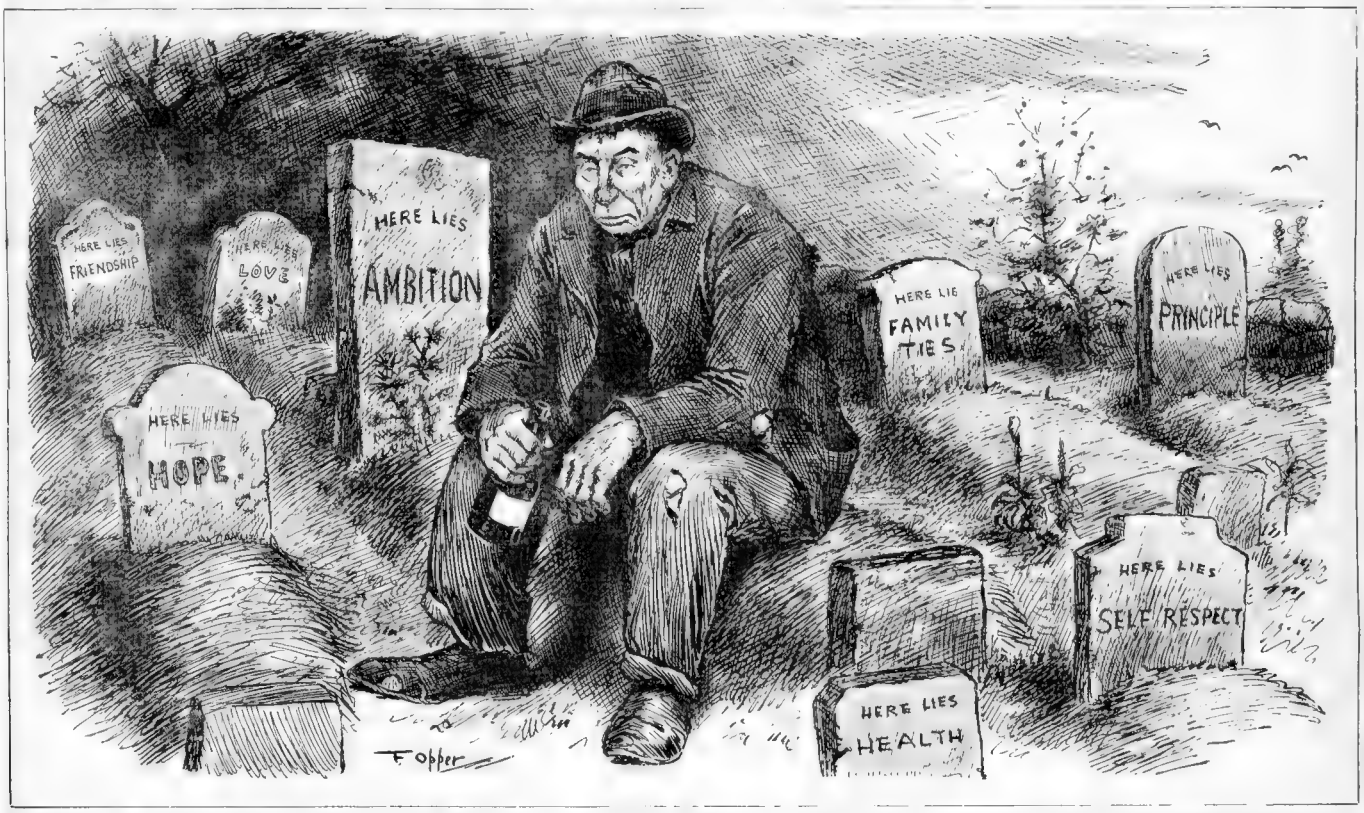
BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1905.

THE WORLD'S BIGGEST GRAVEYARD.



Millions of Men Have Sat Where This Man Sits. The Graves Have All Been Dug by the Same Old Grave-Digger---DRINK.

MANY weeks have gone by since this Sunday newspaper has discussed with its friends the harm done in this world by excessive drink. Our neglect to continue discussion along this line has been, we fear, a neglect of duty.

Once more we take up the subject that is THE MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL to millions of human beings.

And we urge you to use this picture and this editorial, AND YOUR OWN STRONGER PERSONAL ARGUMENTS, WITH YOUNG MEN THAT MAY BE IN DANGER, WITH OLDER MEN AND WOMEN THAT NEED TO BE HELPED TO FIGHT THE GREATEST CURSE.

This is a picture that will appeal to the imagination of children and to the experience of the old.

A few things make life worth while. Among them friendship, ambition, self-respect, honesty.

All of these and many others are put away in the graves that are dug by drink.

First goes AMBITION. THE GRAVE OF AMBITION IS BIG, AND IT IS FILLED WITH THE MEN THAT BEGAN TO DRINK WITH THE IDEA THAT "A LITTLE WOULD NOT HURT THEM," ONLY TO FIND OUT THAT THE LITTLE OF THE BEGINNING MEANS DESTRUCTION IN THE END.

The work done by alcohol in the human mind is done insidiously—with an intelligence devilish in its cunning. Ambition is killed in men by drink—because the foundation of ambition is MODESTY, dissatisfaction with ourselves.

Drink makes men egotistical. It fills them with self-approval. They PITY themselves, when they should blame themselves.

Drink has killed more ambition than all other forces in life put together.

And drinks kills FRIENDSHIP.

One by one friends are driven from the man that puts his own selfish appetite ahead of duty and of all other consideration.

Drink makes men violent one day, tearfully repentant the next day—and both days the drinker is unmanly.

Friendship is based upon appreciation of manliness, upon the sense of equality between men.

Drink destroys equality, it drags a man down, AND IT DRAGS HIM AWAY FROM HIS FRIENDS.

Drink destroys ambition and friendship. It kills and buries LOVE and HAPPY FAMILY LIFE.

How many wives have clung to drunken husbands? How desperately they have tried to save them only the drunkards know. But what drink starts out to do IT DOES. It destroys affection and it destroys the family. The family is based upon the respect of the children for the father and mother.

Drink destroys respect, for it kills that by which respect was created.

Drink destroys the drinker's SELF-RESPECT.

Some of the best men in this world have been victims of alcohol. There have been more desperate struggles to reform made by drunkards than were ever made for any other purpose by men holding themselves above their less fortunate brothers.

A drunkard struggles and strives over and over to save himself—to save THE SELF-RESPECT that is slipping away from him.

But eventually self-respect is buried also in the graveyard of drink, and principle—HONESTY—can be found in a grave nearby.

A man's conscience attacks and worries him, even in the last stages of drinking. Others forgive him again and again—but in his good moments HE DOES NOT FORGIVE HIMSELF.

He hates himself, his self-respect goes. If he lasts long enough and sinks low enough, principle and honesty go as well.

Hope, of course, lies in the graveyard of drink. Its death is slow, for alcohol DECEIVES the man that it is destroying, AND IT DECEIVES HIM WITH HOPE.

HOPE and health end together at last—and they are buried and added to the list of graves.

It is hard to cure the man upon whom drink has fastened its hold. Of such men a great majority WANT TO DO BETTER.

But drink has cunningly destroyed the WILL first of all.

And while the drunkard WANTS to do what you tell him, HE WANTS A THOUSAND TIMES MORE THE DRINK THAT HE CRAVES.

It is hard to reform a man far down the hill.

But it is not hard to fill with hatred and fear of drink the young that are still free from it, or those that are only beginning.

Make clear to young men, AND ESPECIALLY TO CHILDREN, the road that leads to this graveyard. Let them know that the road is a steep hill, that gets steeper and steeper as it goes down.

At the top you can stop in safety and look into the dark graveyard at the foot.

A few steps down, and you can still turn around—but it soon becomes too late.

There is hardly a home in the United States that has not a member in need of this picture. Use it.

As Age Creeps Upon Us

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

As the year turns toward Autumn, those who are past the Spring [illegible] of youth think with [illegible] less [illegible] of the approach of life's sere and yellow leaftime.

Age has few attractions for man or woman.

For such an ancient institution, as it is, age is extremely unpopular. But much can be done by human beings, if they will, to make the approach of age less terrifying.

It is not the advance of time, but the lack of self-control and common sense, which renders that maturity which means fullness of years so undesirable a period to contemplate.

In nature [illegible] in its own way.

Each has [illegible] its own dignity and grace.

The Autumn [illegible] beauty in mourning lost May [illegible] a splendor more effulgent [illegible] possessed. A beautiful woman who [illegible] her fleeting charms [illegible] the fact that she was [illegible]

[illegible]

It is all a mistaken point of view.

Nature provides each normal being born into life with sufficient vitality, brain power and will to enable him to remain [illegible] strong and useful, for a hundred years [illegible] endowments properly used and developed and conserved.

It is [illegible] the human system, as well as in the [illegible]

[illegible] claiming any "vanity" to excuse the lack of personal charm, and in the next breath declaring how vigorous they are—as vigorous as in early youth, and to prove the [illegible] work [illegible] hours [illegible] and [illegible]

They do not realize that the latter course is an evidence of foolish vanity and that it would be far more sensible to devote three hours a day to care and preservation of the body, however "vain" such a course might seem to the superficial observer.

The man and woman who has passed the noon mark of life should make a careful study of diet. Nothing should be taken into the system which does not conduce to the building of tissue and the making of good, pure blood.

It is a depleted and anaemic condition of the body and brain which causes gray hair and wrinkles, not cruel years.

Cases have been known where gray hair turned back to lustrous brown by restoration of vital forces of body and mind.

To avert the depletion of the vitality, and to keep the body nourished and the brain clear and the mind uplifted, is to outwit old age, and render the journey into the valley of years delightful instead of terrible.

It means having the companionship of the young [illegible] and the companionship of the beautiful [illegible]

[illegible] expression of slight weariness in her face, and by [illegible] may be restored to her full vigor and bloom.

But the woman of forty finds herself haggard and worn after a night of extravagance, and she requires days, instead of hours, for restoration.

The American woman is not wholly developed mentally and physically until twenty-five.

Until then she may, with no immediate visible effects, take liberties with her vital forces; but if she continues these liberties she must find herself bankrupt sooner or later in beauty and health.

Rest more, think more, pray more and resolve more. Get nearer to the invisible realms in thought, as the [illegible] of youth takes its departure.

[illegible] your food with a view to taking what is nutritious, and abandon the things which merely taste appetizing while in the mouth.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Children may be pardoned for such self-indulgence, but not you.

Keep your system supplied with good, pure blood by the right kind of food and not too much of it, and keep your lungs supplied with quantities of fresh air, and keep your mind filled with good and great thoughts and acts which correspond. Then you will find yourself growing beautiful as you grow older in years; and you will find your friends increasing and your popularity greater with the passing of time.

Over-exertion in the line of amusements and athletic sports and exercises and over-taxing the digestive organs are the faults of youth.

I have seen a young woman go into the salt water and swim vigorously twice in one day and play golf or tennis for hours and dance all the evening and seem to show no fatigue afterward. Of course she had done her system a wrong, but the result did not show itself immediately. The woman of forty, however, who experienced such a strenuous day would have carried the marks in her countenance for many succeeding ones.

The man who attempts the same follies after middle life in which he has indulged with seeming impunity at twenty-two is making a miserable old age for himself.

But it will not be the fault of the years, only of his own lack of common sense. After thirty a man or woman should take less time for violent exercise and more time for rest and care of the body and repose of the mind.

Some one has said that no person can be clean, physically or morally, without at least one bath a day. The very young may hurry through the bath, but the mature person may not.

It must become a sort of religious devotion, and varied in kind and method to suit the changing needs of the body.

The young person may give little thought to the body, and it will still be attractive and beautiful, but the aging individual must think of it and care for it with interest and study its needs, for it is the temple of the immortal soul and should be kept beautiful and whole to the end. The ignorance of youth may excuse excesses and follies; to the wisdom of maturity such things are inexcusable; they are shameful crimes.

When we see an exuberant youth, in the excess of vitality, misusing his body and digestion, with injurious sports, foods and drinks, we say, "He will learn the folly of it some day." But when we see a man past the noonday of life, doing the same thing, we can only say, "Fool and criminal!" for he knows better.

The young may be careless in dress and still be charming, for youth makes its own embellishment; but the older man and woman must be careful to dress with neatness and taste and scrupulous cleanliness at all times, if they would be attractive to the eye.

Not with frivolity [illegible] but with good taste, dignity and appropriateness should the mature man and woman distinguish themselves in their attire.

Once upon a time, a clergyman of almost thrice twenty years sat down beside me in a drawing room, and spoke with regret of the hurrying years which carried mortals away from beautiful youth to unlovely age. He was a man in what is called affluent circumstances, yet his clothing was careless and evinced a lack of attention, while his breath suggested a veteran pipe, which should have been honorably discharged and pensioned years before.

No wonder the man found age made him unattractive.

The exterior man and woman, the eye, the skin, the breath, the clothing, the voice, indicate the condition of the mind and spirit, and no man has a right to preach the gospel to his fellow-men who is not wholesome and fresh and attractive to the eye, ear and nostril of the observer.

Restlessness, ill temper [illegible] carping criticisms are all unattractive traits in youth, but they are unbearable in age.

Age should possess repose; it should be mellowed into kindness and sympathy, and it should be self-controlled and serene. And it should be always clean. If you have reached the age of thirty without thinking of these things, you have no time to waste in beginning to prepare yourself for an attractive maturity. You are in the glory of the forenoon still, but it is time to prepare for the afternoon.

Give less time to the pleasures and recreations, which call for a large outlay of vitality; take more time in care of your person and your mind.

Little Bobby and the Fall Girl

By William F. Kirk

Talking to the other clerks about whare thay were last nite.

thay are coming, thay are coming from the waiv-washed shore.
& the winter seeson's humming will be herd by us once moar. summer gurls will now be fall gurls
& the men wich buy the close for the short gurls & the tall gurls will be fall guys, i suppose.

I thot i wud have to start this peece [illegible] poam beekaus whenever i talk [illegible] gurls i git sentimentel & wish i was tall and hansom like Mister Hackett or [illegible] Mayne.

the other day i went & took a last long look at Atlantick City. the saim old waivs was thare, telling thare story to the [illegible] beech but the peeple that used to set on the [illegible] & show thare stockings are [illegible] thay are gone like the noble red man. [illegible] have gone back to thare hoams & others have gone back to thare bording houses. the gurls that was going back hoam to take a winter trip to Yurup are now selling point lace & talking to the other clerks about whare thay was last nite & the widows that was all done in that grate watering plais have gone back to thare husbands.

i met a awful cute littel fall gurl at a ice creem soshubel the nite befoar last. we had sum ice creem together & i tried to talk about enithing she knew, but it was pritty hard to find sumthing she knew about. Here are sum of the things i tried to talk about:

Mister "The" McManus
the increese of crime in N. Y.
John Drue's new play
the air ship
the life inshurence companies
Shakespere

all she knew about was her, so we talked about that. I have had a fine time, she sed, look at my arms, aint thay nice & brown? i had jest the luvliest time, thare was sum vary nise yung men down thare, one of them cud swim on his back & move his ears in the water, & one of them cud paddle a canoo, he lerned to paddle it at college, he sed. Well, i tould her, thare aint vary many young men that lern to paddle thare canoo at college. Yes, thare are, she sed, lots of them. this yung man cud paddle fine in the daytime, she sed, but he was afraid to go on the water at nite, & i tould her he shud have gone to nite school.

then she asked me what I did for a living & i tould her i rote peeces for a paper & she sed How luvly, can you rite sumthing about me. she showed me sum picters of her in a bathing sute & and asked me if i cud print one of them & i sed No, not in our paper, it goes into too many hoams. i guess she dident like me vary well after that.

it is funny about summer gurls. they have a good time in june & july & August & maybe september & then thare trubbels begin. you see it is easy to be a summer gurl, but [illegible] cums it is hard to maik good [illegible] as tipewriters, & thay hear the wild waivs so much all summer that thay cant hear what thare employer says when he is dicktating letters to them & thay forgit how to spel.

my pa hires one of them & the other day Ma went to the office & saw Pa whispering in the gurls ear, he was telling her the rite way to spell the words, but he cudent maik Ma beleeve it & and the fall gurl had a bad fall.

fall gurls & summer gurls & all the gurls are nise enuff, I suppoas, but i havent got vary much time for any of them. our preecher tould me i shudent say that about gurls. He sed Thay are all part of this grate plan & if they was useless the Creator wudent have made them.

but you cud say the saim thing about spiders.

He was telling her the rite way to spell the words.

Mirandy on Love and Money

By Dorothy Dix

"Maybe hit ain't romantic, but hits Gord's truf dat love lies in de bottom of de full dinner pot."—MIRANDY.

D[illegible] won [illegible] whut [illegible] odder day [illegible] jail, long [illegible] accumulated a [illegible] of husbands, an' [illegible] dat de reason [illegible] she sorter fell into de marryin' habit was becaze she couldn't live [illegible] on $15 a week [illegible] was de size of de pay envelope of mos' of de husbands," [illegible] nail right on [illegible] observed Mirandy [illegible]

"Cose I ain't upholdin' de woman. Nawm. Sca[illegible] as husbands is in dese times, an' hard to git, dey ain't no woman dat has got a right to mo' dan [illegible] hits a mighty good thing dat de law deals 'em out dat way, caze ef hit didn't dere would be some women dat would have de whole bunch, an' odders dat would have none, an' dere wouldn't be enough to go round.

"But dat woman suttinly did hand out de truf when she say dat youse got to have enough money to grease de wheels of matermony ef you don't want it to squeak so hit gits on yo' nerves. Cose dat ain't whut it says in de books. In all dem novels whut Ma'y Jane done read aloud to me of nights hit says dat love is enough, but I done took notice dat in de tales whar a po' young gal marries a po' young man whut ain't got no settled way of makin' a livin' dat de story stop wid de weddin'. Dey don't prognosticate [illegible] to time when deys got twins, an' de meal is out, an' de butcher won't trust 'em for anuder pork chop, an' de landlord is a beatin' on de do' for de rent money.

Nawm, I bet about dat time dat a five-dollar [illegible] better to den, dan all de romance on a ten-acre lot, fer dey ain't nothin' dat des natchally knocks de stuffin' outen love's young dream lak bein' real good an' hongry, an' not havin' de price of a meal in yo' pocket. An' folks ain't to blame fer dat. De good Gord settled dat pint fer us when he made us wid twice as much stomach as heart.

"Yassum, youse got to be comfortable, an' well fed to love. Ain't dat prove by de fac' dat hits de rich people dat lives on champagne an' terrapin dat is so sloshin' over wid affection dat dey is fallin' in love wid somebody else's husband or wife? Whilst de po' folks dat mostly has to live on corn beef hash an' prunes thinks deys mighty lucky ef deys got a kind enough feelin' towards de partner of deir bosoms to keep from battin' dem over de head wid a cheer.

"Taint po' folks dat is worryin' over whedder dey is found dey soul-mates or not, an' of deys losin' de love of deir husban' or wife. Nawm, love ain't bother' dem none. Whut keeps dem awake at nights is how deys gwine to find de money to pay de instalment on de cookin' stove.

"Yassum, you sho 'can't love on an empty stomach. A man has got to be kinder gorged befo' he begins to take notice whedder a woman is tall and slim, or short an' fat, an' whedder she rolls her eyes lak a dyin' calf, or dey looks lak burnt holes in a blanket. An' hits de same way wid a woman, caze bof of 'em is cut offen de same piece of cloth, and when dey minds is set on wonderin' whar deys gwine git somethin' to eat dey ain't wastin' much time probin' into de state of dey hearts.

"I done see lots of dese heah young couples git married whut didn't have nothin' to start to housekeepin' on but love, an' I ain't seen narry case whar de love hold out when de flour give out in de bin, an' dey warnt no meat in de skillet. Nawm, about dat time de man begins to sulk, an' de woman begins to nag, an' de woman screeches out dat de man is done took her away from a good home an' dragged her down, an' de man lows dat ef he did de woman toled him into doin' hit, an' den de man goes off an' gits drunk to drown his sorrer, an' de woman tells her troubles to de neighbors, an' hit ends in bof of 'em going to de dawgs.

"Yassum, love is a mighty good thing, wid a few yaller-legged pullets, an' baked sweet potatoes, an' gravy on de side, but hits a slim diet when hits all you got to stay yo' stomach on.

"An' dats what I tole Ike when he come a-courtin' me. You know I is one of dese fore-handed women whut ain't takin' no chance on lightnin' strikin' me. I'se gwine to draw down de lightnin', an' so when I set my eye on Ike an' made up my mind to ketch him, ev'y time he come around I feed him up right good, an' one day, after I fill him up on baked possum, an' pie, an' things, he up an' pop de question.

"'I feel,' says he, 'dat I could spend my life in holdin' dis little hand, an' dat I would ask no meat nor drink but yo' kisses.'

"'Dat's all right,' I says, but I know'd he'd be hongry by supper time, 'but befo' I grees to marry you I wants to know whut you got to marry on.'

"'We have our love,' spous he, solemn like.

"'I specs we could live on dat whilst I am livin' on my pa, an' you is eatin' on yo' ma,' says I, 'but befo' I ties up wid a gentleman I wants to see whar three squar meals a day is a-comin' from, becaze I don't want to have to distract my mind from thinkin' whut a fine personable man you is, an' how lucky I was to git you, to wonder whar I'm gwine to get de next meal.'

"Yassum, dats de way I looks at hit. Ef you is harried by de bill collector, an' is po' an' tired, an' overworked, an' dragged out you ain't in de sperrit to be sentimental.

"Maybe hit ain't romantic, but hits Gord's truf dat love lies in de bottom of de full dinner pot."

DOROTHY DIX.

The Truth About Russia

By Robert C. Long

THERE is a grotesque fairy tale current in East-[illegible] Jehovah plagued Job, he turned her milk sour, broke her pudding basins and dropped saltpetre into the still where she concocted corn brandy.

Marfushka went for relief to a mere benignant spirit. "The Devil is black," said the benignant spirit, "know him by that. And when you see him, shout three times [illegible] disappear [illegible] Your milk will remain fresh, your pudding basins whole, and the saltpetre in your corn brandy will turn into gold." So saying, he gave Marfushka a phial of essence distilled from the enemy's finger-nail parings—which proves that homeopathy is as old as the hills.

Marfushka sought Satan as assiduously as most of us do. One day she found him. From behind a birch tree set on a hill top, a big nose projected against the sky. The sky was a dead white, and this enabled Marfushka to see that the nose was a jetty black. Exclaiming, "That is the Devil!" she shouted three times and emptied the phial.

Next morning, Marfushka's best tea pot was found in fragments. When she called to her son to witness this last outrage of Satan's, she found he had disappeared.

She reproached the benignant spirit bitterly. "I believe you are yourself the enemy," was one of her remarks. "Not at all," said he. "Neither was your son the devil. If you had waited till the rest of the head emerged from behind the tree, you could have known your son and learnt that he had blacked his nose while [illegible]. Do not jump so hastily to conclusions."

I am reminded of this story, which illustrates the common error of judging from isolated facts, by the request of the editor, to say whether Russia is really as bad as it is painted, or whether there is anything in the institutions, legislation or social life of the Czar's empire at all good or worthy of imitation. The black nose protrudes so often in the shape of massacres and civil war that most foreigners are certain that the whole invisible body is black also. Knouts, Cossacks, Siberia, mumacles, snow—these unpleasant things represent Russia to the average man. But though, like [illegible] alone these things are pretty [illegible] really play a small part in the life [illegible] in no way prevent the Czar's empire from containing many interesting and pleasant things.

Russia, for instance, is ahead of all the world in providing decent amusement for the large laboring class whose earnings are too low to enable them to patronize the amusements of the prosperous. Nearly [illegible] supported by the State or municipalities, and in other towns there are people's theatres of first-class quality, admission to which costs from half a cent upward. St. Petersburg has the finest and cheapest people's theatre in Europe. A ticket costs but five cents, and this charge covers admission to gardens, where excellent bands play, to a fine library, and to dramatic or operatic performances, so good that hundreds of prosperous persons prefer them to those presented in the private theatres. There are five minor people's theatres in the Russian capital, all either subsidized by the State, by the municipality or by manufacturers to whose works they are attached. Ten cents pays for an excellent meal in the restaurants attached.

The same agencies provide free garden parties and fetes for poor children, and a popular holiday in grim, [illegible] St. Petersburg is one of the prettiest sights to be seen in the Old World.

Charity is liberally organized. Nobody can buy a theatre or concert ticket without paying four cents for a tiny red stamp affixed to the margin. The red stamp represents a tax levied for charitable institutions. The State periodically issues postcards or postage stamps with a surtax for the same cause. There is no obligation to buy them, but they are a reminder to those bent on amusement and travel that the world contains others less fortunate than themselves. Every ash tray in every restaurant in the empire has in the centre a little tin tower with a slot for the kopecs of the charitable, and as Russians drink much, and are proverbially generous when drunk, the little tin towers are seldom empty. If you enter Russia by the famous Nord Express, you are assumed to be wealthy and requested to pay to the cause of charity a dollar and a quarter.

ROBERT C. LONG.

Where racial and religious considerations are not involved, the Russian laws are superior to those of many European countries. For ordinary murders, capital punishment is never inflicted, and even political assassins, like the murderer of the Minister of the Interior, Plehve, often escape. The illegitimacy law, as amended three years ago, is the most liberal in the world, and completely annuls the social stigma and material disadvantages which usually attach to what in the case of the children is a misfortune, and nothing more. The laws of property are progressive, and operate against the accumulation of vast estates in single hands.

In most countries an accused person must either employ an advocate or plead for himself. At [illegible] man who [illegible] employ a lawyer and at the same time is a bad pleader, may be wrongfully convicted. In Russia, a prisoner who has no advocate and who feels unable to plead, is allowed to call in the services of any near relative. Russians abjure indignantly the vindictive attitude toward crime assumed by more advanced nations. "Unfortunate" is the word invariably employed to describe criminals and convicts.

Russian liquor legislation is well worthy of study by students of sociology. The vodka, or corn brandy, which is the national drink, is manufactured and sold exclusively by the State. It is of uniform quality and uniformly good. Outside a few big hotels, consumption of drink "on the premises" is forbidden. The State liquor stores resemble postoffices; they sell vodka only in sealed bottles and are forbidden to advertise their wares or seduce the weak by any adventitious allurements. The restrictive legislation as regards sale of drink to children, or in the neighborhood of schools, contains everything that the most advanced American State can boast of. Local option to a limited extent, exists in the villages. The profit from the sale of liquor is vast, but it goes into the Imperial Treasury and thus relieves taxation.

Outside a few big cities, Russia still keeps up a hospitality of mediaeval exuberance. If you lose your way, or are weather-bound in the forests or steppes, you go boldly to the nearest country house and demand a meal and a bed. You get the best. Social customs are everywhere easy, informal, and at the same time courteous. Your hostess in any house crowns her hospitality by allowing and expecting you to kiss her hand.

The position of women in Russia is high. They get as good an education as men, and Russia was quite familiarized with women doctors at a time when they were regarded in England and France as impossible monstrosities. In factories and workshops, the earnings of women are nearer those of their husbands and brothers than in any country in the world. The idea of social equality permeates all classes and is realized most of all in the Orthodox churches, where there are no pews, or divisions, but where statesmen and bemedalled generals are elbowed and jostled by verminous peasants and pilgrims in dirty sheepskins and birch-bark shoes.

The big Russian [illegible] and ill-sanitated, are often much better cared for than those of America. The streets of St. Petersburg are as clean as a tablecloth, and in Summer every inch of them is watered four times a day. A useful institution—it grows out of the much-abused passport system—is the Address Bureau, where for a payment of one cent you can discover the whereabouts of any friend, or any debtor in the town. The police, though corrupt, are well drilled, physically [illegible] polite to strangers as are the police of Paris and London. The average American policeman would not be tolerated in Moscow or St. Petersburg.

Russian food is good; so are Russian drinks and Russian baths. Family life is familiar and confidential. Russians respect their parents, and to the idea of home show a devotion which to foreigners seems almost exaggerated and ridiculous. Of Russian sports there is not much to say; but St. Petersburg supports the best ballet, and Moscow the best native drama in the world. Despite lack of education in our sense of the word, there is plenty of primitive culture in the villages, music and dancing are universal, and one of the happiest experiences that can befall a man is to take a Sunday drive from village to village and listen to the singing of the magnificent choruses, which are the [illegible] artistic heritage of the Slavonic race.

Finally, when a Russian is educated at all, he is usually very well educated. He is a cosmopolitan, trained in the spirit of the old adage that a man who has two languages has two minds. On the Nevsky Prospekt in St. Petersburg, you will find at least a score of stores with books in all and translations from all the languages of Europe. If you move in educated society you will meet hundreds of Russians who know more about French, English and American literature than do average Frenchmen, Englishmen or Americans themselves.

In short, the black nose is a very small part of the body politic. And as the black nose is being very rapidly cleansed, it may be hoped that the delusion that the Devil is behind it will be cleared away also. The Marfushkas of politics and publicism are the worst enemies of international amity.

The Art of Making Love—On and Off the Stage

By Otis Skinner and by Robert Fitzsimmons

"Hold some love-making in reserve at first."

"If he displays too much fervor, she will say, 'He is too easy.'"

"Let the girl do a little of the love-making herself."

"Don't overdo the part."

BY MORTON BIRGE

THE secret of love-making —on the stage at least?" Otis Skinner, one of the leading romantic actors of modern drama, gazed thoughtfully at space with the big brown eyes that he uses so effectually in his love-making scenes.

"Sincerity, that's it. Sincerity above all things."

"I don't mean, of course," he pursued, "that the stage lover—the man, must be sincerely in love with the woman to whom he is making love. That is rather unfavorable, if anything. He is apt to become the personal lover and to forget his stagecraft.

"But he must be positively sincere in his acting, adhering closely to the spirit of the part.

"Of course, one might say that is true of any stage character. Any actor must be sincere in his part. But it seems to me that this is especially true of the stage lover. Of all parts, his is the one that suffers the most from the least deviation from the utmost sincerity.

"He must not undervalue the part. He must not overdo it. That is particularly fatal."

Mr. Skinner hesitated a second, then added, with a smile:

"It is just the same as in real life, you know, it seems to me. The lover who underestimates the situation in real life makes his mistake, just as the stage lover. He must be sincere. The false note spoils the situation in real or stage life. And equally important is it that the lover should not overdo his part. He must not lose his head on the stage and behave like a fool just because he is overcome with admiration for the girl or woman. Else she will have no use for him."

Rule Fits Real Life

"And that applies to real life, of course, Mr. Skinner?"

"Doesn't it?" he replied with a laughing glance.

"You know a man acting a comedy part can overdo it to a reasonable extent, of course, and not injure himself. People don't care, so to speak, how funny a man is. Likewise, they will let a stage villain be as villainous as possible, so long as he doesn't rant. And an eccentric character part can be very eccentric and still not mar the interpretation. Of course I am not decrying the difficulty of [illegible]. All these parts must be played [illegible].

"But it does seem to me that it takes less to spoil a good love scene than almost anything else. The scene must be played well, straight. It must [illegible] even to [illegible]. It is hard to avoid [illegible] fortunate touch, especially anything ridiculous.

How He Made Love to Paolo

Mr. Skinner suddenly chuckled to himself.

"Just to show you the little things that may upset the most careful love scene, things that cannot be anticipated or avoided. Once I was playing in [illegible] Washington [illegible] Lawrence Barrett and Marie Wainwright. I played Paolo to Miss Wainwright's Francesca. In the garden scene, after Francesca's bridegroom has been called away [illegible] she and Paolo find they love each other. Miss Wainwright and I had what we considered quite [illegible] effective [illegible]. Paolo and Francesca are reading [illegible] old missal the story of Lancelot and Guinevere. They find in it the story of their own love. The situation comes to the [illegible] they embrace and then Paolo leads [illegible] as his brother's bride [illegible] through the wings [illegible] to the house.

"We [illegible] Washington told Mr. Barrett [illegible] suggestion [illegible] Mr. Barrett [illegible] to walk to one side of the garden [illegible] extend it toward Francesca and have her look up and then follow me, with her eyes fixed on her face."

Here Mr. Skinner treated me to a bit of impromptu acting. He picked a match [illegible] and held it out.

"[illegible] Paolo. This is her rose," he said, stepping [illegible] holding the [illegible] between his [illegible] fingers. His brown eyes [illegible] toward the [illegible] who is [illegible] dressed in a [illegible] brown plaid suit, brown shoes, brown tie and brown [illegible] but the brown eyes and the expressive face alone were significant.

"Don't Be Too Sudden in Making Love," Says Big "Bob," "But Don't Be as Slow as We Actors on the Stage."

BY J. FRANK DAVIS.

When I make love on the stage I'm natural—but not so sudden as I would be off. That's most of the difference. You've got to be natural if you expect to be a good actor."

This from Robert Fitzsimmons, erstwhile champion of the world [illegible] fighter, present [illegible] Thespian. And Robert Fitzsimmons [illegible] not announced [illegible] from [illegible] to Quincy as "Robert Fitzsimmons, the Natural Actor"?

It was in his dressing room at the Grand Opera House after the third act of "A Fight for Love" that he said it with much more to the same or similar effect.

There is no actor on the stage who makes love just like the ex-champion. This may or may not be to the loss of the others. Sufficient that as a lovemaker he is in a class by himself.

He admitted one of the features of his [illegible] style when he said, as he [illegible] displayed [illegible] [illegible]

"I put those lines in myself where I say to the girl, 'I can't seem to do anything to do with my hands,' in the third act."

"Do you have that trouble off the stage?" I asked.

Hands Are in the Way.

"Did I have that trouble, you mean?" Bob gently corrected. "No, I can't say I did. You see when you take her off the stage you [illegible] could [illegible] it gets them out of the way. On the stage you have to stand and talk to her and you don't really make love to her at all, just before the curtain falls on the last act. The public considers it lovemaking. It passes for lovemaking on the stage, but it isn't the real thing. The difference is in the slowness.

"[illegible] Wilton Lackaye [illegible] Yes," said Bob, as we started in the other [illegible] to put on for the [illegible] Faversham [illegible]

"[illegible] Fitz [illegible] the lovemaking [illegible] of making love [illegible] just [illegible] There's degrees of [illegible] Some women like to [illegible] others. Now [illegible] dainty little woman and grab her by the neck [illegible] I like you [illegible]

Fitzsimmons has a long love scene in the third act of "A Fight for Love." In [illegible] perspective of the play it [illegible] sinks into insignificance, because just before it he has knocked [illegible] down, and just after that he knocks [illegible] down [illegible] every [illegible] knows [illegible] in the next act he's going to whip a fighter in the ring. [illegible] is there, even if the gallery doesn't applaud it as much as it does the more sensational [illegible] of the piece.

"How did you like that act?" Bob asked me.

"Very good," I said. "You're certainly improving as an actor."

"Ain't I?" agreed Bob, as the darkey laced his shoes. "And I worked that one [illegible] myself. Isn't it all right? And what do you think of Mrs. Fitz? Isn't she the cream? It's easy [illegible] love scene with her."

Mrs. Fitzsimmons is certainly a very good singer," I said.

"Singer," said Bob. "Well, you can bet she is. She's the best soprano there is in America, and I've heard them all. Grand opera and light opera singers, church singers and concert singers. I've heard them all, and there ain't a voice in the bunch that can touch hers. She's going to have an opera next season.

Mrs. Fitz to Have an Opera

"Yes, sir. She's going to have an opera. She went to Paris, you know, to study, last Spring, and I spent $5,000 getting apartments for a year, and French teachers, and Italian teachers, and goodness knows what all. Then when she [illegible] I told her [illegible] the season she [illegible] next season [illegible] going to have it. Just wait [illegible] acting?"

You [illegible] brought up some delightful work.

"[illegible] because [illegible] the stage and I [illegible] those melodramas [illegible] funny gestures [illegible] just act natural [illegible] what makes it so good.

"Do you think in real life a girl is attracted [illegible] strength and athletic feats [illegible] show?"

Loves a Tower of Strength

"Sure. I know it. You know where Mrs. Fitz in the first act says, 'I more admire a man's strength than for anything else. I love a tower of strength.' Well, that's natural. Women like a big manly man. They like a great, strong fellow. They used to come around my training quarters when I was getting ready for a fight and admire me. Only last Winter, when I was here in Boston, I was [illegible] the [illegible] and a young woman [illegible] her hand on my sleeve and then I heard her say to her friend, 'There, I touched him!' On they [illegible] like a [illegible] strong athlete.

"It's just natural the way this play of mine goes. The girl gets in love with me because she sees how well I can punch the [illegible] and then I save her honor when the [illegible] the blacksmith has been [illegible] and then I save her beauty when she's going to get [illegible] thrown in [illegible] and then I save her father's money when the house is robbed, and by that time she's head over heels in love with me. Women are that way."

"It's a pretty versatile part," I hazarded. "You have a lot of things to do."

"Yes, sir," assented Bob. "I certainly do. And do you know what happens to this show when I'm sick. It just closes. There can't be any understudy. Did you ever stop to think of that? I'm alone in my line. There isn't another actor in the profession could take my place. Could Richard Mansfield do it? Could James K. Hackett do it? No, sir. They might be able to say the lines as well as I do, but [illegible] about shoeing the horse and making the horseshoes. [illegible] the last act [illegible] to take my place."

I agreed with him.

"Don't you like the play?" he asked.

Wrote the Best Parts Himself

"Yes," I said confidently. "It's as good [illegible] of the sort as I ever saw. Hal [illegible] written some pretty good melodramas."

"He didn't write [illegible]," said Bob with some heat. "What does he know about [illegible] the long [illegible]

"Why, don't you know [illegible] I wrote a show [illegible] stage. [illegible] we never [illegible]

"[illegible] popular priced [illegible] Broadway. [illegible] melodrama [illegible] pretty drama like this doesn't [illegible] with him [illegible] I wouldn't go on to Broadway with [illegible] company. But if I had Bob [illegible] for a sparring partner, and Wilton Lackaye [illegible] as my wife [illegible] and act as good some that [illegible] go great."

"Last act," said the stage manager at the door. "Your act."

"All right," said Bob, with a final look in the mirror as the valet passed him his hat and walking stick. Then to me:

"Sorry I can't talk any more. But if you want to see some stage lovemaking look at [illegible] the end of this act, when I say 'I [illegible] for love,' and grab her in my arms and kiss her. It's all right."

Taking his advice I did.

The heroine was enfolded to Fitzsimmons's stalwart breast while he imprinted a kiss upon her upturned lips. No longer did he have trouble with his hands, because as he had said he had his arms around her, and that got them out of the way.

Incidentally, they nearly hid the girl.

Fitz had told the truth. It was all right. Neither Wilton Lackaye nor James K. Hackett nor William Faversham nor E. H. Sothern, nor Kyrle Bellew nor Robert Edeson, no, not even Otis Skinner ever did it just that way.

"Put Your Arms Around Her—It Gets Your Hands Out of the Way."

"Be Big and Strong. Women Love a Big, Manly Man."

WHY I LOVE TO RAISE PRIZE WINNING DOGS

By Mrs. Burke-Roche

Society Woman Has Won 280 Prizes With Her Stable of Champions.

BY winning twenty-three blue ribbons at the Newport and Englewood dog shows, Mrs. Burke Roche, the society woman of Newport and New York, has attracted almost universal attention.

Though she has been showing her famous English bull terriers but two years, Mrs. Roche has won 280 prizes, the majority being firsts, a world record that has not even a close second.

The time has passed when society women own dogs that are only house pets. Mrs. Burke Roche personally supervises her Elm Court kennels. She knows all the good points of a thoroughbred English bull terrier. In person she enters the ring at a dog show to see that her dogs are shown to the best advantage.

Mrs. Roche's Elm Court Fort Lee Girl, a champion English bull terrier, was pronounced by Mr. Peez, the English authority, to be the best dog of her breed in America. Here is Mrs. Roche's story of "why I love to raise dogs."

BY MRS. BURKE-ROCHE

I was always fond of horses and dogs and have owned them since my childhood. My dogs were English bull terriers and I became attached to that particular breed. They are intelligent and affectionate and have very good disposition, though they are commonly supposed to be treacherous.

About two years ago I established the Elm Court kennels and began the breeding of bull terriers. There is much pleasure and satisfaction in breeding one's own dogs.

Purity of color and all the other good points of a particular breed are what one aims for. Some breeders drown all brindles. All my dogs are pure white and I have kept them so. Yet I would not drown a pup with brindle markings. I would take it out of the kennels.

Besides the pleasure of breeding dogs there is to me a fascination and delight in picking dogs and showing them with a good judge in a dog show and coming off the winner of a class or of first prizes.

There is quite a crisis and excitement in such a show. It is no comparison a breeder of dogs comes to feel repaid for all the energy and labor expended in careful breeding.

Dogs Have Won 280 Prizes.

In all, my four show dogs, Elm Court Fort Lee Girl, Elm Court Fort Lee Lad, Elm Court Queen Noel and Elm Court Lynch, have won 280 prizes at shows all over the country. Most of them have been blue ribbons. These four dogs are strong enough to be exhibited in any company. I am also interested in English fox bull terriers, and my daughter Cynthia has a fox bull terrier, Elm Court Daphne, is a prize winner.

At the Newport and Englewood shows this year my dogs won twenty-three blue ribbons and specials. There was much good competition, for the classes were well filled with good company, and the judges were competent.

I am especially proud of Champion Fort Lee Girl, who was pronounced by Mr. Peez, the great English bull terrier authority, to be the best of her breed in America to-day.

My love for horses and dogs is most natural. My father was so fond of horses that he bought such horses as Peter Sterling and Pilot Boy for his own driving. Though he is eighty-five years old he still takes his daily drive in Central Park, New York.

My brother, the late George Work, was a great rider. He was so fond of bull terriers and owned "Plossie," the founder of the Fox bull terrier class in this country.

Colors Black and Yellow.

My stable colors are black and yellow, and are the kennel colors also. The color effect is pleasing at a show. The blankets and sheets are black with yellow lettering.

Much has been said about the cruelty of cropping a dog's ears. It is not cruel, and if done when a pup is about six months old it is not painful. The reason that bull terriers in England have lost their popularity is because ear cropping was prohibited.

No society woman in Newport is so noted for her individuality as Mrs. Burke Roche.

The Roche family colors are black and yellow. All of Mrs. Roche's carriages are black with yellow striping, and for driving she wears yellow broadcloth tailored suits, with a black velvet collared coat and a black chip hat.

The liveries are black with yellow waistcoats and the servants wear yellow rose bods in their caps.

Mrs. Roche is the daughter of Frank Work of New York. Her family has ever been athletic. Cynthia Burke Roche, her daughter, golfs, drives, swims and plays tennis excellently. She is considered one of the best four-in-hand drivers in New port.

Will Inherit a Title.

Maurice Burke Roche and Francis Burke Roche, the twin sons of Mrs. Roche, are entering Harvard this fall. They ride a great deal and are enthusiastic automobilists.

If one dying of the twin sons will be Lord Fermoy of Ireland, for their uncle, Burke Roche of Queenstown, now has that title.

One of Mrs. Roche's fads is her love for blue flowers. She has a large garden at Elm Court, her beautiful Summer mansion on Bellevue avenue, Newport, where every flower that blossoms is blue. The blue flower is symbolical of happiness, and on every side Mrs. Roche is known for her optimistic nature.

That she is proud of her trophies in dogdom is clearly demonstrated by visits to her home. In the large reception hall, stretched on a line across the room, are many blue ribbons.

In her drawing room there hangs a huge gilt framed case containing an artistically grouped mass of blue and red ribbons.

MANY SOCIETY WEDDINGS IN LIST OF COMING EVENTS

While the crimson tipped wings of Autumn are hovering over the land and the spirit of Midas is touching all things to gold, the tide of social life has turned and is sweeping back to town, bringing with it the ozone breath of the hills and the sea.

Rested and radiant after the Summer's fun the devotees of fashion are jubilant with the prospect of a gay social program teeming with novel diversions and events of note. The social mood is a buoyant one and the Fall festivities are taking on the life and color of the most brilliant of seasons.

Weddings

Whether it be due solely to the light that lies in women's eyes, or partly to the reproach of the recent census revelations, Boston's society bachelors are on the high road to reform and they figure conspicuously in the marrying and giving in marriage which promises a brilliant Autumn program in society's world.

Prominent on the list is that of Miss Mary Head, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Head, to Mr. William Bowditch, Harvard '98, which took place Tuesday afternoon at the pretty Methodist church on Manchester by the Sea, the seat of the country home of the Heads.

The ceremony, which took from the altar of the church the floral tributes of the season's bride of the year, was performed by the Rev. William H. Pulsford, pastor of the church. Bride Park, Wallace Hood, organist, rendered the nuptial music. The bride was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles Head, as matron of honor, and by eight girl friends as bridesmaids. Ralph Bowditch, brother of the groom, was best man, while Miss Dorothy Sanden, Miss Nancy Longhorne, Miss Mary Head, Miss Dorothy Quincy and Nansen Mitchell acted as attendants. Miss Head, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Russell will open their charming and recently remodelled home at No. 130 Commonwealth avenue.

Another notable marriage of the past week was that of Miss Helen Sands, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Sands, to Mr. Joseph Warren Fabyan. The Sands-Fabyan nuptials took place Tuesday at Newport. The Rev. Walter Lowrie, formerly of Boston, performed the ceremony.

Miss Sands was attired in white duchess satin with white satin court train and wore a veil worn by her mother and grandmother at their wedding. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and was attended by the Misses Anita Sands, Mary Francis Sands, Elizabeth Sands and Dorothy Sands, sisters of the bride, and by Miss Elsie Fabyan, sister of the groom. Percy Fabyan was best man and ushers were Chalmers Ward, Raymond Stewart, Wetherbee, William Wolcott George W. Phillips, H. B. Sedgwick and Rodgers Jr.

The groom's gift to the bride was a valuable set of diamonds bequeathed him by his grandmother, Mrs. Spencer, who died last Spring. The set consists of a necklace of diamonds of graduated sizes and three diamond brooches.

Another wedding which promises to be a leading social event is that of Miss Henrietta Niles Lockwood and Richard G. Tower, which will take place the 30th of this month at the Lockwood estate in East Lexington. Owing to the recent death of the bride's father, Mr. Rhodes and Mrs. Rhodes Lockwood, the affair will be a very quiet one, and only relatives and intimate friends will be present. The young couple will sail for Europe immediately after the wedding.

Future Events

A coming event is the marriage of Miss Frederika Webb to Mr. Ralph Pulitzer, which will take place in October at the country home of the Webbs at Shelburne Farms, Vt. Miss Webb is at present visiting at the home of the Pulitzers at Bar Harbor.

Prominent among those to make their debuts the coming season are the Misses Katherine Roosevelt, Elizabeth Gray, Mary Josephine Amory, Mary D. Coffin, Helen Thomas, Lillian Cotton, Eleanor Quincy, Barbara Burr, Margaret Whitney, Christine Hunnewell and Mary Fay.

Baron Rosen is again at Manchester-by the Sea, where he intends remaining until late in the Fall. The Rosens entertain a great deal and have as their guests at present, M. Hansen, first secretary of the Russian legation, and M. Siebert, second secretary. It is expected that Baron Rosen and his family will visit Boston before their return to Washington.

The F. E. Spauldings are expected to return from their trip abroad the latter part of next month, when Mr. and Mrs. Crowell, who have been occupying their cottage at Manchester-by-the-Sea, will return to Boston.

Geraldine Farrar, whose rapid rise in the musical world is being watched so closely by us Bostonians, has just signed a contract with Heinrich Conried for three years. She will sing here in Handel's Semele, Mr. Conried being the Director of the Metropolitan Opera House, which opens in November.

Miss Farrar is looking anxiously forward to her return and appearance in Boston next month. She is a graduate of Wellesley College and was the only woman selling in the Transatlantic yacht race, being aboard her father's boat, the Fleur de Lys. Miss Stimson was most popular and anticipates renewing many old friendships during her stay here.

The latest dinner in honor of the young Duchess of Marlborough was given yesterday at the home of Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay. DOROTHY FORBES BOSTON Society GIRL BEST WHIP along NEW ENGLAND SHORES

BOSTON has the honor of giving to New England its best single whip. [illegible] to be proud of [illegible] the best whip in a country [illegible] New England.

[illegible] cloth habit; shod with dainty high top riding boots; a black derby poised jauntily on her red-gold hair; sitting the saddle easily and gracefully; this is Dorothy Forbes any morning on the boulevard of Bar Harbor.

In the afternoon she is seen tooling along the broad, shady drives in a dogcart or dexterously driving a four in hand.

Best Whip in New England.

Miss Forbes has repeatedly been called the best whip in New England. She may owe her driving prowess to concentration. For she has had riding lessons, she has been coached in driving, and for several years she has spent much of her time in the saddle.

Not so very long ago Miss Forbes surprised society folk by driving a tally ho. She is a conspicuous member of the Brookline Country Club [illegible] as a man and [illegible]

Hair of Golden Hue.

Though of medium height Miss Dorothy gives the impression of being tall. She is slender and she holds herself to full height in walking. Her hair is of a most exquisite golden hue. Just in front it is soft grey, while the gold looms up startlingly behind it. This odd little streak of grey in her hair affords her much amusement. Often when wearing a veil she is mistaken for a middle-aged woman.

Miss Forbes is the daughter of J. Murray Forbes of Commonwealth avenue.

She was chosen president of the Vincent Club because of her popularity and pacific disposition. At the time she was elected there was trouble in the innermost circle of the exclusive club and a split was threatened. Miss Forbes settled all disputes diplomatically.

The favorite color scheme of Miss Forbes is blue. Usually some shade of blue is chosen for her charming costumes.

A favorite photograph of Dorothy Forbes and one as she appeared in Vincent Club theatricals.

HOW A LONELY WAIF FOUND A HOME

"My Love Amabel"

Printed As Part of This Newspaper To-day, to Point an Engaging Moral.

BY CURTIS DUNHAM.

INTO the [illegible] of this newspaper [illegible] engaging to ask to be directed to the nearest asylum for waifs with nothing to say for themselves.

But this waif, though sadly tattered and travel stained, bore stamped on its pretty face the best possible recommendation to [illegible]

[illegible]

"My heart was high with hope and fear,
When I approach'd [illegible]
[illegible]
And while she drifts in slumber land,
Beneath the latticed window where the shadows lie,
I come to thee and take my stand
To sing of love divine that cannot die."

To-day members of the fair sex are used to being approached thus timidly, romantically and reverently. One wonders how many of them realize to whom they owe a position so exalted in the minds of those who woo them. It was to the singers and composers of just such songs in the twelfth century, less than 200 years after women were still no better than chattels of those who claimed their love and enforced their [illegible] masters to their slaves during the Dark Ages.

Yet in less than two centuries, in a period when there were no newspapers, no magazines and no books save the laboriously engrossed manuscripts of monks, the earliest of the troubadours changed all this. Noble ladies were being emancipated from conditions which no washerwoman would tolerate nowadays by the chivalrous [illegible]

[illegible]

"The very day one glimpse of you I caught,
When you were pleased to let me see your face,
My heart took leave of every other thought,
And every wish—except for you gave place;
For you awoke within my heart such [illegible]
[illegible]"

[illegible] His lady was always represented as flawless. Whatever was good in him came from her. Long desires for her were worth more [illegible] but any other woman [illegible] Of nothing else but her did he think or meditate. His only longing was to serve her. Though far away, he was truly near her, for 'no one can separate lovers if their hearts desire to feel together.' Even the wind that blew from where she was gave more satisfaction than the nearness of any one else. She gave him smiles and laughter, and he would be foolish to ask more of her.' Merely from seeing her face he was [illegible] and joyous. Never had he told her of his love, nor had she discovered it, yet still he loved her as much as if she had already accepted him. He did not even [illegible] look. All covertly and secretly and quietly he paid her an increasing court in his heart."

This romantic impulse—later to become so much more self seeking—was the first of the two greatest moral revolutions the world has ever known. The other was the religious impulse which inspired the crusades whereby to wrest the tomb of the Saviour from the infidel. In fact the two became merged, and the greatest benefit, even more than to art and letters, accrued to womankind.

Originally, it will be seen, the "romance" was a song addressed by poets to noble ladies. It was not "popular" in those days, nor is it now. But it was a very pretty little waif of 'romance' that wandered into the office of this newspaper to inspire these recollections of its really marvellous origin; and in its fresh, new suit of type you are sure to grow to like it very much.

Newport

Newport, R. I., Sept. 23.—The strenuous season being over, Newport society is improving not a little of its spare time trying to decide whether or not [illegible] is engaged to Miss Charlotte Warren, the pretty daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Warren, whose Summer villa [illegible] Mr. Hyde's reported engagement [illegible] Miss Gladys Deacon [illegible] heed and frowned severely on the uncalled for scandal of family history attached to the story. In this new story the believers and [illegible] divided and neither gets any satisfaction from the Equitable man, who will only say that he never grants interviews to reporters.

Word comes by wireless that the Warrens set sail for this country October 10. In the meantime the Warren cottage is being kept up as usual by the presence of a retinue of servants, including a housekeeper.

It has become known that James Hazen Hyde has become enamored of Newport society as he finds it in its [illegible] and that he proposes becoming a member of the cottage colony another season.

Pride's Crossing

Pride's Crossing, Sept. 23.—Henry C. Frick, who has just returned from a brief trip abroad with Mrs. Frick, is delighted with the progress being made on his quarter of a million dollar house at Pride's Crossing. He was on from New York to see it Thursday and yesterday. The mansion will be ready for occupancy by next May.

J. W. Mellons of Pittsburg, who has been spending the Summer at Pride's, has become so attached to the surroundings that he is looking about for a site to build. Wealthy Pittsburgers seem to think a great deal of the North Shore, there being no less than a dozen here now.

SHUN PUBLIC LIFE FOR SIMPLE DUTY OF THE HOME.

Compares Irish Women with Those in America

Irish women are primitive as compared with American women in their variety and manner of pleasure seeking.

In Ireland there is no cafe or restaurant where women entertain. A hostess does all her entertaining at home.

I would reason in Ireland wouldn't think of spending several hundred dollars on a ball gown.

Intensely modern, but much more assumptive than Irish women in grooming are the American women.

now recently conspicuous in Boston, talked with me the other day and made these striking remarks in commenting on the women of Ireland.

So modest and unassuming is this charming woman that she has never before allowed her views for publication on topics of almost universal concern. She has always been accompanied her husband on his lecture tours, has been his helper and comforting companion and as she has spent much of her life in Ireland and knows the women there as few outsiders do, her views are valuable.

But I was so glad that a woman of her talents and experience would have much to say that would be of interest to women especially, and it was quite by chance, for my engagements were many, that I found her in at the Hotel Lenox. She is such a surprise. I expected to find the wife of a famous Irishman, a rather prim, dressed up with the Irish look, good deal on top in the matter of ornaments and everything else, and there was. There was a woman, a very modern woman, but Mrs. Redmond is not Irish by birth. She is an American, Miss Apolo Nagle, the granddaughter of Admiral Nagle, who fought the British in the Revolutionary war. She married John Redmond and came to America with her husband on his lecture tour.

Winning Simplicity.

Dressed in a simple gown of black and white, with a few touches of color, and with her hair arranged in a simple fashion, Mrs. Redmond was a picture of refinement and gentle womanliness. Her conversation was quite as charming as her appearance. Her voice is low and sweet, and she speaks with a slight accent, which is not Irish, but which is very pleasing.

The first question I had upon my mind I put to her. What do the Irish women think of the Irish men?

"I think that one would live nearer to nature than American women. Our women are simple and natural and sincere.

"And in Australia there is none of the pernicious system of tipping. Workers there are paid enough so that tips are not necessary, and a person employed in a manufacturing establishment would be insulted if anyone offered him a tip.

"Then there is a difference in dress. Over here I notice the women wear their hats in the theatre, and they wear them in the street. There is a difference in dress, too. In Australia the women wear their hair in a braid down the back, and they wear long coats made of thick leather, shoes that are not mannish, but are heavy. For instance, if they are going to be generally out of doors, they wear walking skirts, plain shirtwaists and coats. Simplicity is the thing striven for.

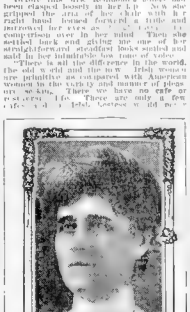
"A society woman in Ireland wouldn't think of spending several hundred dollars for a ball gown. And yet they are beautiful. And those same bodices do not fit too closely to be graceful.

"Are Irish women athletic," I questioned.

Irish Women Athletic.

"More athletic women would be hard to find. They row, swim, golf, ride horseback and play tennis. As a result they are healthy and have splendid complexions. Their hair is beautiful, too.

"Mrs. Redmond and my daughter and her husband have been visiting in Ireland lately. I think it will be well for the Irish women that they have had the experience for their example have a beneficial effect, and I hope it will. A young woman in Ireland would not think of going out alone in the evening. Miss Nagle has gone to the theatre alone in Boston, and Miss Redmond has been out alone. Miss Nagle has gone to the theatre alone in Boston, and Miss Redmond has been out alone. Miss Nagle has gone to the theatre alone in Boston, and Miss Redmond has been out alone.



"I simply couldn't make the shortest kind of a speech in a crowd."—Mrs. William H. K. Redmond.

"Miss Nagle has gone to the theatre alone in Boston, and Miss Redmond has been out alone. Miss Nagle has gone to the theatre alone in Boston, and Miss Redmond has been out alone.

Live Nearer to Nature.

"I think that one would live nearer to nature than American women. Our women are simple and natural and sincere.

Duty to the Children.

"Indeed I think not," answered Mrs. Redmond. "The high their home influence in the affairs of the land the more important it is for them to neglect their home lives to do what is really the work of the men. How can they bring their beliefs and principles into the children's lives if they are not at home? I think the child of a good mother is of more importance than the child of an Irish father who has sought up his child because of his wife's devil.

"The true compensation differed in the different countries in the home life of the Irish and the American women.

Before this Mrs. Redmond's hands had been clasped loosely in her lap. Now she settled herself more erect in her chair with her right hand leaned forward a little and over her head it rested her left hand. Then she would stop speaking for a moment, giving one of her bodily movements, and as she continued she would speak with her hands.

"There is all the difference in the world, the old world and the new. Ideas of women are primitive as compared with American women in the variety and manner of pleasure seeking. There we have no cafe or restaurant life. There are only a few cafes and a hotel. Society would not

"WHEN IT WAS DARK" The Story of a Great Conspiracy Begins Serially in Next Sunday's American

The Greatest Literary Sensation of the Century

M[illegible] good in Christianity. My words and writings may have helped to lift the evil of superstition and hereditary influence from the eyes of many men, and in that sense I am an enemy of the Christian faith, I suppose. My sincerity is my only apology—if one were needed. You speak with more harshness [illegible] I have thought it your pleasure or your duty to use."

Gortre arose. "Man," he cried, with sudden sternness, "I know! You hate our Lord and would work Him evil. You are as Judas was, for to-night, it is given me to read far into your brain."

Schaube rose quickly from his chair and stood facing him. His face was pallid. Something looked out of his eyes which almost frightened the other.

"What do you know?" he cried, as if in a swift stroke of pain. "Who—" He stopped as if by a tremendous effort.

Some thought came to reassure him.

"Listen," he said. "I tell you, paid priest as you art, a blind man leading the blind, that a day is coming when all your boasted fabric of Christianity will disappear. It will go suddenly and will be swept utterly away. And you, you shall see it. You shall be left naked of your faith, stripped and bare, with all Christendom beside you.

"Your pale Nazarene shall die amid the bitter laughter of the world, die as surely as He died two thousand years ago, and no man or woman shall resurrect him. You know nothing, but you will remember my words to-night until you also become as nothing, and endure the inevitable fate of [illegible]."

He had spoken with extraordinary vehemence, hissing the words out with a venom and malice, general rather than particular, from which the churchman shrunk shuddering. There was such unutterable conviction in the thin evil voice, that for a moment the pain of it was like a spasm of physical agony.

Schnabe had thrown down the mask; it was even as Gortre said, the soul of Iscariot looked out from those eyes. The man saw the clergyman's sudden shrinking.

The smile of a devil flashed over his face. Gortre had turned to him once more and he saw it. And as he watched an awful certainty grew within him, a thought so appalling that beside it all that had gone before sank into utter insignificance.

He staggered for a moment and then rose to his full height, a fearful loathing in his eyes, a scorn like a whip of fire in his voice.

Schnabe blanched before him for he saw the truth in the priest's soul.

"As the Lord of Hosts is my witness," cried Gortre loudly, "I know you now for what you are. You know that Christ is God."

Schnabe shrank into his chair.

"Anti-Christ!" pealed out the accusing voice, "you know the truth full well, and knowing, in an awful presumption, you have dared to lift your hand against God."

Then there was a dead silence in the room. Shnabe sat motionless by the dying fire.

What Prominent Americans Think of "When It Was Dark"

"When It Was Dark," the tremendously powerful new religious novel, which was made the subject of a remarkable sermon by the Bishop of London at Westminster Abbey, [illegible] advised [illegible] to read it [illegible] after [illegible] the American clergy [illegible] has ever [illegible] before.

[illegible] the New York Sunday American [illegible] the compete novel will appear in next Sunday's Magazine section by arrangement with G. P. Putnam Sons, owners of the American [illegible] American clergymen who have read it, and by a noted woman writer.

BY JULIA WARD HOWE.

This book appears to have been written by one who considers the doctrine of Christ's resurrection as the very central point in the current faith of Christendom. It presents well drawn pictures of the various [illegible] of mind with regard to religion.

Its strongest contrasts are presented in the persons of a ritualistic curate, deeply devout and wholly believing; a scholarly and tolerant vicar, a Jew de judaized, but strongly opposed to Christianity, and an archaeologist of the highest rank, but of an [illegible] who under the pressure of threat [illegible] exposure and with the bribe of [illegible] and wealth, scruples not to betray the trust of his position by the production in Palestine of a spurious inscription stating the body of Christ to have been removed from its original resting place and secreted in a second tomb by Joseph of Arimathea.

The infidel Jew is the devisor of this imposture, by which he hopes to [illegible] from the world every [illegible] Christianity. England is made to appear to have been convulsed [illegible] related. Historic facts [illegible] in the morning [illegible] the discovery of the deception [illegible] relieves the public mind [illegible] to well merited [illegible].

A perusal of this work suggests first of all the thought that the discovery of such [illegible] genuine, [illegible] any [illegible] evidence are liable to be variously judged by people of different intellectual bias. Carlyle once said in a conversation with Mr. Emerson: "Well, Christ died upon the tree. That built yonder kirk, that brings you and me together."

The life and deaths of the Divine Master, his teaching and example, these have revolutionized human society. Many may doubt the story of his resurrection. No one can doubt the record of his beneficent life and heroic martyrdom. If we were convinced even that he was not seen in bodily form after death would the Sermon on the Mount lose its authority? Would his parables be repudiated? Would his terrible rebukes of [illegible] pass unheeded?

I for my part can conceive of no doubt nor question which could invalidate for us the seal set by Divine Providence upon the mission of Christ and his unspeakable gift to the world.

All England Excited Over Weird Book Disclosing Plot to Upset Christianity.

BY THE REV. JOHN MERRITTE DRIVER.

For vastness and daring of conception, originality of treatment, dramatic surprises and denouements, rush and thrill of recital, passionate and blood red fervor, yet never becoming perfervid, and, in the main, brilliancy of literary arrangement and execution, "When It Was Dark," the story of a great conspiracy, is a great book.

I read the 391 pages of the book at a single sitting. It is so vivid, realistic and passionate one could easily believe it was flung off at a single writing. Much of it is as swift, virile and furious as anything that came from Byron and Shelley, though with none of their occasional coarseness.

At least one chapter is worthy of the pen of a Shakespeare. The argument ad hominem excoriation of Mrs. Humphrey Ward, as Lucy Armstrong, is one of the keenest and fiercest pieces of polished invectives we remember to have read. The veiled reference to Bradlaugh, Gladstone and other English notables remind one of the political novels of the younger Disraeli.

The leading characters are real flesh and blood people and not wire-worked automata; especially Gotre, the author of the book, Spencer, Father Ripon, Llwellyn, Schnabe, Sir Michael Manichoe, Gertrude Hunt. From necessity "Liberals" and Unitarians are severely dealt with, but never roughly or uncouthly. The rejoicings of Unitarians over the discrediting of Christ and the downfall of Christianity is a lurid and immensely suggestive bit of writing.

The portrayal of the results upon the Pagan world and upon the social philanthropic and business life of the Christian world of such a discovery is the work of a master hand. Strangely enough ever and anon in the onward rush and wavering retreat of this Titanic struggle between gigantic persons and principles, there creep in occasional light gleams and music notes that are most restful and delightful.

Those who are familiar with London, Dieppe and Jerusalem will be charmed with the author's descriptive searchlight flashes and hurried but true-to-life silhouettes.

Should the book be widely read as it probably will be, it will give great offence in certain circles and there will undoubtedly be many heated indignant rejoinders, all of which will be very illuminating and by no means unprofitable. After all is said, "When It Was Dark," the story of a great conspiracy, is a great book, a genuinely great book and we believe its publication in serial form by the BOSTON AMERICAN and its circulation among the people will result in great good.

BY THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP SAMUEL FALLOWS.

"When It Was Dark" is a most marvelous moral and religious work of fiction, daring in its conception and [illegible] and destined to arouse tremendous [illegible] among religious leaders [illegible] of the world.

I do not wonder at all that the Bishop of London advised his [illegible] to get the book and read it. I would [illegible] echo his admonition and earnestly advise the clergy and laity to read this epoch-marking book. I shall refer to it in the prelude to my sermon next Sabbath morning and urge my parishioners to read it.

Its publication by the BOSTON AMERICAN can only result in great good to those who take advantage of the opportunity thus afforded them to read it.

BY THE REV. CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY.

I have just finished reading "When It Was Dark."

Contrary to my practice, which is to give no public commendation of books unless they are sent me for review by some literary paper or magazine, I write in behalf of this story.

Not for a long time have I read anything at once so strong and so enthralling. There are many criticisms which might be made, the chief being that the means is not adequate to the end. I cannot imagine that such a discovery [illegible] endorsement could produce such consequences in the world; but granted that it might do so, the author has worked out and developed the resultant appalling catastrophe with a skill and force which is nothing less than wonderful. It moved me profoundly.

I have no interest in the sale of the book, of course, but if what I have written shall serve to promote its wider circulation among men I shall feel that I have done humanity a service.

REV. A. E. GEORGE.

The book is truly fascinating. To make a theological atmosphere interesting and attractive in fiction has been [illegible] by the author.

The book will give hope and instill confidence in the realities of the Christian faith. It is well worth reading and the shifts in its scenes are always interesting—in fact, spectacular, but Christ [illegible] a deeper reality in human life [illegible] it has aimed to teach.

HENRY CORNELL WILLSON, CHRISTIAN SCIENCE READER.

"The book, which has so excited England and caused the bishop of London to refer to it in a sermon, tells in many graphic chapters what Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy has said in a brief sentence in "Science and Health."

"There is but one way to heaven and harmony, and Christ shows us the way."

The Spiritual Body—A Sunday Sermon—By Mrs. Albert C. White

M[illegible]—"What I have done every minister's [illegible] to do." In this modest manner the [illegible] C. White, pastor of the Mt. Washington Church of Haverhill, explains why she [illegible] pulpit last Sunday, preached [illegible] service, and why she has filled his place on other occasions when he was indisposed.

[illegible] White was not serious, but was enough to destroy the usual interest manifested in the service. Without any uneasiness Mrs. White volunteered. When the congregation gathered it was surprised to find the pastor's wife occupying the pulpit instead of the pastor himself.

Though Mrs. White is a busy woman, attending to the wants of her eight [illegible] to aid her husband in his [illegible] and her religious fervor [illegible].

Mrs. White is a native of Augusta, Me., where she was born forty-four years ago. She has studied art at the Cooper Institute in New York City, and though crowded with many home and church cares, she finds time to practice her art to-day. While Mr. White was located in Ware and also in Pepperell, his wife had occasions to fill his place and preach. Wherever she has preached the congregations have asked her to preach more often, but this Mrs. White has always declined to do on the [illegible] that her home cares are too numerous for her to devote time to anything else.

Mrs. White's text in this special sermon is:

"There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body."—I. Cor., xv., 44.

Her sermon follows:

There is more interest to-day in the question of a future life than one would naturally suppose, judging from the intense absorbtion of [illegible] mind in the interests of the present life; and while we believe in [illegible] existence, rationally cherished and wisely [illegible] and bewailed, it is but natural [illegible] future life and have at least the same interest in it as the husbandman who sows his seed and dreams of the future harvest.

Much interest centers round this question of the body of a future life. What body shall we have in that future life? Will it be a real body, tangible [illegible]?

To see the matter [illegible] one must quote and comment on so much of I Corinthians xv. as gives the great Apostle's convictions on the subject. Not that any man is obliged to accept Paul's conclusions because Paul reached them, by reasoning to his conclusion, but because to a reasoning mind Paul's conclusions do seem reasonable.

After narrating vividly the reappearance of Jesus after his crucifixion, he says: "But if there be no resurrection from the dead then is Christ not risen, then is our preaching vain and our faith also vain."

How should Christ or any human being rise from the dead? This he answers as follows: "But some man will say, how are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come? Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened unless it die. And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body which shall be, but bare grain, it may chance be of wheat or of some other grain. But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased Him and to every seed its own body."

How perfect the illustration!

There is no visible promise or aspect of [illegible] in the decayed, disorganized grain just before it germinates, yet there is the hour when it is most full of the promise and [illegible] life.

Now fitly follows his great [illegible] but with positive strength and triumphant assurance. [illegible] celestial bodies and bodies terrestrial, but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun and another glory of the stars, but one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection. It is raised in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality—then shall be brought to pass that saying that is written, 'Death is swallowed up of victory.'" Clear and explicit is the statement of a spiritual body which is not to be, but which is, and of what we call death is the sowing or disintegration and decay of the natural or material body and the uprising from it of the spiritual body, the image of the heavenly, the ethereal form fitted for the finer service of the life beyond."

Elsewhere Paul says: "Though the outer man perish, the inner man is renewed day by day." Language could not be more definite than this which tells of the daily building up within us of the spiritual body which death does not touch save to release from the perishing earthly form, that it may freely serve the immortal spirit in the higher stages of our eternal life.

MRS. ALBERT C. WHITE.

In an hour of open and illuminated vision the natural inspiration which comes in all ages to great souls dwelling on high themes, words fitly chosen, gave the authoritative wisdom of the apostle to the world. For centuries those words have given strength and consolation to millions of crushed and smitten human beings, helping them beside open [illegible] to see what we call death as only birth to a higher life.

Was Paul possessed and inspired by a great truth, or was he portraying a vain imagination? Can it be possible that words which have poured a stream of light down the ages were only set in array to describe an illusion? The thoughts that breathe, given in words that burn, which [illegible] are revelations of great truths, and none others live and last and grow in power.

The spiritual body is a reality, invisible, usually, to our poor outer eyes, but perfect long after our physical forms have turned to dust.

Professor Knight, a thoughtful writer, represents the views of others in our time when he says: "The spirit shrinks from a ghostly or disembodied state as its perpetual destiny—but how to find a body, how to incarnate itself, or even to conceive the process by which it could be robed anew, remains a puzzle."

In the light of the Pauline statement we cannot be disembodied, but are robed anew at the hour when the fleshly garment is cast aside; and we cannot lose our personal identity and continued existence. A great and blessed change in the thought and life of the world will come when these conclusions are widely realized and accepted.

Tertullian, a father in the church centuries ago, said: "The soul has the human form the same as the body, only it is delicate, clear and ethereal." John Wesley said: "The soul, as Paul calls the spiritual body, seems to be the immediate clothing of the spirit, never separated from it either in life or death; not affected by the death of the body, but envelops the separate as it did the embodied spirit."

Such views set apart by a small but gifted company must be wrought into the thought and life of the present as deep convictions. Whoever takes up this task will find in it light and power; whoever ignores it with wilful blindness will but gather dust and ashes in dead fields. With the reality of the spiritual body opens a wide range of kindred thought.

Paul may have had some trance or vision making his views more vivid, for he speaks of himself as sometimes, "Whether in or out of the body I cannot tell. God knoweth."

But these physical experiences are now being seen as natural, yet wonderful, results of our inner faculties, which sweep out far beyond the range of our external senses. He states the matter more fully than his commentators, for he makes the process of building up the spiritual body daily and constant within us as though that upbuilding from its finer elements, guided by some shaping design, were a part of the plan and work of our bodily life on earth.

To clairvoyance we must look for the descriptions of the release of the celestial form when we are born into a higher life, which best verify and agree with the Pauline view. One such description must suffice.

For to discover the truth is joy; to accept and proclaim it is life; to reject or ignore it is death.

New England's Puritan-Jewish Sabbath a Failure, Says Pastor; Time for Reform

Rev. George W. Kent, pastor of the Woodbury Memorial Church, Providence, R. I., has attracted unusual attention by his views on Sunday observance. The sermon which he preached last Sunday, in [illegible] community.

Which, for Americans, the Continental Christian Sunday, the Puritan Jewish Sab[illegible] and demands rational settlement. Mere dogmatic assertion leaves it just as much a problem. The use of [illegible] God. It is one of the splendid problems given us to work out for ourselves.

The Jewish Sabbath, he contended, lacks the [illegible] and breadth to make it adequate to the needs of modern times. Jesus was called a Sabbath breaker because, in contradiction of the Jewish law, he de[illegible] "the Sabbath was made for man."

Only American Sunday.

Mr. Kent argued that this original, liberal view of Sunday observance is the only American Sunday. It is the only Sunday [illegible] the effort to hold to the Puri[illegible] common in America [illegible] the continental Sunday [illegible] not, like the Puritan Sunday, keep "men's religion and their recreation men's holy days and their holidays in separate water-tight compartments," but teaches that "whether we worship or rest or play, the heart and the will with which we do it make the day a holy or an evil one."

Following is Mr. Kent's sermon in full:

Rev. Mr. Kent's Sermon.

Which, for Americans, the Continental Christian Sunday, the Puritan Jewish Sabbath, or a pagan holiday?

"Here in the United States there is probably no other issue which so challenges attention and demands a rational and righteous settlement as the use of Sunday. It touches almost every human interest. Labor and rest, business and pleasure, religion and morality, health and happiness, the family and society, are all vitally concerned in the best possible solution of the problem.

"And it is certainly a problem. Mere dogmatic assertion leaves it just as much of a problem as before, and complicates it with bigotry and intolerance.

"The fact seems to be that the use of Sunday isn't something God has settled for us; it is one of the many and splendid problems God gives us to work out for ourselves, patiently, faithfully, with good sense and good will.

"And that we have it to deal with and [illegible] we solve it in a way to [illegible] does not depend on Bible verse [illegible] in the deep recesses [illegible] instincts and high [illegible] of human nature. These [illegible] Bible verse and established [illegible] usage. And these will hold [illegible] problem until we settle it aright.

Sabbath of the Jews.

"The Jews had their Sabbath. With [illegible] sublime God-consciousness they saw the Sabbath to be rooted in the law of God. With their noble passion for religion they made the first and highest consecration of its leisure to worship. And then with Jewish ineptitude and narrowness they saw no other use for it. They made it a day that only Jews would care to keep. They denied it the range and breadth that would have fitted it for other times and circumstances and have made it welcome to mankind. When Jesus met with it, instead of being made a broad and blessed opportunity it was being made a burdensome observance. His larger use of it earned for him the name of Sabbath-breaker. And this he surely was. Nothing could more completely break the Jewish Sabbath than that great, penetrating utterance of his "The Sabbath was made for man."

"Not only is that the key to such a use of Sunday as we must seek and find, but it unlocks at once and forever the prison house of any narrow Jewish Sabbatism. Indeed, the whole gospel of His life and teaching, which puts the faithful purpose and the loving will in the place of rigid law and set observance, does the same thing.

"Jesus broke with Jewish Sabbatism. And I am almost prepared to say that no other matter of scholarly research is so certainly established as the fact that when the early Christian church instituted the dear Lord's Day it was NOT the Jewish Sabbath. It was not a transformed Jewish Sabbath.

"Lord's Day" a New Creation.

"It was a new creation, joyous and free. A holy day and a holiday. Begun with services of praise and gladness, blessed by helpful and kindly works of mercy, marked by happy family and social gatherings, the free and natural expression of human need and longing at [illegible]. All the way up the Christian centuries that simple, unrestricted, heart-directed keeping of the dear Lord's Day has persisted in spite of abuse on the one hand and [illegible] on the other. It holds its own against the Jewish Sabbath in most of the Christian countries of the world.

"And I do not hesitate to affirm that what is known as the Catholic or Continental Sunday is the real Christian Sunday, the Lord's Day of the early church. Of course it is imperfectly fulfilled, as every Christian ideal is imperfectly fulfilled by such imperfect people as live outside America.

"But that the keeping of Sunday according to the ideal of the Lutheran and Roman Catholic and Greek branches of the Christian church is the original and genuine Christian ideal I see every evidence to prove conclusively. It is a day for man. Beginning with religious services, the churches generally are thronged. So answering man's natural need of worship and of uplift from the thoughts and cares of every day. Then the afternoon and evening are used in all the countless ways, recreative, social, educative, pleasurable, for which leisure from one's daily toil is so beneficent and needful.

Abomination to Americans.

To many respectable people of New England, whose resources are unusually ample, whose tastes are quiet, whose temperament is melancholic, whose excesses run to eating and moping rather than to drinking and dancing, who suffer much from indigestion and whose opinions are the only ones that God is supposed to tolerate—to many such people the Continental Sunday seems to be a by-word and an abomination. But to anyone who tries to feel for all the varying needs and conditions of [illegible] in England and Scotland and New England the ancient Jewish Sabbath displaced the Christian [illegible] name and [illegible] Calvin [illegible] be kept as [illegible] day rather than let the Jewish [illegible] be imposed upon the Christian [illegible].

"He [illegible] when he found John Knox [illegible] on Sunday afternoon.

"Let us dance on Sunday or do anything [illegible] rather than the Sabbath of the Jews invade our Christian liberty."

"But there was that in the spirit of Puritanism that love of order and of its enforcement, that strength of piety and scorn of play, that religious severity verging upon dourness with which nothing less than the strictest Jewish Sabbath could accord.

"And any fairly learned man can tell you the history of the Puritan substitution of the Jewish Sabbath for the Christian Sunday. Even to the doctor of divinity who first published the claim that the two were identical. It was a part of the general Puritan reversion from the Gospel and the New Testament back to the law and the Old Testament. We need not question that a great earnestness and an inflexible righteousness went with that Puritan spirit. But neither can we question that a hard and narrow outlook, a Christless want of sympathy with other human needs and longings than their own went with it, too.

Failed to Satisfy.

"And the Puritan Jewish Sabbath has not satisfied, in any abundant, Christian-like way, one-half the varied necessities of men. As long as it had to do with a somewhat heavy, stolid people, like the Scotch and English, who take their pleasure sadly, it inflicted no grievous hardship, although it led to no rational and wholesome joy in the day, outside the church's service.

"As long as the communities in which it was imposed were [illegible] rural [illegible] all outdoors [illegible] not felt intolerably, although fifty years ago men like Charles Dickens and Richard Cobden showed what a miserable day it made of Sunday for the poor folks huddled into city slums.

"But in America to-day our Sunday must be made to reach and bless a population as diverse as throughout the continent of Europe. It must meet the needs of age-long varieties of taste and temperament and training. It must reckon with the shot in driving monotonous conditions of modern industry. It must win the faith in it of men who more and more are growing independent, intelligent and conscious of the rights and needs of their human nature.

"I need hardly say how inadequate and incompetent to so large an enterprise the Puritan Jewish Sabbath is. Its failure is prodigious. Everybody breaks it, especially the clergy. And in the name and spirit of Jesus I believe it ought to be broken.

"Then comes the evil of all rigid, narrow legalism. Intolerable laws make lawlessness. With too many of our religious teachers it is the Puritan-Jewish Sabbath or nothing, and men take to the nothing. And thus to millions of Americans Sunday is getting to be nothing but a Pagan holiday. Indeed, I must apologize to decent Paganism for so describing it, as I find no record of a Pagan holiday without some recognition of things sacred and above mere shallow self-indulgence.

Day Wasted and Abused.

"Where can you find that recognition in the way that Sunday is wasted and abused by millions in the most Sabbatarian of countries? I consider it a libel, an outrageous libel on the Catholic or Continental Sunday to liken our Sabbatarian failure to it. The continental Sunday, which isn't merely Catholic, but Protestant and Greek as well, is the Sunday of a religious and rational principle. It is based upon the Christ-taught ideal of the day for man, alike for the thirsts and hungers of his soul and for the thirsts and hungers of his God-created nature.

"The Lutheran pastor who preaches on Sunday morning and goes fishing with his tailor and his cobbler Sunday afternoon is being loyal, not to any Jewish law, but to the Christian principle that Sunday is good for communion with the highest and holiest and good also for communion with the lowliest and simplest and dearest of common things.

"How immeasurably far from our mere lawless, faithless failure to keep the Puritan Jewish Sabbath is the continental Christian principle that holds the day twice blest, alike in its opportunity to rest and recreate the soul and in its call to rest and recreate the body and mind and life!

"I think the one solution of the Sunday problem lies for us along this line.

"Our leaders and teachers must let the Puritan Jewish Sabbath go. It isn't Christian. It can't be made American. It won't expand to twentieth century requirements.

"Let them try the Christian Sunday, growing out of Christian principle instead of fixed in set observance. When they make religion and the church worth while to men, when they make God and the Gospel real, men will hail the day of rest for its blessed opportunity to worship and aspire. When they proclaim the worth and sanctity of recreation, pleasure, social intercourse men will learn to practice these on Sunday in ways that shall not desecrate the day.

"Let them quit keeping men's religion and their recreation, men's holy days and their holidays in separate water-tight compartments. Let them teach the Gospel of Jesus that it's the heart and will that make the difference, and whether we worship or rest or play the heart and the will with which we do it make the day a holy or an evil one. Then we shall begin to solve the Sunday problem.

Sabbatarianism a Failure.

"Nothing can come of a rigid Sabbatarianism however rigidly enforced. Like those other Jewish laws, of eye for eye and tooth for tooth, it seems so short and straight a road, but it reaches nothing high or good or permanent.

"The patient process of the Christian Gospel, teaching and leading and inspiring men to love things clean and true and kind and worthy, if we could only have it instead of dogmas and curses in the name of the Lord, would solve for us not alone the Sunday problem, but all those other problems, of the alienation of the working people from the church, of the gulf between the so-called religious and secular and of the weakened power of the pulpit in the life and business of the world.

To Our Readers and Friends:

ANOTHER AMERICAN CLUB

AT THE urgent request of many of our readers and friends, the American has undertaken the organization of another Co-operative Encyclopedia Club, similar to the one which closed June 30th. The success of the first Club was much greater than had been anticipated. It was a signal victory for practical Co-operation; a long step forward in the cause of popular education. Thousands of families who never before knew the delight and value of a thoroughly high grade Encyclopedia were enabled, at small cost and with but little personal sacrifice, to secure the newest and best Encyclopedia ever offered to the American public. It is estimated that fully half a million dollars was saved to those who secured memberships in this Club.

PUBLIC DEMANDS IT

Since the Club closed, on June 30th, numerous letters have been received from those who were fortunate enough to secure the Encyclopedia, testifying to their great satisfaction with the work itself, and their appreciation of the AMERICAN'S enterprise in placing it within their reach.

Hundreds of letters were also received—from business men as well as wage earners—asking if it would not be possible for the AMERICAN to [illegible] so that those who [illegible] to secure membership [illegible]. As [illegible] the AMERICAN is especially [illegible] Club, which will be conducted on the same popular plan as the one which recently closed.

We were exceedingly fortunate in securing from the publishers of the Encyclopedia another small edition on very nearly the same terms as before. This at first seemed impossible, as the publishers had planned, in fact were about to begin their subscription sale at the regular prices. However, in view of the great advertising which the work will receive, through its being unanimously chosen for the Club, they have consented to postpone their campaign until the memberships in this new Club have been allotted.

PRACTICAL CO-OPERATION

The AMERICAN'S object in forming these Clubs is purely educational. First, to place useful and necessary books in the homes of the people; and second, to demonstrate the practical power of co-operation.

Heretofore the best Encyclopedias have been held at such high prices that only the rich could afford to own them. This is largely the result of antiquated and expensive selling methods. Before the books finally reach the [illegible] through the hands of [illegible] middlemen, such as agents, canvassers, etc., each of [illegible] the actual [illegible] favored few who could afford to pay from $80 to $150 for th[illegible]

The American's Co-operative Club does away entirely with all middlemen, complete sets being shipped direct from the binders to Club members. By guaranteeing to the publishers of the Encyclopedia the immediate sale of an entire edition, all selling expense is eliminated; hence those who join the Club are enabled to secure sets at the lowest wholesale price and on terms that [illegible]. This is practical co-operation; no one makes a profit except the [illegible] of the book.

NEW STANDARD ENCYCLOPEDIA

After looking over the field carefully for an encyclopedia that would measure up to all requirements, the NEW STANDARD was selected because in the judgment of the eminent critics and scholars it is the best and most practical reference work on the market.

Points of Superiority

It is the best Encyclopedia for busy men, for home use, and for school and college students.

It is the work of [illegible] scholars, professional and business men.

It is [illegible] in the treatment of [illegible] clear and simple language.

It is [illegible] having [illegible] at enormous expense.

It gives the pronunciation of foreign names and is full of cross references.

It is purely American in origin, and in conformity to American educational ideas.

It is the best Encyclopedia for reading and home study.

Opinions of the Critics

Principal Felter, Brooklyn High School: "A most admirable work."

Congressman Champ Clark, Missouri: "A great time saver."

State Superintendent Skinner, New York: "A convenient and reliable authority for reference."

Professor Egan, Catholic University: "The clear statement of facts has induced me to recommend the work in many quarters."

Professor Stoddard, New York University: "Concise, accurate, convenient and well up-to-date."

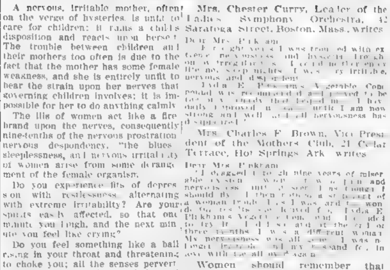
Tired, Nervous Mothers

Make Unhappy Homes — Their Condition Irritates Both Husband and Children — How Thousands of Mothers Have Been Saved From Nervous Prostration and Made Strong and Well.



Mrs. Chester Curry — Mrs. Chas. F. Brown

A nervous, irritable mother, often on the verge of hysterics, is unfit to care for children; it ruins a child's disposition and reacts upon herself. The trouble between children and their mothers too often is due to the fact that the mother has some female weakness, and she is entirely unfit to bear the strain upon her nerves that governing children involves; it is impossible for her to do anything calmly.

The ills of women act like a firebrand upon the nerves, consequently nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, "the blues," sleeplessness, and nervous irritability of women arise from some derangement of the female organism.

Do you experience fits of depression with restlessness, alternating with extreme irritability? Are your spirits easily affected, so that one minute you laugh, and the next minute you feel like crying?

Do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you; all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound, pain in the ovaries, and especially between the shoulders, bearing down pains; nervous dyspepsia, and almost continually cross and snappy?

If so, your nerves are in a shattered condition, and you are threatened with nervous prostration.

Proof is monumental that nothing in the world is better for nervous prostration than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; thousands and thousands of women testify to this fact.

Mrs. Chester Curry, Leader of the Ladies Symphony Orchestra, 42 Saratoga Street, Boston, Mass., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For eight years I was troubled with extreme nervousness and hysteria [illegible] [illegible] I could neither enjoy life nor sleep nights. I was very irritable, nervous and despondent.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and proved to be [illegible] I have daily improved [illegible] until I am now strong and well, and all nervousness has disappeared."

Mrs. Charles F. Brown, Vice President of the Mothers' Club, 21 Cedar Terrace, Hot Springs, Ark., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I dragged through nine years of miserable existence [illegible] and nervous [illegible] should [illegible] a woman [illegible] Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound [illegible] to try it [illegible] three months I was a different woman. Women should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine that holds the record for the greatest number of actual cures of female ills, and take no substitute.

Free Advice to Women.

Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write to her for advice. Mrs. Pinkham's vast experience with female troubles enables her to tell you just what is best for you, and she will charge you nothing for her advice.

DRAGNET OUT FOR PROMINENT PHYSICIAN IN SUIT CASE MYSTERY

THIEF SHOOTS 2 MEN, 3,000 IN PANIC.

Great Crowd of Shoppers In Providence Store Flee in Terror from Pistol Fired by a Man Caught Stealing

ARRESTED, SAYS HE IS A MILL OPERATIVE

Providence, Sept. 23.—Detected in the act of stealing shoes in the great department store of the Outlet Manufacturing Company at 9 o'clock to-night, Frederick A. Balcom fired three shots from a thirty-two-calibre revolver, fatally wounding Samuel Steiner, the manager of the store, who was trying to turn him over to a policeman, wounding a shopper and throwing the customers in the store, which contained more than 3,000 people, into a panic.

As three revolver shots cracked, a plate glass window splintered and two men fell to the ground with blood flowing from their wounds, while a policeman seized and disarmed the thief, women screamed, several of them fainted, and a serious panic was averted only by the instant efforts of the proprietors and heads of departments, who calmed the shoppers.

Store Full of Shoppers.

The Manufacturers' Outlet is one of the largest department stores in the city. It was filled with shoppers at a few moments before 9, when the shooting took place.

Samuel Steiner, the manager of the store, a man thirty-four years old, was passing through the shoe department when he saw a young man stealing shoes. Not desiring to create a scene in the building, Steiner quietly followed him from the store, with the intention of turning him over to the first policeman he met.

As the man emerged from a Weybosset street door, with the manager close behind him, Patrolman Thomas Harvey of the Fifth station, approached, patrolling his post. Steiner seized the thief and called for the officer. The prisoner drew a revolver and began to fire.

Bullet Through Lung.

The first bullet struck Steiner under the left shoulder blade, perforated a lung and at the Rhode Island Hospital is believed to be fatal. He sank to the sidewalk and the thief fired twice more, the second shot striking Joseph Roberts, of No. 382 Weeden street, Pawtucket, a shopper, in the left side of the back, inflicting a wound that is not regarded as dangerous. The third bullet smashed a large plate glass window, but struck no one.

Patrolman Harvey wrested the revolver from the man's hand, overpowered him and sent him to the second station, where he gave his name as Frederick A. Balcom, a mill operative, living at No. 107 Howell street, this city.

Novelist Here on the Umbria Gets Note From Roosevelt.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Sept. 23.—Hall Caine, the novelist and playwright arrived on the Umbria late to-night. He received at the pier a note from Oyster Bay asking him to lunch to-morrow with the President.

The invitation will be accepted if Mr. Caine's health will permit, but he feared to-night that he would not be well enough to leave his hotel to-morrow.

It is also understood that while in this country he will gather material for a new book that will be written in defense of the money power, which he is said to regard as not altogether an evil.

NEPHEW OF JOHN D. MAY BE CHIEF OF STANDARD OIL

"Brother William's" Boy May Succeed Invalid Son of the Senior Rockefeller.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Sept. [illegible]—William G. Rockefeller has been picked out by Wall Street as the probable future head of the Standard Oil Company, now that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has been forced to [illegible] [illegible] business matters owing to ill health.

William G. Rockefeller is the son of William Rockefeller and a nephew of John D. Rockefeller, the present head of the "System."

Old Mr. Rockefeller has been gradually withdrawing from active personal participation in the management of the various companies in which he is interested until now he occupies only two offices. These are the presidency and directorship of the Standard Oil Company.

"Brother William."

The interests of John D. Rockefeller in the various railways and industrials companies in which he holds stock are represented with few exceptions by "Brother William." He is a director or officer in thirty-one different corporations, in each of which the Rockefeller interests are the controlling factors in the management. In late years, however, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who, as Mr. Lawson puts it, "has been rapidly educated into the secrets" of the Standard Oil business methods has been elected into the directorate of several companies in which his father has large interests.

The most important of these is the membership on the board of the United States Steel corporation. Previously he had also been elected a director of the Standard Oil Company, of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, the Delaware, Lackawana and Western Railroad Company, the American Linseed Company and the Federal Mining and Smelting company. He also was made a trustees of the University of Chicago.

As Heir Presumptive.

Wall street now believes that he will have to give up all these positions unless his health should improve. Men who have sat at the same directors' tables with young Mr. Rockefeller do not believe however, that his recovery can be expected in the near future. Should he die, then William G. Rockefeller would step into his place, as heir presumptive to the management of the greatest trust on earth.

DE HAVEN-GOODWIN DUEL TO DEATH?

Tragic Talk After Private Drama Over Pretty Miss Parker.

New York, Sept. 23.—Thespians in New York, and those who are not thespians, were still discussing with great interest to night the private drama in which the leading actors were Miss Florence Parker, the pretty young actress, who played Sister to Nat C. Goodwin last season in "The Usurper"; the redoubtable actor himself and Carter DeHaven, the hero in "Dolly Dollars."

The renewed interest in the drama lay in the report that it is to be supplemented by a tragedy, as the result of a challenge alleged to have been sent to Mr. Goodwin by Mr. De Haven to fight a duel to the death. Mr. De Haven refuses to discuss the matter. Miss Parker is invisible and Nat Goodwin, so report says, has started for Hot Springs, Va.

IDENTIFIES BODY FOUND IN CHARLES

John T. Dix of Cambridge Street Had Been Missing 10 Weeks.

Mrs. John T. Dixon, living at No. 545 Cambridge street identified the clothing upon a body found in the Charles river as that belonging to her husband. He disappeared from home ten weeks ago and had not been heard from since. Dixon was thirty eight years old and a laborer.

FELL FROM WINDOW 2 STORIES; MAY DIE

Martin Reenes, 3 Years Old, Has Skull Fractured in Cambridge.

Martin Reenes, three years old, whose parents live at No. 51 Washington street, Cambridge, fell from a second story window there last evening. The child's skull was fractured. The boy was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital. He will probably die.

STEAMER BOUND FOR BOSTON GOES ASHORE

Grounds off Savannah Harbor on Way to Take Cotton Cargo.

Savannah, Ga., Sept. 23.—The steamship City of Birmingham, of the Ocean Steamship Company's line, went aground near the mouth of the harbor this afternoon. Three tugs have gone to her assistance. The steamship was on her way here to load a cargo of cotton for Boston.

RICH BACK BAY MAN WEDS NURSE.

Member of Exclusive Set of Boston and Salem Startles Relatives and Friends by Marriage to Catholic Girl

ROMANCE BEGAN IN GRIEF FOR FIRST WIFE

Frank R. Kimball, one of the wealthiest residents of Salem, who also has a residence on Newbury street, this city, has thrown consternation into Boston and Salem society circles by his marriage to Miss Katherine A. Arnold, a beautiful Nova Scotia girl, not only because she is not of the fashionable set in which the Kimballs have moved, but because he was married by the Rev. Fr. J. J. O'Keefe of St. Cecilia's Church, under a dispensation, the bride being a Roman Catholic, while he is a Protestant.

There is much romance in the story of the courtship that has ended in this marriage. It was in 1904 that the first Mrs. Kimball died, and the shock of her death made Mr. Kimball so ill that he went to a Boston hospital for treatment. After being discharged from there he was nursed by Miss Arnold. When he recovered he induced her to give up her profession to become his housekeeper. His marriage to her, which took place, according to the return filed with the city registrar, a week ago, is the next chapter in the romantic story.

Mr. Kimball, who is fifty-three years old, inherited from his father, the late Edward D. Kimball, Boston broker and merchant in the East Indian trade, half of a great fortune, estimated at more than $1,000,000, the other half going to Edward Adams Kimball, Frank R. Kimball's son. Edward Adams Kimball came into some prominence a few years ago by his marriage to a Brookline college girl, which surprised his friends.

The new Mrs. Kimball came from the Provinces to Gloucester about six years ago. Later she moved to Salem, where she was graduated as a trained nurse from the local hospital, and made her home in lodgings in Church street, that city, until she was engaged to nurse Mr. Kimball, after the death of his wife.

Mr. Kimball, with Miss Arnold as his housekeeper, has resided at No. 214 Newbury street, next door to his son, Edward Adams Kimball, whose home is at No. 212. There has been a coldness between the two relatives, although they were next door neighbors, and friends say that the younger Mrs. Kimball does not purpose to receive the wife of her father-in-law socially.

This does not appear to trouble either Frank R. Kimball or his bride. They are now on a honeymoon trip, after which they will return to the Newbury street home.

MOLINEUX TO SUE HIS FORMER WIFE

Would Restrain Her From Use of His Name on Stage.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Sept. 23.—Blanche Chesebrough Molineux Scott has been threatened by a lawyer, who claimed to be a representative of her former husband, Roland B. Molineux, with a lawsuit to restrain her from using his name. Mrs. Scott launched upon a local theatrical career last Monday at a Brooklyn play house, where she has been singing a number of songs at each performance. She was billed as Blanche Chesebrough Molineux Scott, against the protest of her husband, Wallace D. Scott.

It is a question whether the law gives her the right to the use of her former husband's name after the marriage to Scott. This, it is said, can only be settled by a suit at law.

A lawyer, representing himself as Molineux's agent, called upon Mrs. Scott at the theatre to-day and made a formal demand that she discontinue the use of her former husband's name.

MEDFORD RUM AGAIN BEING DISTILLED IN OLD PLANT.

Materials for Manufacture Are Landed at Night, and Famous Liquor Is Being Made as of Old on the Lawrence Estate

The famous Medford rum factory in Medford, owned by the Lawrence estate, which was closed last June amid great public rejoicing of the residents of that city, was re-opened last night, and hundreds of gallons of rum, it is said, are being distilled there now.

The revival of the industry was accompanied by circumstances that indicated that the proprietors were not courting publicity. The vast six-story storage house is still empty, the raw material for the rum having been transported direct to the boiling plant and dumped into the vats under cover of darkness.

The residents of Medford learned last night with surprise that the industry that they believed had been forever removed from their midst, had been revived.

Brought Ashore at Night.

It was learned that the three-masted schooner that for years has carried the molasses for the rum, brought ninety barrels of it up from Charlestown on Thursday. The barrels remained in the hold of the vessel untouched, until late last night, when they were brought ashore, and a gang of nine men under Foreman James McDowell, trasferred them direct to the boiling plant, dumped them into the vats under which fires were in readiness, and before midnight the establishment was in full blast.

The manufacture of rum was one of the leading industries of Medford in the early days of that section. The Lawrence distillery was established in 1735, and until the first of last January, with scarcely an exception, the fires under the immense vats had not been cool for a day.

LIQUOR RAID IN MEDFORD FOR FIRST TIME IN 4 YEARS

For the first time in four years a liquor raid was made in Medford last night when twenty-four bottles of ale, twenty bottles of lager and a quart of whiskey were taken from the Hotel Boulevard. The liquor raid is believed to indicate a lively campaign against other such places in the town. Mrs. Alley M. Harris was arrested as proprietress of the Hotel Boulevard, and is charged with illegally keeping liquor for sale.

Can YOU Aid in Solving the Suit Case Mystery?

SOLUTION OF THE GHASTLY MYSTERY OF DEATH WHICH WAS DISCLOSED BY THE FINDING OF A SUIT CASE CONTAINING THE HEADLESS AND LIMBLESS BODY OF A GIRL IN WINTHROP HARBOR IS SOUGHT BY STATE AND CITY POLICE. IT MAY BE WITHIN YOUR POWER TO HELP. SOME TRIVIAL HAPPENING WITHIN YOUR SIGHT MAY TURN A NEW LIGHT ON THE MYSTERY.

IF YOU HAVE OBSERVED ANYTHING WHICH MAY THROW LIGHT ON THE MYSTERY PLEASE COMMUNICATE BY TELEGRAPH, TELEPHONE OR IN PERSON WITH THE BOSTON AMERICAN, NO. 80 SUMMER STREET, IMMEDIATELY. FOR INSTANCE:

If you are a cobbler or harness maker, have you AT ANY TIME put a new handle on a dark tan or olive suit case?

Have you seen a man or woman carrying a suit case of that color, at any time recently?

Have you seen such a suit case in a wagon, express room or elsewhere?

Are any female members of your family missing? Or do you know of any missing woman?

DIVES FROM BRIDGE INTO NIAGARA FLOOD

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 23.—An unknown man jumped last night from the upper steel arch of the bridge into the river in view of a car full of people. As the car approached he was seen climbing the iron grill to the rail.

Standing for a moment poised on the rail he took off his hat, waived his hand, shouted, "Good bye," and dove head first, turning over and over in his flight of 160 feet. His body was seen only once after it struck the water.

DERELICT WHALE MENACE TO SHIPS

New York, Sept. 23.—A derelict whale is the latest danger reported lurking in the middle Atlantic, directly in the course of trans-Atlantic trade. Last Wednesday the tramp steamship, St. Andrew, of the Phoenix line, in yesterday, ran into a flat head whale, measuring eighty or ninety feet, and cut off ten feet of its tail.

The St. Andrew was not injured by the encounter, but the mutilated whale, according to the captain, will probably float there like the derelict of a ship, and prove a menace to smaller craft.

WINTHROP HARBOR BEING DRAGGED FOR HEAD AND LIMBS OF VICTIM

Scores of Stories About Men Carrying Dress Suit Cases and Strangers Seen Near Winthrop Being Investigated

FACTS BROUGHT OUT BY MEDICAL AUTOPSY

Hiding behind a reputation which he believes unassailable, the police think, is the physician or surgeon murderer of the girl whose mutilated body, washed up by the waves to the door of the Winthrop Yacht Club, furnishes the strangest mystery of crime New England has known in recent years. For a time the physician may be safe, but unremitting labor to unravel the death puzzle may reveal his identity at any moment.

Seeking still the head of the victim of this atrocious crime, so that identity of the young woman may come, the police will to-day visit Snake Island and Apple Island in their search. It is their belief that on one of these islands the missing head and limbs may have been buried, or possibly cast up by the action of the water.

Already grappling hooks in the hands of the police have searched the depths of Winthrop harbor, over vast spaces, with no result. Yet the police have heard the story of a boy who believed he saw a woman's head floating, her hair streaming. They have heard the stories of two men who are confident they saw a woman's stocking-encased limb drifting with the tide.

A GIGANTIC DRAGNET.

Over Boston, Winthrop and the surrounding towns a gigantic dragnet has been thrown by the police. One thousand men are inquiring, seeking, searching every nook and cranny for any happening, however trivial, which may illuminate the case. Chief Shaw, Chief Watts and Chief McNeill of Winthrop are working hand in hand.

Medical Examiner Frank Harris, who performed the autopsy on the headless and limbless body of the girl, believes that the remaining portions of the body will be found in the water. He expects that in time they will come to the surface, possibly by Tuesday. He cites the case of Myra Mitchell, in which the dismembered limbs were finally recovered.

In line with this, Chief McNeill of Winthrop has issued a request to sailormen [illegible] resembling a part [illegible] by the finding of [illegible] will final [illegible] girl be made. That [illegible] is run down by another [illegible] suit case, which [illegible] evidence.

These are now being run down by the shrewdest sleuths in the city and State.

Trying in their own way to aid the final solution of the case, thousands of persons have visited Winthrop, where the body was found beside the pier of the Yacht Club, and have walked along the shores searching for what might have

Dead Girl Blonde, With Flaxen Hair

She was fair and her hair was flaxen; probably her eyes were blue. A blonde of 5 feet 4, or it might be 6, inches in hight, and her weight 135 pounds approximately. Well nourished and developed, with skin so fair that nature left no physical spot or blemish there, and she was apparently twenty-four years of age.—Deduction made by Medical Examiner Harris after autopsy.

Police in Dragnet Search Get Names of a Number, Any One of Whom May Have Been Victim of Suit Case Tragedy.

Here are the missing young women of Greater Boston whose description accords in some respects with that of the suit case murder victim. Is one of these the slain [illegible]?

MRS. MARTHA [illegible], No. 1[illegible] Smith street, Roxbury. Blonde, thirty-six years [illegible] corresponded with that of dead girl. [illegible]

MRS. SUSAN BAILEY, widow, No. 281 Second street, South Boston. Brunette, twenty-eight years [illegible], weight 150. Disappeared September 18.

MRS. CHARLES JOHNSON, No. 376 Washington street, Lynn. Bride of three months. [illegible] four years old, five feet three inches, weight 1[illegible]. Disappeared in Boston August 27.

MISS RUTH F. HANSON, [illegible] River. Blonde, twenty-one years, well-developed, five feet two inches, weight 120 pounds. Disappeared September 2, carried suit case.

MRS. ELISHA WHITTIER, Grantham, N. H. Blonde, about twenty-six years, five feet four inches, weight 150 pounds. Disappeared two weeks ago from Lawrence. Was to undergo operation for appendicitis. Had suit case.

MRS. WILLIAM SAWTELLE, No. 32 Silsbee street, Lynn. Blonde, five feet eight inches, twenty-nine years, weight 1[illegible]5. Disappeared four weeks ago. She and husband separated.

MISS JOSEPHINE A. MULDOWNEY, No. 38 Bolton street, South Boston. Blonde, sixteen years old, unusually well developed, five feet four inches, weight 135. Disappeared August 14.

By a house to house canvass in which more than 1,000 policemen were engaged, it was found that number of women who resembled in some respects the girl who was found slain in the suit case in Winthrop Harbor are missing from [illegible]. Reports from other nearby places add to the list, yet in the description of each there does not appear the vital connecting link.

One woman whose disappearance has attracted the direct attention of the police as a result of the strange murder mystery is Mrs. Charles Johnson, a bride of three months, who lived with her husband at No. 376 Washington street, Lynn. She was with her husband in Boston on August 2[illegible] and on Green street she disappeared. From that time to the present she has not received [illegible].

Here is the story [illegible] the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Never Saw Her Afterwards.

"We were as happy as two married people could be. All was well with us. We came to Boston to do some shopping. While I turned to light a cigar she walked on and I never saw her afterward. I [illegible] sure there was no reason [illegible] me of her own free will [illegible] what makes [illegible]"

Mrs. [illegible] mother [illegible] Mary Mul[illegible] deny [illegible] deaf [illegible] look strangely sometimes. She was operated upon for appendicitis two years ago at [illegible] Hospital.

Mrs. Martha Mone of No. 125 Smith street, Roxbury, has been missing from her home since Wednesday morning, September 20, leaving without a word to any one as to her destination. She is described as a comely blonde, thirty-six years of age, five feet six and one half inches in height and weighing 165 pounds. She had blue eyes and a light complexion. When she left home she wore [illegible] and [illegible] an Astrachan fur cape and a black hat.

Wore Dark Blue Dress.

Mrs. Susan Bailey, a widow who lived at No. 281 Second street, South Boston, has been missing since September 18. She is described as twenty-eight years of age, [illegible] feet 2 inches, weight 1[illegible]0 pounds. She wore a dark blue dress, a light brown [illegible] and a [illegible] hat with flowers.

Mrs. [illegible] Whittier disappeared two weeks ago from Lawrence. John J. O'Brien of No. [illegible] Essex street there thinks hers was the body found in a suit case in Winthrop Harbor.

"What makes me feel confident that it is the same woman," said Mr. O'Brien, "is the fact that the suit case and the strap [illegible] as described in the [illegible] papers, does not differ in the least [illegible]"

Medical Examiner Thinks Other Parts of the Girl's Body Will Soon Be Found

BY DR. FRANCIS A. HARRIS,
MEDICAL EXAMINER OF SUFFOLK COUNTY.

SOME day next week I expect material assistance in the solution of the suit case mystery. My opinion is based on the Myra Mitchell case. In that case the body was disposed of in much the same manner as this. It was four days after the first part was found that the limbs were brought to the surface.

The recovery of the remainder of the body, especially the head, should help in solving the case in determining the identity of the woman.

POLICE KEPT BUSY FOLLOWING CLUES

Elimination of possibilities progressed steadily yesterday under the combined efforts of the State Police and the Boston and Winthrop police in the attempts to unravel the tragic mystery which was disclosed by the finding of the body of a young woman in a suit case in Winthrop cove. There were a hundred stories, and patiently each and every one was traced, most of them to that point where they broke off flat and lost value as possibilities.

Mrs. Charles P. Rolfe, No. 114 Bremen street, East Boston, and her beautiful daughter, Pyra Rolfe, told a story of possible value. They are the wife and daughter of a well-known awning maker, doing business in Cambridge. Mrs. Rolfe said to a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN:

"A man who passed my house shortly after noon, Thursday, carrying a large dark dress suit case frightfully loaded. He might have been a professional man. He was of medium size and dark complexion. His black moustache was stubbed off on a line with his mouth. I saw him come out of [illegible] street and from that corner until he passed my house he changed hands on that bulging dress suit case three times and perspired freely.

Man Carried Heavy Case.

"The dress suit case bulged out unevenly. It was not so dark as the one shown me in the office of the State police, but that was because the last was thoroughly soaked with water. The man was dressed in black, with polished shoes and a wide brimmed soft hat. He was a stranger to me. I thought he might be waiting for a rig."

Miss Pyra Rolfe said:

"Yes, it is all true about the man and the suit case. My mother was attracted by the barking of our dog in the cellar. She thought somebody was plaguing the dog from outside. He is rather savage sometimes. Somebody suggested that he might have sniffed the blood of the body of the unfortunate creature in that dress suit case."

F. W. Johnson of Waverly Oaks road, Waltham, who saw the photograph of the suit case in which the torso of the murdered woman was found, reproduced in the BOSTON AMERICAN, called at the office Saturday afternoon and told the following story of a man who rode into Boston on Wednesday afternoon, the day before the body was found, and who carried a similar suit case, and another large bag:

Answered the Description.

"I was sitting on the middle of the three smoking seats of the open car that left Waverley at 1.45, due at Park street at 2.30. Sitting on the same seat was a man with a large suit case, similar to the one shown in the BOSTON AMERICAN. It also answered the published description of the case in which the torso was found, although I did not notice closely enough to remember if it had a strap on it.

"The suit case was unusually large, and of a dark color. It was evidently an old case. The man also had a yellow colored bag, evidently a new one. It was not a suit case, but a large leather bag.

"I could not give a minute description of the man, but my general recollection is that he was a man of medium size, neatly built, with dark complexion. He wore dark clothes and a derby hat. He looked more like a professional man than a workingman. I do not recall for certain whether he had a mustache but I believe he did.

Rowed Away in a Boat.

Still another clue which may mean something in the case was the story yesterday told to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN by Harry Quinn of No. 288 Marginal street, East Boston. With a friend he was at work at Holmes Wharf in a machine shop. He and the other man saw a man go to a boat and get in it carrying what appeared to be a large dark suit case, then row away.

It was about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, an hour before the body was found, that Mr. Quinn and his friend saw a man putting into a rowboat a large suit case made of dark green leather. The man didn't attract their attention especially [illegible]

If the man with the suit case went around back of Apple Island he could have reached the back part of the island in [illegible] minutes or so, and would have arrived there at just about [illegible] tide. Then if he had quietly dropped the suit case overboard, as he easily might have done without being observed, the currents made by the shifting tides in that locality could easily have carried the parcel over to the Winthrop shore in the time which elapsed before it was found, as has been described.

Carried a Heavy Bundle.

From South Boston also came a clue which the police are investigating. Jeremiah Slattery of No. 386 Athens street, an employe of F. G. Burns, a furniture mover, says he saw a man carrying a heavy dress suit case coming down D street Tuesday afternoon at about 1 o'clock. Peter Wolan [illegible] No. 260 D street, South Boston, saw two men carrying a heavy bundle and his attention was attracted to them by their suspicious actions.

SUIT CASE HANDLE STRONGEST CLUE

Inanimate clues are few in the mystery which centres in the death of the young woman found in Winthrop Harbor, and thus far the police have been face to face with a stone wall in their efforts to make these clues of value in the final solution of the mystery. The one great clue and the one on which they hang all their hopes of finding the slayer of the girl, is the repaired handle of the suit case.

In the first place there is the suit case itself. There are only five of these in existence. At first glance it would appear that this would be of value to the police. But on top of this they are confronted by the statement of the sellers of these suit cases that each went for cash and therefore there was no record kept of the person to whom they were sold. Coupled with this is the fact that all the suit cases were sold more than two years ago.

Besides the handle, the suit case offers two other clues which might in time mean something. There is the figure "8" apparently, or it may be an "X," a mark in red crayon with a loop at the bottom. This has been examined under the microscope. It may mean nothing, yet they are not willing to let it go without the fullest investigation. It is probably the mark of a baggage master, a mark such a might be found on thousands of other pieces of baggage.

Patch on Suit Case.

Then, too, there is a slight patch on the suit case. This is a patch repaired by the sellers of the suit case, Josiah Cummings Company, not more than ten days ago. Then a man of professional appearance brought the case in, had this slight rip repaired and went away.

Therefore, with these two clues exhausted the police have turned all their energy to the solution of the mystery of the ownership of the suit case through the putting on of a new handle, evidently the work of a harnessmaker or a cobbler. It seems that an awl was used. There is not the delicacy of touch of a trunkmaker, and further, there is an appearance that the handle was put on particularly to strengthen the hold for a heavy weight.

The police believe that the man who repaired this suit case, because of its peculiar nature, will readily remember having done so and they are now trying to find him. It may be that it was done at a great distance from Boston, but they are inquiring right and left for the name of the man.

"This is the key to the mystery," said Police Captain Logan to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. "The police must first find the man who owned the suit case. From there will be something to work on."

The rubber or [illegible] cloth which was found around the body offers slight promise of illumination. It is the kind of rubber that is ordinarily used by physicians and surgeons. It is common, procurable anywhere and sold to anyone who [illegible]

Girl Is Only Sixteen.

One of the new disappearance cases reported to the police as a result of the drag net for missing women was that of Miss Josephine A. Muldowney, daughter of Mrs. Johanna Muldowney of No. 38 Bolton street, South Boston. The girl is only sixteen years old, but described as unusually well developed for her age. Mrs. Muldowney has heard that her daughter is alive and is [illegible] but is worried, and has reported the case to the police.

William Sawtelle, an expressman living at No. 32 Silsbee street, Lynn, reports that his wife has been missing for four or five weeks. He has not been living with her for several months. She is about five feet eight inches tall, weighs 125 pounds and of light complexion.

"On Wednesday, the day before the body was found, about half past twelve, noon, I was standing in front of my door when I saw a man and two boys on the marsh next to the gymnasium. One of the boys was prodding the soft ground with a stick and the man was talking to him.

"They walked off in the direction of Sumner street, toward the Commonwealth docks. The man carried a suit case, the sides bulging and with a strap around it. He was dark, about five feet ten inches in height and I should judge weighed 165 pounds. He was neatly dressed in a brown checked suit and wore a dark derby hat. The suit case was evidently very heavy, for he leaned over considerably as he walked along. One of the boys following him had a long bag slung over his back. It reached nearly to his heels and he was carrying it with difficulty also. It was like a potato sack, but longer.

THE BOYS CAME BACK.

"The boy carrying the sack or bag wore a brown checked suit, apparently of the same material as [illegible] of the man and a small cap. He was lighter complexioned than the other boy, who besides being very dark, wore a [illegible] back suit [illegible] [illegible] back [illegible] of his [illegible] Both boys had on neat white turndown collars, and their clothes, like the man's, were very [illegible]

"It was their neat almost stylish clothing with their presence in such a strange place, and with their burdens, that attracted my attention.

"About half an hour afterward the two boys came back without the man and without the sack. One of them had been carrying. They eyed me as they passed and went towards Broadway, along D street. It is my opinion that the boy could not have carried his burden as far as the Commonwealth docks, although they had time enough without the sack to walk there and back. I am satisfied that if these boys can be found they can tell who the man was."

WORE MANY DIAMONDS.

Yesterday the police of Boston were officially requested by Deputy Chief Neal of the State police to take a hand in the investigation. There seems to be some belief that the crime was committed in the West End in one of the many private hospitals there. This would be inconsistent, seemingly, with the theory of a man of high standing having committed the crime, yet this belief is being investigated.

One of the most striking of the many women who have visited the State House to see the suit case there was richly dressed and wore many diamonds. She appeared to be middle aged, wore spectacles and a dark blue silk dress. The water soaked suit case was sent for. Her manner was [illegible] perturbed, and her stay was short. She had been riding in an elevated car in the direction of East Boston, and saw a man carrying a suit case which seemed heavy. But on taking a close inspection of the leather case that [illegible] the body of the murdered woman [illegible] she could not identify it.

Despite the reticence of the police it is a fact that a [illegible] formerly a resident of the North End, is being searched for by several detectives. This [illegible] has frequently quarreled with his wife, a young and comely woman, and the police have the word of different persons that on various occasions he has been heard to threaten her. Both husband and wife are missing.

Medical Examiner Harris has filed his report of the autopsy on the body, but it is announced that it will not be made public until such time as Professor Whitney finishes his chemical analysis of the organs of the dead woman.

GRAPPLING FOR GIRL'S HEAD AND LIMBS.

Sleuths Hope to Find Missing Parts of Suit Case Victim's Body In Winthrop Cove or in the Adjacent Waters

Convinced that the severed head and limbs of the girl whose torso, enclosed in a suit case, was thrown in by the tide at the very front of the Winthrop Yacht Club house, are in the waters nearby, the police of Winthrop yesterday dragged for them with grappling hooks. Nothing was found.

The police have a definite reason for believing that the remainder of the body is in the cove, probably drawn there by the same person or persons who threw the head and limbs there. This belief is based on the BOSTON AMERICAN'S discovery of a boy who saw what he believed to be a body of a woman, with long, dressing, dark hair floating on the ebb tide out off Shirley Gut. He is not at all certain that it was a head, but was so frightened that he turned home, terrified, and told his mother

Saw a Dark Object.

This boy was Harry Greene, who lives on Snake Island. He was out in a boat lobstering. He saw the dark object approaching and looked at it. Then believing that it was a head, and seeing the lobstering hair he quickly turned about and rowed away.

With this fact in their possession and the additional fact that William Pritchard and Charles Eskridge saw what seemed to be the foot and leg of a woman floating, encased in a stocking, together with the probability that they were found in the place where the remainder of the body would be thrown, the police worked actively at the work of dragging.

Sank When He Touched It.

Pritchard, who is manager of the Point Shirley Club, was out lobstering on Tuesday, the day of the finding of the body. He saw a stocking sticking up above the water, a woman's stocking, which seemed to enclose a leg and foot. He tried to get it by pulling it into the boat, but it disappeared as he touched it with his oar. He believes that this was one of the limbs of the slain girl.

Charles Eskridge, proprietor of the boating establishment just north of the Winthrop Yacht Club house, saw the stockinged foot and leg floating in the water not later than Friday afternoon. It was then in the channel of Shirley Gut, but some distance from Deer Island.

"I didn't pay much attention to it until after it was some way astern," he said. "Then I thought was not worth while to turn back. I wish now that I had, for I am sure that it was the same stockinged foot that Mr. Pritchard saw. It showed the whole foot up above the surface of the water, and it looked as if a leg was attached to it."

The man who yesterday did the grappling were Police Inspector Douglas, Patrolman Purcell, Frederick Doran and Charles Eskridge.

BOY TELLS STORY OF HEAD IN WATER

To the police to-day Harry Green, a young resident of Snake Island, will tell the story of how he saw what he believed was a human head, floating face downward so that only the parting of the hair showed, while he was sailing his lobster boat through Shirley Gut.

Young Green reported to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter who found him at the Island late yesterday afternoon. This is the story in his own words.

By Harry Green.

It was about 11 o'clock last Thursday morning when I was out in my boat looking after the lobster traps. I was sailing along in a good southwest breeze which was putting me along at a pretty good rate when the thing bobbed up right in front of me.

It wasn't very far away, but I had a good look at it once. It was hair that I saw, almost black hair. There was a part in it and that was what attracted my attention.

But I don't like such things and I just turned away and got away from it as quickly as I could.

I came right back to the island and told my father what I had seen. I told him then I thought it was a head. He asked me why I didn't bring it in and said I wouldn't have received a few thousand dollars.

I'm not sure it was a head now. It might have been something else but that was the thought that was in my mind at the time. Since then I have tried to forget it. At the time I saw it the tide was at ebb.

Where that thing can be now I haven't the slightest idea. It may have been washed almost anywhere. It may have gone out to sea. It seemed funny that I should think it was a head and that in the afternoon they should find a body here in the water.

DECLARES SKILLED SURGEON THE MAN

Startling statements were made, in connection with the offering of a theory, to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN last night by one of the highest police officials, which bears on the mystery of the young girl found beheaded and limbless in a suit case in Winthrop cove. This theory is that the work of mutilation as well as the operation preceding, which caused death, was done by a skilled surgeon of high standing and not one of the men who make operations a profession.

Further, this statement, coming as it does from a high official, throws a strong side light on the methods of that class of men who make a business of these operations. Here is the statement in full. The name of the police official is withheld at his own request:

"The slayer of the girl whose dismembered torso was found in a suit case is, in my opinion, a surgeon and physician of high standing.

"Let me tell you something about the murderer which is told by the mutilated body of this woman. He is not a man who makes a business of performing these operations upon women. The babies and methods of what many claim are known to the police and there is nothing in the treatment of the body, or its disposition, which suggests their methods.

"They do not dissect and perform post mortems to learn the exact reason why the patient died. It is enough for them that she is dead, and their only thought is to dispose of the body so that it may never be found.

"Operators by criminal surgery have their own undertakers. The burial permit appears regular. There is nothing to die unnatural and the grave hides the secret.

"Criminal operators frequently have regular physicians who will supplement the original operation with a legitimate though unnecessary operation which may hide the evidences of the first one. In case of death the regular physician will certify to a death from natural causes.

"The death of a victim, if due to no murder mystery and that the crime doesn't belong to us at all but to Boston.

Questioned about the experiment, Inspector Douglas said: "I am satisfied so long as the department deems the experiment a success. I have had one hour's sleep in the last twenty-four and expect to do no better in the next. We are all willing to do anything that can possibly be done to catch the murderer of this unfortunate victim. I think Chief McNeill's men are a unit for hard work when the occasion calls and they all have confidence in his judgment."

SAW MAN IN BOAT WITH SUIT CASE

Investigations of a new clue is being made by the police in the mysterious suit case crime, furnished by Harry Quinn of No. 83 Hanover street, Boston, who saw a man deposit an olive green suit case in a row boat near Holmes wharf, East Boston, about a o'clock Thursday morning, the first time before the body was found at Winthrop.

Mr. Quinn told his story to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN last night.

"I was working at my machine in the Holmes Engine Shop on Thursday and Thursday afternoon, when, chancing to glance out of the window nearest, I saw a stranger on Wood's wharf which adjoins Holmes' wharf. My attention was particularly attracted to the suit case which the man carried and that at the present time before the body was found at Winthrop.

"It was a dark object, almost olive green, or a dark blue, and appeared to be filled to the bursting point. It appeared to be heavy, too, when the man deposited it into the boat, he mopped his face with a handkerchief and seemed to breathe a sigh of relief. I thought at the time that the case was of unusual color and that it was queer for a man to be carrying it even out to sea in a boat.

"The man seemed to feel my eyes on him, for he looked up at me, started at seeing me watching him, and then went back a few steps on the wharf and behind a small building and came back with a pair of oars. My machine had been run as far as I could get it then, and so I went to work on it again. I did not get another look at the window man, suit case and boat had disappeared when I next looked. I did not think much of the man if I saw him again. He was about five feet eight inches tall, weighed about 150 pounds, was of medium complexion and had a sandy mustache. He wore a light cap on his face, which was of a ruddy color. He wore a black coat, dark blue or black trousers and a black outing shirt with collar attached.

THOUSANDS SEEK CLUES ON SHORE OF WINTHROP HARBOR

Intense excitement has been caused all along the Winthrop shore by the discovery of the mutilated trunk of the mysterious victim. All day long several thousand persons were engaged in searching the shore, from the Battery to Shirley Gut and around to the Winthrop Beach station.

Little groups of men and women would be seen, turning over the sea weed and debris along the shore, and every one of the yachting and boating parties which went out gazed eagerly at the water, in an effort to catch a glimpse of the strange object which was seen on Wednesday afternoon by William B. Prichard.

TRYING TO PUT M'CALL OUT OF POWER.

New York Life Policy Holders Start Movement to Force Control of Company From Present President's Hands

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Sept. 23—Policy holders of the New York Life Insurance Company are preparing to make a determined fight against the continuance in office of the management of the company by John A. McCall, George Walbridge Perkins and their associates. Influential members of the committees from a Western State are taking the initiative in the movement, and already a committee of [illegible] has been appointed to look after their interests. They are determining that these men shall join Hyde and Alexander in enforced retirement.

The fight will be largely a battle for proxies, and in a short time policyholders will receive a request for proxies from a committee that is to be appointed for the purpose of voicing sentiment against the men at present in control of the company.

An influential banker who is conversant with the plans of the disgusted policyholders, of the New York Life said to-day:

To Force Cliques Out.

"A determined effort is to be made to force the McCall-Perkins clique out of the New York Life.

"It is realized that this will be a most [illegible] fight, but the [illegible] interested, and in addition to holding about 2,000 proxies they are in a position to [illegible] with the votes of the policyholders in their possession and a large agency force that is interested in keeping the present management in power, they will have a great advantage in gathering proxies.

"But public sentiment is being rapidly aroused against President McCall for his use of publicity funds in an effort to influence elections as is evidenced by letters made public to-day.

Rev. Lincoln Moore, pastor of the Riverside Baptist church, in a scathing manner denounced the McCall methods of management and called for the immediate revolution in the interests of the company and general morality.

Franklin Leonard Jr., a New Yorker, who holds a policy for $10,000 in the New York Life wrote to President McCall asking to know what his approximate value was which he had paid into the company for the protection of his family to collect his contributions for office.

TRYING TO PUT UNITED STATES AND CHINA TO BE ALLIES?

Secret Conference with the President Is Considered a Plan for Closer Trade Relations of the Countries

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Sept. 23—China has indicated a move towards closer trade relations with the United States, with a view to a virtual alliance of the countries. This is given out as the result of the secret conference at Sagamore Hill, in which President Roosevelt and Senator Lodge, chairman of the Foreign Committee of the Senate, Secretary of State Hoot and former Ambassador Choate took part.

It is said a visit to the President by Liang Cheng, the Chinese Minister. The minister asserted that he was commanded by his government to ask the intentions of the government with regard to a new treaty giving the Americans greater rights in China than they now have in return for an assignation of the Chinese exclusion law or a general treaty of commercial amity with reciprocal advantages.

It was intimated to the President, it is said, that China was very anxious to have the United States as an ally, to fend off any direct results to itself that might ingend from the Japanese-English commercial treaty.

The hint was conveyed that China did not feel over secure that peace could be published in Asia unless the United States were on the side of China and that if a treaty could be effected tantamount to an Anglo-American alliance China would grant many favors to her ally that [illegible] other nations.

HIGH OFFICIAL SAYS SURGEON OF STANDING WAS GIRL'S SLAYER

An official high in the police investigation of the dress suit case mystery makes this highly important statement:

The slayer of the girl whose dismembered torso was found in a suit case is, in my opinion, A SURGEON AND PHYSICIAN OF HIGH STANDING.

He operated on this girl and during the operation he lost his nerve. He bungled —and the woman died. Then it was up to him, frightened as he was, to hide the body.

He went to work to hide the identity of the girl by the means which a surgeon would naturally employ. He dismembered the body. There he was skilful. When it came to disposing of the body, he was no better situated than the average man of intelligence.

PROGRESS SO FAR SATISFACTORY, SAYS CHIEF W. A. M'NEILL

In a statement to the BOSTON AMERICAN at the end of the first day's work on the great murder mystery, Chief of Police William A. McNeill of Winthrop had this to say:

"So far the progress, considering the mystery in this case, has been satisfactory.

"With the assistance of the State police we are running down every clue that comes to us. Some have died miserably and others are still to be looked into. We have hardly expectations that they will reveal something, but we have hopes.

"By the autopsy there was shown to have been an unusual crime committed by a great going to think [illegible] small thing as sleep so long [illegible] anything to solve the mystery.

"We are going over every foot of the territory. Our little force is employed in searching all over the town for clues, and they have found some things that have looked good, some things significant. There may be something in them yet."

"You do not think the crime was committed in Winthrop?"

"It hardly seems so. Circumstances would seem to favor Boston. Still you never can tell."

"Do you think that the body came through the channel or was thrown overboard from a carriage on the road between Winthrop and Point Shirley?"

"That's a hard question to answer. Inspector Douglas has made some expert guesses in that line to-day, which I should say would indicate that the case could have come from the channel.

"However, the crime was undoubtedly committed in Boston. It doesn't seem possible that it could have been done here, but what relation the finding in Winthrop will bear to the place where the crime was committed I am sure I can't tell."

TO SEARCH SNAKE AND APPLE ISLANDS THOROUGHLY TO-DAY

After having searched through all parts of Winthrop and having run down every clue, every report offered them, the police will to-day turn their attention to the islands near Winthrop. Snake Island and Apple Island will be visited and thoroughly gone over.

Assisted by a detail of three men of the State force, the local police will run down everything in the vicinity of the cove. They looked up the clue furnished by Conductor Frank Berkley, who said he saw two dogs something overboard on Thursday. Berkley's train runs near the Point Shirley Yacht club.

Two young men were also fishing near there and a little girl who was watching him, the officers found that the two men had merely dropped overboard the bait they had been using while [illegible] fishing.

To make sure that there was nothing in the water at that point Chief McNeill, Inspector Douglass and Officers Harrell and McDonald secured grappling irons and boats and went over the bottom thoroughly. They found nothing.

Grappling irons were tried in various other parts of the harbor. They produced nothing.

CHICAGO GIRL, TOO RESEMBLES THE NOTED STATUE.

That Boston will win the first honor at the great beauty show in New York this coming Winter is the firm belief of every acquaintance of Elsie Richmond Stinson of Boston, who is to uphold the claim of New England to being the home of the most beautiful women in America.

Miss Stinson will find a most powerful rival in the person of Miss Alice Trenory of Chicago, who has been selected as the representative of the Windy City for the contest. Miss Trenory is a young lady of remarkable beauty, and if she wins the prize she will be one of the most talked of women in the world. Miss Trenory was first prize at the recent beauty contest given under the auspices of the Chicago Physical Culture Society.

Table Shows Similarity.

From a glance at the accompanying table the remarkable similarity in the forms of both women is apparent. With the exception of the chest contracted, the bust, biceps, hip and calf, the measurements of both women are identical. And in the cases mentioned the difference is slight.

Their height is the same, and the difference in weight is only two pounds in favor of Miss Stinson.

PHYSICIANS WHO USE PE-RU-NA.

Prescribes Pe-ru-na to His Patients.

Robert R. Roberts, M. D., Washington, D. C., writes:

"Through my own experience as well as that of many of my friends and acquaintances who have been cured or relieved of catarrh by the use of Hartman's Peruna, I can confidently recommend it to those suffering from such disorders, and have no hesitation in prescribing it to my patients."

Best Tonic He Ever Prescribed.

James Crozier, M. D., formerly U. S. Pension Office Medical Examiner, formerly on the Medical Board of Referees, U. S. Pension Office, in a recent letter from Washington, D. C., writes:

"I have often prescribed Peruna in my practice for catarrhal troubles, and after giving it a fair test I can cheerfully recommend your valuable remedy for coughs, colds and catarrh in its worst stages.

"It is one of the best tonics I have ever prescribed."

Peruna has proven its merits thoroughly and overcome all prejudice.

Pe-ru-na Beneficial for Severe Cases of Catarrh.

George C. Havener, M. D., Anacostia, D. C., writes:

"In my practice I have had occasion to frequently prescribe your valuable medicine, and have found its use beneficial particularly in severe cases of catarrh."

Merit Commands Attention.

Usually, physicians are not in favor of proprietary medicines.

It is only in cases where a proprietary medicine has by its superior merit forced itself upon their attention that the physicians will pay any attention to such medicines.

A Notable Exception.

They prefer to use the medicines which they prescribe

Peruna, however, a medicine becomes so popular that the people whom it cures are so numerous and manifest that the physicians do not hesitate to make public endorsement of it and use it in their practice.

Such has been the case with Peruna.

Recognized by Physicians.

For many years the physicians opposed it.

After a while, occasionally one here and there felt constrained to use it.

There are still many physicians who are opposed to Peruna, but the number of physicians who endorse Peruna and who make daily use of it in their practice is rapidly increasing.

Many Endorsements.

We append a few letters received from such physicians. These are fair specimens of the kind of letters we are receiving from physicians who have used Peruna.

BLAZE IN EVERETT LIKELY INCENDIARY

Damage of $30,000 Caused in Factory of Lee Brown Company.

Damage of $30,000 was caused by a fire believed to be of incendiary origin, in the factory of the Lee Brown Duster Company on Hawthorne street, Everett, last night. The fire started in the roof of the building, and is thought to have started outside of the building.

When discovered the fire had a good start on account of the building being of wood and well stocked with straw the latter caused rapidly. Two alarms were turned in.

E. B. Bourne, president of the company, said he could not tell the fire was deliberately set.

"I am not a boss; I never was a boss; I don't believe in a political boss. I don't believe in coercion; I believe in persuasion." —JAMES DONOVAN.

WHY THE SMILE OF "SUNNY JIM" DONOVAN IS A POWER IN POLITICS THROUGHOUT CITY

PARTY LEADER SAYS EMPHATICALLY HE IS NOT BOSS.

Superintendent of Streets of Boston Tells Eleanor Ames What Gives a Man Success in the Politics of a Big City

"SUNNY JIM" DONOVAN'S RULES FOR SUCCESS IN POLITICS.

'A politician to be successful must devote almost his whole time to politics.

He must be accommodating.

He must be agreeable.

He must be a servant of the public.

He must treat people decently.

To achieve popularity and success, he must be honest, sincere and upright with the constituency which he represents.

Snapshot by Boston American Staff Photographer.

"SUNNY JIM" DONOVAN AND HIS SMILE.

By Eleanor Ames.

If you want James Donovan, superintendent of streets, to deserve his accepted soubriquet of "Sunny Jim," take my advice and don't call him "the political boss of Boston." Yes, I know that's what people say he is, but don't repeat it to him.

Why not?

Because he doesn't like it the least bit. It makes his lips come firmly down over the strong white teeth which illuminate his smile, makes his eyes flash, his jaw grow firm, his face stern and breaks his mellifluous voice with harsh and metallic notes.

And yet they call him "Sunny Jim."

In my ignorance and innocence I erred to the extent of calling him the "boss" and with terror watched the transformation.

"Boss?" he said harshly. "Boss? I am not a boss. I never was a boss. I don't believe in a political boss. I don't believe in coercion. I believe in persuasion. Oh, dear, no, no, no," he declared, growing more and more emphatic, "indeed I am not a boss. You mustn't call me so."

Distress, genuine distress was in his tones now. I hastened to apologize.

"Oh, I won't, really I won't," I said, you see I never believed you were a boss (that didn't seem to please him either, I recall as I look back on it) but they told me you were and so I wanted to ask you what it meant to be a political boss and how you came to be one."

We were both silent for a moment.

It seemed my place to pick up the threads of the conversation.

If you're not a boss then, I said shyly, 'what are you?'

It is a Marvellous Smile.

"What am I?" he repeated, in melting accents, "I am the superintendent of streets. And I have another position, but it really does not amount to as much. Some years ago I used to be Superintendent of Lighting, and so I was appointed by the late Mayor Collins Superintendent of Lamps."

The smile lingered. It is a marvellous smile. It is no mere muscular contraction which stretches the mouth.

It is a rare something which creeps over the entire face from the square, determined chin with its [illegible] double to the silvery gray hair [illegible] thick and smooth, parts precisely above the broad forehead. "Sunny Jim" they have called him since the days of his boyhood. "Sunny Jim" he has become of late.

Of course it's a great deal to be Superintendent of Streets in Boston." I said, "and I think the streets are very nicely [illegible]. You are a political leader, aren't you? Don't you know the political [illegible] as well as you do your alphabet?"

The smile [illegible] a ringing laugh.

"Does any one ever know the political game as he does his alphabet?"

"I don't know. Is it a great study?"

"Very great and very puzzling sometimes. It is constantly changing. It seldom grows tiresome, though it is very often [illegible]"

"Would you call politics a business or a profession?"

"Why, I don't know, frankly. I can't say. Don't you think it is both?" Though some professed politicians are not business [illegible].

We laughed.

"Tell me what a man must do to be a successful politician."

Mr. Donovan grew earnest.

"To be successful a politician must devote almost his whole time to politics. He must be accommodating. He must be agreeable. He must be a servant of the public. He must treat people decently. To achieve popularity and success he must be honest, sincere, upright with the constituency he represents.

"There!" he added. "How's that for an off and definition? One thing, it's the truth."

"And are all politicians like that?"

"All successful politicians should be."

"Is politics growing cleaner or more corrupt?"

Politics Growing Better.

"Better, better, emphatically better all the time. Better men are joining the ranks. The tricky man is soon discovered and dropped. You can't cajole or deceive the people indefinitely without discovery, and public discovery usually means repudiation."

"Will the death of Mayor Collins mean any great change in the working of Boston politics?" I asked. He hesitated a moment before answering.

"The death of Mayor Collins is a calamity which all Boston feels deeply," he said, seriously. "He was a very remarkable man. I do not think I ever knew one more remarkable in so many ways. His grasp of the affairs of the city and every department of the city was wonderful. He seemed to have an intuitive understanding of every matter which came before him. His development in the Mayor's office was amazing.

"I do not think," he was leaning forward in his chair and speaking slowly,

"I am of the honest belief that Mayor Collins's place cannot be filled by any citizen of Boston."

While we were talking a man had been opening the door into the next office. Looking anxiously at the [illegible] and then glancing warningly at me.

"Am I keeping him from telling you something important?" I asked.

I think it is important to him," he said. "I believe he wants a job. If you'll excuse me a moment I'll see."

His Employment Assured.

Mr. Donovan's suspicion proved correct.

"I'm very sorry, but there is no place now," I heard him say, "I cannot tell when there will be. When there is, you shall have it."

"Thank you," said the man as he went away. He knew that sooner or later his employment was assured. It is said of "Sunny Jim" Donovan that he always keeps his promise.

Superintendent of Streets Donovan, who in spite of his declaration to the contrary is looked upon as the political leader of Democratic Boston, is decidedly good to look upon. He is tall and broad shouldered and well set up.

He has a fine shaped head, a face which by its attractiveness catches the attention and lingers in the memory, and a genial air of good cheer and friendliness which is refreshing and helpful. His nature is that of the true optimist.

He says himself that he can't help smiling and being cheerful and [illegible]

"Sunny Jim" Donovan looks as though he might be athletic. But he isn't.

He drives about the city behind a good horse that was bought for his predecessor and superintends his workers, but he has never cared enough for horses to own one of his own.

Never Played Cards.

He does not care for blue ribbon canines. He seldom goes to the races. He does not play golf. He never played cards in his life. Yet he has one hobby or recreation. It is playing dominoes.

Two or three nights a week Superintendent of Streets [illegible] out a congenial circle of friends [illegible] dominoes [illegible] and [illegible] as he plays the game of life. Indeed if the latter [illegible] rival it is the [illegible]

Still, I doubt if in the fascination of the latter amusement he ever loses sight of the greater game.

First, last and all the time "Sunny Jim" Donovan is a politician. He knows the political situation of Boston to-day as no other man knows it. His influence is tremendous. He can pick the right man for the right place. [illegible], for he knows the mettle of every man of prominence in the party.

He is liked and trusted. He is believed in and his power is recognized. Yet, I beg of you, if you have any regard for his feelings, do not call him "a boss."

PUBLIC IS AGHAST AT CORRUPTION, SAYS HUTCHINSON

Ex-Senator Isaac P. Hutchinson, manager of the campaign of [illegible] Fred S. Hall of Taunton for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant Governor, issued another statement last night [illegible] with caustic comment on the actions of the Republican machine leaders and sharp criticism of the candidacy of Eben S. Draper for the second place on the ticket.

Mr. Hutchinson asks:

"Shall high public office in old Massachusetts be sold to the highest bidder and [illegible] and [illegible] the dominant political party for the purpose of [illegible] manipulating nominations and destroying the sacredness of the public franchise?"

And he answers the question as follows:

"There has been much severe criticism for many years because of the persistent determination to run the Republican party [illegible] the [illegible]

"The spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction with the [illegible] management of the [illegible] all over the State, [illegible] needed only a popular candidate upon whom to unite and it has found him in Judge Hall."

GASTON'S BOOM FOR MAYOR LAUNCHED.

Its Chief Sponsor Is Harry P. Nawn, Well Known Contractor, and Certain Elements May Give It Their Support

WELLS DENIES THAT HE IS INTERESTED

Faint rumbles of a new boom for Mayor were heard about City Hall yesterday.

The boom was Colonel William A. Gaston's.

The man who started the boom was Harry P. Nawn, a well known contractor, who has received little consideration from the present administration in the last year and who was [illegible] by Benjamin W. Wells, [illegible] Commissioner, and Alderman Henry A. Frothingham of Ward 11.

Investigation shows that Nawn has been busy [illegible] Gaston [illegible] Commissioner Wells [illegible] BOSTON AMERICAN reporter said:

"I am not engaged in booming anybody for Mayor. [illegible] that Colonel Gaston would have [illegible] for Mayor and [illegible] for the governorship. But I have no knowledge of his position now and am not authorized to say that he is a candidate [illegible]

Alderman Frothingham, who was present during the interview, [illegible] the same sentiments as Commissioner Wells.

NEW COLLEGE FOR "BREADWINNERS" OPEN TO-NIGHT.

Professor Parsons of Boston University to Head Novel Educational Institution for Benefit of North End People

The Breadwinners' College, something entirely new and novel in the way of educational institutions in Boston, will be opened to-night at the Civic Service House, No. 112 Salem street. The college will be under the direction of Professor Frank Parsons, Ph. D., of Boston University.

This college is calculated to be of immeasurable benefit to those who have been compelled by the exigencies of life to seek work before their desire for an education was gratified. It offers to young men and young women who are wage-earners the elements of a broad culture, and a careful training in the best methods of thought and work.

The method employed will be calculated to give the student the elements of culture without requiring unnecessary labor on technical or non-essential matters.

Classes will be held on Tuesday, Friday and Sunday evenings from eight o'clock until 10. All who enter are expected to attend the Sunday evening courses which will be conducted by Professor Frank Parsons and Mr. Ralph Albertson. Mr. Albertson will act as director of the school in the absence of Professor Parsons.

The following courses are offered for 1905-1906: History and civics, Fridays, 8 to 9, Mr. Charles F. Dole. English language and composition, Fridays, 9 to 10, Mr. Philip Davis; natural sciences, Tuesdays, 8 to 9. English literature and biography, Tuesdays, 9 to 10, Mr. Meyer Bloomfield; industrial history and economics, life principles, practical psychology and method, Professor Frank Parsons and Mr. Ralph Albertson, Sundays, 8 to 9; music and voice culture, Mrs. Bloomfield and Mrs. Roger Gardner.

Philip Davis, Civic Service House, No. 112 Salem street, is the secretary of the college and is receiving enrollments.

FIGHTS IN ALL DEMOCRATIC WARDS.

Lively Contests in Boston for the Legislative Nominations, and the Machine Is Threatened in Many Instances

CIVIC OWNERSHIP AND DOCK TRUST ISSUES

On Tuesday next the voters of Boston will meet at the primaries and select candidates for Senators and Representatives, as well as elect delegates to attend the State convention for the nomination of a State ticket.

Interest centres in the contest between Draper and Hall who seek the nomination for Lieutenant Governor at the Republican [illegible] on the one side and [illegible] contests at the Democratic party [illegible] Senatorial and [illegible] tickets.

Triangular Contest.

In the Sixth Senatorial district the Republicans have a pretty triangular fight with ex-Alderman Joseph T. Stewart [illegible] and ex-Alderman [illegible] in the running.

In the Democratic [illegible] there are six [illegible] for Senatorial nominations. Senators [illegible] and Taylor have no opposition but Messrs. [illegible] are fighting [illegible] strongly opposed. Senators [illegible] and [illegible] are [illegible] winners, but Senator [illegible] who represents the Sixth Boston district is in danger of [illegible] by Edward D. [illegible] his competitor.

In [illegible] districts there are good battles [illegible]. The organization is [illegible] John F. [illegible] in the seventh and [illegible] in the eighth and [illegible] candidates are picked as winners. [illegible] McDonald is giving [illegible] a strong battle. Ex-Alderman John [illegible] district.

There are contests for House nominations in every Democratic ward in Boston with the exception of Wards 8 and 9. In the East Boston wards the Dock Trust [illegible] has become an issue [illegible] Ward 2 has John J. [illegible] have the support of the [illegible]

CHILDREN CHEER FOR GENEROUS HOST, FREEMAN EMERSON

"Hurrah for Mr. Emerson," shouted some one of 375 children once in about every [illegible] minutes for several hours at Franklin Field yesterday and every [illegible] It was the only way the children could manifest their feeling toward former Representative Freeman O. Emerson of Ward 10, secretary of the Children's Metropolitan Outing Society and vice president of the New England Home for Aged, Infirm and Deaf Mutes, who had personally provided for the entertainment of the poor children of the city.

In special cars the children were taken to Franklin Field and there, from 10 to 4 o'clock, they amused themselves with all manner of games. An excellent luncheon formed the most popular feature of a thoroughly enjoyable day.

WATSON CHEERED BY 1,800 AS HE LAUDS PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Challenge to debate the issues of the campaign for Representative from Ward 18 was made by candidate James A. Watson to Alderman Frank J. O'Toole before a crowd of 1,800 people at an open air rally at the junction of Roxbury street, [illegible] and Kent street last night. Alderman O'Toole was said to be in the [illegible] but declined to take the stand.

Municipal ownership was the keynote of Mr. Watson's address. He was given an enthusiastic reception.

GEN. BARTLETT FAVORED BY LEADERS.

Democratic Chiefs to Sound the Boston Lawyer This Week as to His Willingness to Stand for the Governorship

JOHN B. MORAN PLANS STRENUOUS CAMPAIGN

Acting Chairman Josiah Quincy of the Democratic state committee says the outlook for the party in the coming campaign is most encouraging. He believes that the right issues and candidates will be found and the split in the Republican party over the platform and the candidates for Lieutenant Governor and Attorney-General will prove serious enough to give the Democrats the winning advantage.

The sentiment for a public ownership plank in the platform is growing and it is likely that there will be one.

Bartlett a Favorite.

It is on the [illegible] for this week to have a number of the leading Democrats of Boston sound General Charles W. Bartlett and secure a positive statement from him as to whether he would accept the nomination for Governor or not. The talk about Henry M. Whitney for the second place on the Democratic ticket on the ground that he is a strong reciprocity man and would attract many votes from Draper, in the event of the latter's nomination, is all out of place and out of reason. In the first place, Mr. Whitney has said he would not be a candidate for office, and in the next place there would be strong opposition to Mr. Whitney in the Democratic convention.

[illegible] Suffolk [illegible] John B. Moran is going to have a name placed [illegible] as a candidate. The [illegible] have already [illegible] commissioners, there will be no possibility of having them rejected by having names stricken off on various pretexts.

Moran's Big Fight.

The Democrats will nominate District Attorney M. J. Sughrue and the Republican candidate will be either Judge Henry S. Dewey, Melvin O. Adams or William A. Morse, with the chances in favor of the latter just at present. The day after the nominations have been made Mr. Moran will begin his fight on the stump, and it promises to be historic. He has facts and figures for official exposures extraordinary, and he purposes to use them.

TARPLIN, CANDIDATE FOR SENATOR, GIVEN DINNER BY FRIENDS

Jacob Tarplin, Republican candidate for Senator from the Fifth Suffolk District, was tendered a complimentary dinner last night at the Copley Square Hotel by the executive committee of the Business Men's League of Ward 10.

Charles J. Page, a prominent resident of the ward, acted as toastmaster, and the principal speech of the evening was made by Mr. Tarplin. Among the guests were James M. [illegible], Louis D. [illegible], Colonel [illegible], John B. Macgregor, Robert E. Wiser and Walter Lodge.

Mr. Tarplin declared himself heartily in favor of the public ownership of public [illegible] discussing this subject Mr. Tarplin declared that he [illegible] a public lighting plant, and pledged himself to support any measures tending to attain this end.

"Aged in the Wood"

We spare neither labor nor care to make Callahan Home Whiskey absolutely the best that can be produced.

It is a fully matured whiskey, ripened and "aged in the wood." Callahan Whiskey reposes ten years in the wood before we consider it ready to bottle for our customers. This is but one instance of the patience and care that combine to make Callahan Whiskey without an equal.

Sold from distillery to home at one small profit; this is the best whiskey value ever offered, regardless of price.

"THERE IS NOTHING BETTER"
Made on Honor for 50 Years.

Callahan WHISKEY

On receipt of $3.00 we will send Four Full Quarts of Famous 10-Year-Old Callahan Home Whiskey to any address in New England, express charges prepaid. After sampling the whiskey, if not well satisfied with your purchase, return the case to us, and your $3.00 will be refunded without argument or delay. All goods shipped in plain cases, no marks to show contents. Goods shipped same day order is received.

Announcement

Learning that there is a sentiment among a portion of the people in this community against the sale of bottled liquors in our Grocery Department, and as the HENRY SIEGEL CO. is a unit to be the Shopping Headquarters of all the people, and wishing to offend none, therefore—

Mr. Henry Siegel, President, begs to announce that we have decided to discontinue the sale of Wines and Liquors. This establishment desires to meet the good will of all the buying public and caters to its patronage, hence we take this action rather than antagonize a single person.

Boston's New Shopping Centre---The Store of the Hour

Each department of this vast undertaking is beneath the eye of a specialist, one who has studied the local conditions and who has had the one aim to give Boston the best in that particular line. By operating this store in conjunction with the other mammoth Siegel establishments, having a joint outlet for fifty million dollars' worth of merchandise a year, our purchasing power is second to none in the world. This means that we can underbuy and undersell. Every advantage that up-to-date business methods can give our customers is theirs. Every new idea that is progressive and practical is immediately taken up. "The Store of the Hour for New England of Today"—first in fashion leadership—first in wider free delivery facilities—first in all that goes to make successful modern retailing. For Tomorrow we announce the following attractions. Read about this store.

Our Fifty-Second Great Anniversary Sale Starts Tomorrow

With Such an Outpouring of Bargains as Will Utterly Amaze New England's Most Critical Shoppers and Create Unbounded Interest and Enthusiasm Among All Who Read These Pages

THE greatest mercantile achievement of the day and generation is chronicled in our advertisement today, and cannot fail to result in strengthening the universal public opinion everywhere that nothing in the way of value giving is impossible to the R. H. White Co.'s masterful buying organization. No retail mercantile house in America has ever offered, quality for quality, price for price, values to equal these. Indeed, the prices here quoted are so sensationally low, so utterly regardless of cost, or profit, or loss, that no one can afford not to buy, and to buy liberally. Moreover, the sale comes at the very outset of the new season, at the very moment when new merchandise of every description is needed and must be had, and it rises at once to the dignity of

A Masterly, Helpful, Public-Spirited Event, a Credit to the House of R. H. White Co. And of Incalculable Benefit to Every Household Within a Hundred Miles of Boston

This magnificent new store is stronger as a leader today than ever before in its history. Its resourcefulness and prestige were never more apparent during its fifty odd years of existence. The series of sales conducted here since its opening, a virtually new store throughout, have been the most remarkable ever held in Boston, and this anniversary, in celebration of the passing of another milestone in our and honorable business life, is a fitting climax to this great new epoch-making era.

BOSTON TO HEAR OPERA DESPITE CONRIED.

Discussion Lively Whether the Herr Direktor's Failure to Bring His Company Here Will Be Severe Punishment

WILLING TO PAY FOR GOOD MUSIC

By J. Frank Davis.

Herr [illegible] at receipts of his last season's week of grand opera in the [illegible] has announced that as a punish[illegible] Boston shall have no grand [illegible] during this year [illegible].

Mr. [illegible] Henry W. Savage [illegible] to the fact last Herr Direktor Conried has [illegible] overlooked [illegible] already made that Mr. [illegible] Grand Opera Company is [illegible] a two weeks' engagement [illegible]. If it is not an oversight, M[illegible] suggests, it would appear [illegible] Conried has been [illegible].

Th[illegible] informants open a field for discussion that has been quickly occupied by Boston music lovers and not only the music lovers of Boston, but of all New England, for people from Portland to Providence make it their business to be in B[illegible] season.

Should Boston and New England be punished [illegible] Herr Conried's last two seasons [illegible] been sufficiently remunerative?

Is Boston [illegible] New England punished by Conried's decision not to bring his company here this season?

A Question of Punishment.

These are the questions that music lovers are answering. They answer them variously. It must be confessed that a majority seem to believe that Boston has done nothing to be punished for, and that if she has she is not being especially punished.

Herr Conried had furnished Boston with its only grand opera seasons since he became director of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, until last year. Season before last his Boston season lasted a fortnight. He played to what appeared to the popular eye fair business. Remembering that Caruso and others of his greatest stars did not appear, and that musicians noted many points in which the promise [illegible] standards [illegible] such things from a [illegible] point that he was [illegible].

When the season closed Herr Conried was indignant. He did not hesitate to criticise Boston seriously for the loss he said he had sustained. He cut the season, last Winter, to one week. On the opening night there was a good [illegible] "Lucia di Lammermoor." There were good singers [illegible] great Caruso. There was an [illegible] overflowed the [illegible] applauded the stars enthusiastically, and caused even the great Herr Direktor Conried to smile.

Three nights later Herr Conried put on his piece de resistance, "Parsifal." The audience was comparatively small. This production, at least, was a financial loss. And hence Herr Conried's determination to punish Boston by staying away this year.

POINTS CONRIED FAILED TO SEE

These were some things Herr Conried could not, or would not understand in explanation of his "Parsifal" experience:

1—"Parsifal" in English had appeared in Boston less than a month before the Conried season.

2—The public desire to hear "Parsifal" has always been due more to curiosity than especial love for its music—a curiosity [illegible] sight by Frau Wagner, with her demands that the festival music drama must not be produced outside Bayreuth. That curiosity had been satisfied by the Savage production.

3—Outside of the attraction of the names of the soloists there was no apparent reason wh[illegible] or even the [illegible] of music, should [illegible] the Conried opera to [illegible].

4—The Savage [illegible] to hear for $2 [illegible] "Parsifal" cost $7.

N[illegible] seemed pretty good [illegible] appeared, from a comparison of the productions, that the Savage show was scenically the [illegible] the choruses were better sung by the English company [illegible] appear [illegible] Conried, if he [illegible] instead of an artist [illegible] quisi [illegible].

It's [illegible] Boston [illegible] New York [illegible] give me patr[illegible] better goods for $7 [illegible] Savage [illegible] if I expect to compete.

Made a Chromo Comparison.

Instead of [illegible] Herr Direktor gave to the [illegible] things in a [illegible] in which he [illegible] compared to [illegible] an oil painting [illegible] have been [illegible] not absolutely true.

And now the Herr Direktor isn't coming back.

A musician of experience, knowledge and fame, who w[illegible] let me print his name, because he can't afford to mix into a controversy between the great musical powers, made what seemed to be an extremely apt comparison between the two "Parsifals" yesterday, in talking to me about Herr Conried and his punishment of Boston. He said:

"Of course [illegible] 'Parsifal' was better sung [illegible] as a whole. Yet the English was well enough sung to satisfy [illegible]. It was like this: If you were going to Europe on a six-day boat could you compare the speed with that of the six-and-a-half-day boat on which you went last Summer? No. In either you would realize that you were going very fast. At the moment you could not appreciate the difference."

A Voice on the Other Side.

Here is another opinion:

"It is a shame that Boston will not support grand opera in the original language. You cannot blame Mr. Conried. He lost $30,000 last year. He [illegible] expected to repeat the experience. Boston should be [illegible] that here, in the seat of culture, it will not pay for one single week of grand opera."

WINE OCTOPUS IN 50-YEAR CONTRACT

French Trust Plans Control of World's Product, with $75,000,000.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The French Wine Trust is the newest thing in octopuses. Consul Bardel of Bamberg, Germany, writes that the six important wine growing districts of Herault, Aude, Gard, Pyrenees Orientales, Bouchedu Rhone and Var are in the combination, the growers of those districts having agreed to sign a fifty year contract. The capital of the organization will be $75,000,000. An elaborate system of finances is proposed for the control, sales, distribution of profits, construction of additional wine vaults with a capacity of over 7,000,000 gallons, and for profit sharing among the employes.

The growers of the district expect to have other districts join the trust.

THUMB MARKS TO IDENTIFY CRIMINALS.

New System Is Success and Will Be Used More Widely

2 CITIES TRIED IT

A bureau for the identification of criminals by their finger prints, having all Massachusetts for its scope, is being agitated by police officials of different cities who have had great success since they adopted the finger-mark method of detection, as an adjunct to the more famous but actually much more modern Bertillon system.

Everyone knows, in these days, that the finger-ends of no two persons in the world are alike. Everybody may not know that the lines in the finger-tips never change through life, how[illegible] or form of the own[illegible] of the fingers may have altered.

The Chinese knew it hundreds of years before Columbus discovered America, and made official use of it. The government passport in those ancient days consisted of a piece of oiled paper, properly attested, on which the man desiring a passport impressed the tips of his fingers. This proved [illegible] of preventing travellers from transferring their passports.

New to America.

In America it is within very recent years that this method of identification of criminals has been understood. When Mark Twain wrote "Pudd'nhead Wilson," the plot of which revolved about the thumb-prints of two men, the great majority of his readers regarded the idea as novel and quaint, but few appreciated the practical possibilities of it.

Europe first began to group its well known criminals by their finger-prints, as it first began the same kind of work by the Bertillon system of measurements. America has begun adopting it, and Massachusetts has several cities which have studied and used the latest plan.

Which city in the State actually deserves the credit for having been first to record and file the finger-prints of its criminals is not clear. Springfield and Lowell each claims the distinction. Certain it is that one of the best [illegible] of finger prints in Massachusetts and one of the most carefully tabulated and filed, is that of Superintendent of Police William B. Moffatt of Lowell whose friends believe he has the best equipment of [illegible] police department in the United States.

To Enlarge Scope.

There is a law on the statute books, passed at the last session of the Legislature, authorizing police departments to use the [illegible] in regard to criminals [illegible] of felonies and charges of [illegible] provisions to the lesser thieving class which includes the criminals who cause the greatest trouble to the officials.

It is desired to establish a central bureau in Boston where copies of finger prints may be kept on file to which the police may have ready reference.

Method Is Simple.

To the uninitiated this might appear to be a difficult matter but the contrary is the case. There is a method of classification which is both simple and accurate. The first classification divides all prints into two classes only, which can be recognized at a glance.

By taking the combinations of these two classes as exhibited in the ten different digits taken in pairs, all descriptive cards can be divided into 1,024 classes, and to each class is allotted a separate pigeon hole.

Takes Little Time.

Superintendent Moffatt of Lowell gave a practical demonstration of the workings of the system to a reporter of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN yesterday. About five minutes were consumed in taking all the impressions. Taking one of the cards in use by the Lowell detective bureau, he required not more than thirty seconds to determine the location of the pigeon hole where it belonged and could be found.

One thing in favor of this method of criminal identification is its economy. A very small sum will furnish the appliances, a piece of glass, an ink roller and a little printers' ink. It is so inexpensive that even the small towns could afford it, and the system is very easy to learn.

PRISONER NEAR DEATH RELEASED

George A. Morce, the Cambridge man who, early in the year, tried to kill his wife and Allen Terrell, has been released in the custody of the Rev. Robert Walker. In releasing the man Judge Stevens said he had had great provocation for his crime and was near to death. His Honor, therefore, felt no harm could come from suspending sentence and permitting the man to go to his Nova Scotia home to die.

R. H. WHITE CO. REACHES 52D MILESTONE.

Great Firm Is to Celebrate Its Anniversary by Many Novel Displays in Connection with Big Bargain Sale

JAPANESE TEA ROOM AN ATTRACTIVE FEATURE

In the heart of Boston's busy shopping district, but safely hidden away from the turmoil of [illegible] is a pretty little resting place for the tired shopper. It is a Japanese tea garden. It is not an imitation, but a portion of Nippon in all its native beauty and attractiveness, as complete as if picked up bodily from the far East and transplanted into the midst of its present occidental surroundings.

Under arbors of Japanese wisteria where bright-colored canaries vie with Japanese robins in a contest of twittering melody, and through which may be had glimpses of cerulean hue, the visitor sits at a bamboo and matting table, surrounded by beaded portieres and other specimens of artistic Japanese workmanship. In the subdued light cast by vari-colored ornamental hanging lamps, while Geisha girls in their flowing silk kimonos and high-slippered feet move softly and swiftly about, serving in the daintiest of Japanese china tea sets fragrant full-flavored orange Pekoe, "Dai-Dai" chop tea, the favorite beverage of the Japanese.

Real Geisha Girls.

And the kimono is not the only thing genuine about the little ladies that serve the tea with a [illegible] the visitor's palate. They are the real Geishas, the sisters of the heroes of many recent battles on land and sea.

Not the least attractive feature of the tea garden are five well executed oil paintings by a Japanese artist of scenes in old Japan, arranged in panels along the wall.

Altogether it is the most artistic conception that the R. H. White Co. has ever presented to its patrons, and when thrown open to the public tomorrow will mark the fifty-second anniversary of the establishment. No expense has been spared to make the furnishings and equipment complete. The tea garden, located on the second floor of the vast establishment on Washington street, covers more than 2,000 feet of floor space adjoining the restaurant.

It is accessible through the restaurant and also by three elevators that enter directly into the garden. The accommodations admit of the serving of eighty persons at the same time, either at the tables arranged about the centre or in the booths set along two of the sides.

During the luncheon hours, from 11 o'clock until 2:30, the same excellent service to be found in the main restaurant will be rendered by American girls attired in imported Japanese kimonos, similar to those worn by the Geishas. From 2:30 to 5 o'clock, however, only a light luncheon and the imported Pekoe tea will be served, and that only by the Geishas themselves.

Then the dainty Japanese tea sets, decorated with wild roses on the background of old gold and delicate blue, with pounded brass finger bowls, arranged on laquered trays, will hold sway.

Great Bargain Sale.

In addition to the innovation of the tea garden, R. H. White & Co. will mark this fifty-second anniversary with their usual mammoth bargain sale, the details of which may be found on other pages of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

As in former years, in celebration of another milestone of progress past, this enterprising firm will display in their handsomely remodelled establishment an inviting line of everything that can be wanted for the comfort or convenience of its thousands of patrons throughout New England.

And for their accommodation nothing has been left unprovided. For those who cannot conveniently make their purchases in person, an up-to-date mail order department supplies their demands by letter or postal as promptly and with satisfaction guaranteed as surely as if they had visited the store.

For those who have the time, and can conveniently call in person to make their selections many conveniences are supplied including a substation of the postoffice, an escalator that carries thousands daily from one floor to the other without the slightest exertion on their part, the ladies' waiting room of Moorish design where the tired [illegible] an emergency [illegible] and many others too numerous to mention.

NEGRO CONVICT SURROUNDED IN WOODS.

Officers and Hundreds of Citizens, Armed with All Kinds of Weapons, Are on Trail of the Escaped Convict

"DEAD OR ALIVE" IS THE ORDER TO ALL

Bridgewater, Sept. 23.—Hot on the trail of Minot St. Clair Francis, the big negro who escaped with [illegible] from the State Farm last Sunday, twenty State Farm officers, a squad of police from Brockton and hundreds of citizens armed with guns, revolvers, clubs and pitchforks, Saturday afternoon and evening scoured the woods in the vicinity of Mt. Prospect cemetery, into which he was seen to go early to-day, after being recognized in the town square by Officer Benton of the State Farm, whom he eluded.

The search has been going on night and day since he escaped, but started up with renewed vigor to-day. Unless they find him to-day a bloodhound will be put upon his trail in the morning. A general alarm was sent out by the officers for men and hundreds of citizens surrounded the entire territory of woods in which the hunted convict is supposed to be in hiding. The men went to their posts under orders to "Get him, dead or alive."

The women of Bridgewater and for miles around have lived for the past week in a state of terror. Renewed vigor was manifest in the search to-day, because of the positive [illegible] that the man is still in hiding about Bridgewater. A determined man hunt is now on.

Officer Benton of the State Farm, early to-day, saw a man in the centre of the town peering around the corner. The officer chased him. The man darted through South street, through the field in the rear of Dr. W. M. Conant's home, into the thick undergrowth of woods and escaped.

Hundreds in Search.

A squad of six men under Lieutenant Chase were sent from Brockton, twenty officers came from the State Farm, and a hundred citizens armed with pitchforks, shotguns [illegible].

Chief R[illegible] men have been posted in squads all about the territory of woods on Prospect, Union, and Centre streets. Another line of guards is posted along the skirts of the Aldrich woods.

If the search of the night produces no results, a huge bloodhound owned by Henry F. Angle [illegible] foot. He wears the regular State Farm [illegible] able by the imprint of the big toe where they have worn [illegible] impression where the heel has passed through the soft sole.

Stealing Potatoes.

Mrs. Lizzie Glenn of Plymouth street thinks she saw the man in a tree near her place last night. It is believed that the man has been in hiding in the woods near the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Frawley, who lives at the corner of Prospect and Centre streets. For several days the family have missed potatoes from a team which they kept loaded in back of the house. They have also heard noises nights.

The police are sure the man is in the woods near at hand. Officer Benton is sure he would have caught him to-day if he had [illegible].

Francis escaped last week Sunday night with Frank Wiley. He was serving a term in the State Prison when he was believed to be insane and was transferred to the State Farm. He was convicted of a criminal assault. At the farm the officers say he was a model prisoner.

BISHOP STANG MAY BE NAMED FOR NEW ORLEANS DIOCESE

Distinguished head of Fall River Diocese, possible successor to Archbishop Chappelle of New Orleans.

NOTED CHURCHMEN NOW VISITING AT VATICAN.

Brilliant Prelate of Fall River Known as Author of Important Works, and Beloved by People of His Diocese

Fall River, Sept. 23.—Unusual interest among members of the Fall River diocese has been aroused by the report from Rome that Bishop William Stang, head of the diocese, is to be appointed Archbishop of New Orleans.

Bishop Stang is now in Rome. Dispatches say that while the appointment of Bishop Stang has been considered it is thought that nothing definite will be settled until the fever plague in New Orleans has been eliminated.

The appointment as archbishop to the New Orleans diocese has been brought about by the death of Archbishop Chappelle.

Bishop Stang is one of the most learned and best loved [illegible] in the Catholic Church. Bishop Stang has been the recipient of many costly gifts from his parishioners who hold him in high esteem.

He was born in the province of Baden, Germany, in 1854. He received his early education at the German Gymnasia, after which he took a course of philosophy and theology at the Catholic University of Louvain, Belgium. He was [illegible] cese in 1878.

He has given a great deal of attention to literature and has written many noted books. Among them are "The Life of Martin Luther," "The Catholic Bookkeeper," "Pastoral," "Theology," "Pepper and Salt" and "Socialism."

CZAR'S BATTLESHIP RAISED BY JAPS

Tokio, Sept. 23.—The Russian battleship Retvizan, which was sunk at Port Arthur, has been refloated by Japanese engineers.

The Retvizan was the best of the four Russian battleships which were sunk inside the harbor of Port Arthur. She had been damaged the most by the Russians, torpedoes being exploded against her sides to prevent her being raised. She also had been struck several times by 11 inch shells [illegible] Japanese mortars, which went down perpendicularly through her decks and bottom.

She was launched at Philadelphia, where she was built by the Cramps, in 1900.

TO SPEND MILLIONS AT SHORE RESORTS

Providence, Sept. 23.—According to the managers of the shore resorts that line Narragansett Bay, upward of 3,000,000 people visited those places during the past season. The most successful on record.

The development of the trolley lines and the extension of the steam roads have been among the principal factors in producing this result, but the managers have largely increased the attractions and improved their service.

Improvements and novelties involving an expenditure of several million dollars are planned for next year at Crescent Park, Boyden Heights and Rocky Point.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall blood purifier, tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver, and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

INSANE ASYLUM ROBBED BY NURSES.

Two Young Men, One of Whom Is Thought a Graduate of Colby University, Held for Stealing Patients' Clothes

$500 BAIL IMPOSED IN WORCESTER COURT

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 23.—Charged with robbing lockers of cash, wearing apparel in the Worcester Insane Hospital, Bloomingdale road, two young men, whom the police have reason to believe are college men and members of good families, have been held in $500 bail by the Central Police Court.

Both were remanded for three weeks as nurses in the hospital. When arrested they gave the names of Norman K. Miller and Charles A. Bullard, and both are in either case as twenty-five years. The police declare that their arraignment both have confessed to stealing the clothing valued at about $200, most of which was recovered by Inspector Rourke from a room in the Hotel Sterling, where they have been lived to them.

One a College Graduate.

Inspector Rourke further asserts that Miller has acknowledged that his right name is Gabriel Ira Davis, and Dubois that his right name is Charles Dubeau. Miller, it is said, has also stated that he is a graduate of Colby University in Waterville, Me., and of the Maine General Hospital in Portland, Me.

His confession has been presented to Patrick Ryan, one of the proprietors of the Hotel Sterling, as a result Inspector of Carpenter, R. I., the scene of a wave, the carpenter of the room. He had formerly lived in Centreville.

The hearing of the accused men was postponed by Judge Utley until next Tuesday at the request of Inspector Rourke, who suspects that he may be able to fasten upon them similar offenses in other institutions where they were employed as nurses.

Miller and Dubeau had charge of separate wards in the Worcester Hospital. Each patient upon entering is furnished with a locker, in which he places his personal belongings, aside from valuables, which are placed in a safe in the office.

Those known in their respective wards the prisoners are regarded with robbing. When the robberies did not abate, the resident quickly endeavored to trace the thieves in order to avoid publicity. He did not succeed, and called in Chief Rourke of the local police force. Then the trap was detailed on the case and on the next counts a ring and other articles were found to be missing from only the wards which Miller and Dubeau, he arrested both of them on suspicion.

Lost Articles Found in Rooms.

A search of their room revealed nearly all of the missing articles. At the room Roache also found several letters addressed to Dubeau at Colby University.

When confronted with the evidence in the possession of the police, it is said, both broke down, it is said, confessed and acknowledged their correct names. But it is stated, declared they had given false names to protect their families. They were then locked up, charged with larceny.

EXTORTION CHARGE IN LIQUOR WAR STIRS CITY.

Officials Are Implicated in Sensational Fight on Rum Evil in Lawrence, Which Has Now Reached Courts

Lawrence, Sept. 23.—A general denial of the charges against them, and the assertion that William J. Henrahan, proprietor of the Hotel Bruce, had stated when I testified that he had paid William H. McMullen $200 "hush money," were the sensational features introduced in the defence of William F. White, Matthew Leo Grey Ripon, William H. McMullen, Michael J. Ryan and Patrick H. Casey, officers of the Municipal League, charged with the attempt to blackmail five of the licensed hotel-keepers of the city.

The charge against the officers of the league is that McMullen extorted in their behalf $200 from Henrahan, proposing to drop the case against Frank O. Libbey, proprietor of the Park Hotel, whom they charged with the illegal sale of liquor.

Henrahan testified at the trial of Libbey that he had paid McMullen $200 to drop the case and destroy the evidence against the other hotels, including this Judge Manner discharged Libbey.

Henrahan testified that he collected $40 each from Richard A. Carter of the Central House and Thomas Kenyon of the Essex House and gave the money to Chief of the Franklin House, and then he and Libbey had each paid $40. Dickey and Carter, he said, had paid him in checks, the other two in cash.

When called upon by the defence to produce the checks Dickey introduced a check of $40 made out to Casey and payable to Henrahan. Carter did not appear in court.

William P. White testified and his evidence was corroborated by Miss Catherine White, that McMullen had repeatedly attempted to bargain for the drop the case against Libbey and destroy the evidence against the other hotel keepers. The case was continued until Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

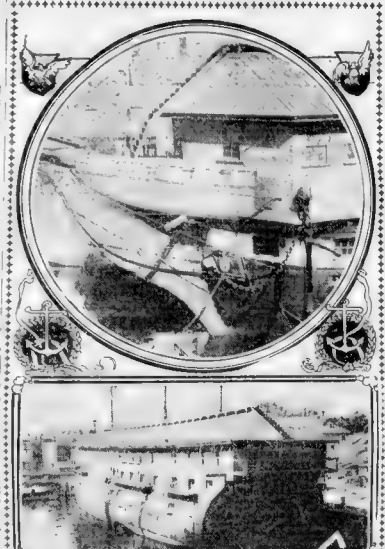
BOSTON'S RIGHTS FIRST IN HULL OF "OLD IRONSIDES"



Views of the frigate Constitution. Sought by Brooklyn for Public Park Ornament, and Attledore Young Woman Who Suggests School Children's Fund to Save Historic Warship.

Dr. Holmes's Prayer for "Old Ironsides"

Aye, tear her tattered ensign down!
Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
That banner in the sky;
Beneath it rang the battle shout
And burst the cannon's roar—
The meteor of the ocean air
Shall sweep the clouds no more.

Her deck once red with heroes' blood
Where knelt the vanquished foe,
When winds were hurrying o'er the flood,
And waves were white below,
No more shall feel the victor's tread,
Or know the conquered knee—
The harpies of the shore shall plunk
The eagle of the sea!

Oh! better that her shattered hulk
Should sink beneath the wave;
Her thunders shook the mighty deep,
And there should be her grave;
Nail to her mast her holy flag,
Set every threadbare sail,
And give her to the god of storms,
The lightning and the gale!

BROOKLYN APPEALS FOR AGED VICTOR OF THE SEA.

Fighting Frigate Was Built and Christened Here, and the Hub Exploited Her Triumphs, School Fund to Save Craft

Will the frigate Constitution, "Old Ironsides" be hauled ashore and made a centre piece of one of the public parks in Brooklyn, N. Y., through pennies contributed for its purchase by school children?

This is the idea suggested made by James Matthews, a merchant of that city, and Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte writes:

"There are serious legal questions to the plan suggested, but I will give further consideration to the subject with a view to some better protection and preservation of the vessel.

If the Brooklyn school children try to buy the grand old ship, what will Boston school children say?

Will they not say that Franklin Park, Boston, is as good a place to put the old boat as Prospect Park, Brooklyn?

The authority of Congress would have to be obtained before the vessel could be sold, for it would have to be condemned according to the regular Navy Department procedure.

Miss Elizabeth A. Riley, principal of Grade 8 school, in North Attleboro, has written to Secretary Bonaparte suggesting that all the school children in the United States might be interested, if a movement can be started. Brooklyn is started by Americans' red girls.

Boston Has First Claim.

But Boston feels she has the first claim on the official vessel of the American navy. She was built in this city and here were her exploits consecrated. To Oliver Wendell Holmes, when a Harvard student, is credited the authorship of the old ship's epic, "Old Ironsides," a poem which he wrote while in Cadiz and that saved the old vessel while in Cadiz from being condemned and broken up many years ago.

Now all the talk is for saving the venerable hull as long as possible and any man who would suggest her be dismantled and destroyed, like other old ships whose days are over, or sold as metal and decaying wood would wither under the blast of public indignation and be branded as the basest of the sinners.

Where the Constitution was built in Boston, in 1797, is now the site of Constitution wharf. Unlike modern vessels built by Uncle Sam, she was christened by a man and not a woman. Joseph Senor who broke a bottle of Madeira wine on her bow and pronounced the name she was to carry with pride.

She was built because President George Washington thought a navy. In the beginning was needed a navy. England was already showing a disposition to make encroachments upon growing American commerce, which later caused the war of 1812. In fact conflict the frigate Constitution surpassed all other craft in existence.

The bad boy built the ship and the boss was Captain Edward Preble, afterwards Commodore, was her captain then.

Also British who thus climbed the ensign of the seas, as now imagined at the idea of the Americans with such a diminutive navy as the republic then possessed going to war with them. But the smile came off Johnny Bull's face after the American ships won fifteen out of eighteen naval battles.

The Constitution beat the British frigates Java and Guerriere in what modern prize ring parlance would be called "big time." Once when the Constitution was found by Boston she met a whole fleet of British warships. They were too many for her and the hopes of the Americans grew fell when the wind died out. She was very fast and if there had been wind to stretch the white wings, might have run away. But a calm vessels drift toward each other—which has been a puzzling phenomenon to sailors of all times.

But Captain Isaac Hull was a great sailor and as resourceful as any seamen might be. He had his crew man every small boat on the frigate and towing the "old Ironsides" by oars, left the enemy hull down on the horizon, before the wished for breeze arrived. There was a gale time when she arrived. Always while in the service was she looked upon as a Boston ship.

She captured the British war schooner Pictou in one fight and both the frigate Java and the sloop of war Levant in another. The lovely Ann and the Esther both armed vessels, were among her captures.

During the war of 1812 she was also commanded by Captain William Bainbridge and Captain Charles Stewart. The latter was a famous sea fighter and the grandfather of Charles Stewart Parnell, the great Irish leader.

Captain Hull was a personal friend of Captain James Richard Dacres of the British navy and once when the Guerriere, which the latter commanded, and the Constitution were lying near each other in the Delaware river, they bet a hat as to the fortune of the two ships ever fought.

When they did fight the Guerriere struck her colors in thirty minutes. She had been terribly battered and cut up in a fight of 272, while the Constitution lost only fourteen men. When Captain Dacres came aboard "Old Ironsides" to surrender his sword, Captain Hull said:

"I will not take a sword from one who knows so well how to use it, but, Dacres, I will trouble you for that hat."

The wrecked Guerriere blew up and her crew were brought to Boston as prisoners of war. The banquet given Captain Hull and the Constitution crew in Faneuil Hall was one of the greatest affairs ever known in the Cradle of Liberty. Congress voted $50,000 to officers and men.

Of recent years the Daughters of the American Revolution have talked of buying the old warship.

BREAK GROUND FOR NEW Y. M. C. A. HOME

Pawtucket to Push Work on Building That Will Cost Nearly $125,000.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 23.—Without ceremony ground was broken yesterday for the new building of the Young Men's Christian Association which is to cost in the neighborhood of $125,000.

The board of managers decided to make a start toward the erection of the building until the sum of $75,000 had been raised. Accordingly the members of the association have been busy, the heaviest work past January in order to have the required amount ready by September 20. Now that the money is assured the building will be pushed to a speedy completion, and a new ready for occupancy by will be one of the best of its kind in New England.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than to any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

DESPERATE BEARS HINT AT MONEY PLOT.

New York, Sept. 23.—Persons claiming to be in the confidence of Otto H. Kahn, managing partner of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., are whispering about Wall street that that great banking house is at the head of a secret plan to call loans on an extensive scale the coming week and thus save their friends who have foolishly gone short of stocks or have let their long lines get away while still bulls at heart. Russell Sage and some known allies of the Goulds are said to be in the plot. The short interest is in such a desperate condition that only some such wild scheme will save them. But it is doubtful if the houses named care to step down from their present position of conservative bankers and become raiders. They are identified with too many properties, whose stocks need friends to be able to afford to lead such a movement.

This matter would, under ordinary circumstances, seem too absurd for serious consideration. Many loans will be called in the routine of business next week, and the rumor being circulated is evidently put out as a preliminary to an attempt to misrepresent the nature of these calls. The expedient is desperate and may [illegible] but the best authorities believe the coming week will see a much higher and much more active market with no serious interruption on the advance. The Morgan shares and the [illegible] in position to lead.

AUTUMN REAL ESTATE TRADE HERE WITH A RUSH

Brokers Report Active Inquiry for Houses and Apartments in City and Suburbs.

Boston's real estate market [illegible] during the week. Property [illegible] property in the North and West [illegible]

"OLD GLORY" INSULTED.

Stowe, Sept. 23.—A big incident occurred at McCracken's Landing, one of the popular resorts on Stowe Lake. [illegible] American flag being torn down. The Stars and Stripes occupied the most conspicuous position on the grounds of the Victoria Hotel. When Manager James Farrell came down in the morning the emblem was nowhere to be seen. During the night it had been cut down and carried off.

LET ROCKEFELLER RESTORE FOURFOLD, SAYS PASTOR, AND DIVIDE WEALTH WITH POOR

Citing the example of Zaccheus for John D. Rockefeller to emulate, the Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., one of the most eminent divines of the country, takes up the issue of "tainted money" that has been agitating the religious world ever since the question was raised when the prudential committee of the American Board of Foreign Missions announced in Boston that it had received a $100,000 gift from the head of Standard Oil. Dr. Pentecost advises that Mr. Rockefeller "restore fourfold" to the men whom he has wronged by his professional squeeze, and for the rest give the half he possesses to the poor. Then, in case he shows a truly repentant spirit, the taint may be removed from his wealth and whatever he may give will work to good advantage and may be properly received.

"Let the system," he says in the current number of the [illegible], "and all who have adopted the methods of the system, seek out those whom they have [illegible] business relations [illegible] and crowded out of business by the power of that system and their enormous wealth, by their rebates and secret agreements, and restore to them fourfold,' and then give the half of their remaining possessions to the poor; then it is probable that what remains to them will be in sanctification."

By the Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D.

The recent gift of a "certain rich man" to a Christian foreign missionary society has awakened the protest of a large number of Christian ministers against their society for receiving the money on the ground that it was the price of oppression, fraud and dishonesty in its acquirement, and that to receive it with thanks was to condone the dishonest methods and become particeps criminis with the man and the "system" which the gift represents.

Mr. Rockefeller is singled out as the man chiefly criticised, not because he alone practices the "system," but because he is the man who made the particular gift under discussion, and especially because he is the inventor [illegible] and master spirit of the "system" by means of which he has amassed the most colossal fortune in the world and further because he is conspicuous in his profession of the Christian religion.

Mr. Rockefeller should have the benefit of every reasonable doubt in this matter. In the present case the "system," which is the creation of the man as well as the man himself, is the subject of an almost [illegible] adverse judgment.

The indictment against the Standard Oil company and those who originated and still manage its affairs does not rest upon the vague theories of [illegible] nor upon merely jealous and prejudiced competitors, but upon such an array of [illegible] facts as was never before marshalled against any set of men or business operations in the whole history of our country or the world.

The Standard Oil Company approaches a small business competitor and demands "Your business or your commercial life"; or by means of its powerful organization, its "rebates," "secret agreements" with railroads and its unlimited wealth simply says:

"Get out of business or we will drive you into bankruptcy."

If the statements of fact of Mr. Lloyd in his Wealth Versus Commonwealth, are true or anywhere near the truth, then there are better men behind the bars than the managers of this gigantic organization.

The question is: Are these grave and circumstantial indictments true, or are they the scandalous lies of disappointed and jealous operators?

What are the facts?

Miss Tarbell's book, published by a reputable and responsible firm, is on the counters and stalls of every prominent bookseller in the country and on the tables of all the great libraries and among the books of most of the leading men in the country.

Mr. Lawson's [illegible] arraignment in his story of Frenzied Finance has gone into [illegible] and yet the Standard Oil magnates take no steps to bring these defamers of character to book or even to defend themselves from the charges [illegible] at their doors.

Tainted Church's Conscience.

The recent revelations in connection with the investigation of the Beef Trust are only specimen pages from the story of the Standard Oil brood. The scandals of the Equitable Life, of some of the great banking institutions and trust companies, and of the Amalgamated Copper are more or less traceable to the genius of the founder of the Standard Oil Company.

The taint and smell of Standard Oil has [illegible] system. The worst of all its crimes is that it has so far blinded the conscience of the Church of God at least in some particulars [illegible] for the sake of its gold its [illegible] methods are condoned [illegible] that pours out of the [illegible] and social [illegible] those who have suffered [illegible]

Silence Confirms Reports.

Mr. Rockefeller has remained silent. A man who remains silent under such serious charges must be considered as having [illegible] or else he must not complain if he is unjustly judged.

The church does not must sit in [illegible] [illegible] and money that seek entrance or [illegible] with its membership or [illegible] its work. The money of Ananias, of Judas and of Simon Magus was rejected because of the men and their deeds who offered it.

Let the church stand for holy living and righteous dealing among men, and she will not lack for money to carry forward all the work her Lord has called her to do.

Let the millionaire [illegible] millions alone. Let him [illegible] responsibility by [illegible] partnership [illegible] He is only too willing to buy the church's condonation. Let him understand that he can no more buy the silence of the church with his money than Simon Magus could buy the power of the Holy Ghost with his money.

HYPO

It is no easy matter to hand out a plum to the public, and a task requiring no end of brains. There are few of us who can do it much to our satisfaction, and when we do make a success of it another problem arises, and that is to keep it a success, until some person or persons come for the purpose of buying it, and then comes the parting and the wailing.

Now, we have done it, with the plum we have, and have no intention of so doing. That is why you will find it still in stock

AT THE OLD

HOWARD

MAY DURYEA AND W. A. MORTIMER

An act that will be new to you, and one as well worth while seeing. Miss Duryea is a fine actress, or will soon be one, and Mr. Mortimer is the title of the very sketch that will prove a feature to win a place in the Howard Hall of Fame. The best thing in the sketch has the clearest stage I've ever seen, and the cast without any ifs, ands or buts.

FLYING RATHBUNS

We are not pulling on a pleased pipe when we say that this is the best act, regardless of salary, that ever sent foot to the stage. A routine of feats of strength, all of which are performed upon fairly horizontal bars, a turn that some circling acts on the "revolving" line.

LA VINE-CIMARON TRIO

The smoothest article in the eccentric acrobatic line that we have yet had the pleasure of seeing. Clever La Vine and Cimaron, formerly of Keith's in Dunkin, are not here and stay. La Vine's wheeze upon the knee make a most effectual finish.

SULLIVAN AND PASQUELENA

"A Newport Affair" is what they call their act of three parts. Real types depicted by people who know how to do them, and who are new to the goods and to wholesale quantities.

LES LAROSES

Wonderful wizards. Their performance runs a close second to Carmen, if not the equal of the latter's perennial. An act that will keep you guessing from beginning to end, the last one number of the team is of the punch order.

LOUIS QUERTIN

He's willing to go against anybody in the world in the trick cycling business, and the dough is ready to be put up if you can find a man that has a cent that you see him give his exhibition.

FRASER TRIO

Dancing to their songs and also their long suit. They make the most hits a deal is led up to them and are the real thing. There are neither a question the greatest exponents of the art on or off the stage. Graceful and Dazzling in the extreme, or out of them, either.

FERN COMEDY 4

Consummate comedians and performers of harmony and it more. When we say that this is the best act of its kind that we have seen in a big time circuit we state an truth. New songs and fresh comedy situations.

TASCOTT

Known in vaudeville as "The White Coon." Is there any need to say that when Tascott is on the stage he does his best? Certain, it is that he is a phenomenal act of pipes, and he knows it, perfect.

BRYANT and SAVILLE

Merry musical nuts who play upon all sorts of instruments of harmony and introduce a side line of comedy that is most amusing.

WILL DOCKRAY

A humorist of the cleverest kind is full of distinctive merit. If we ever get a new return for him we will be glad to have him. Dockray is a good fellow and a funny one.

THOMAS and PAYNE

Clever in all the various grades and dancers. They are also in the front rank of their branch.

GEORGE W. HUSSEY

A ventriloquist worthy the name. Has a clever line of talk in the mute and the voices he throws are natural. His mechanical figures excel many.

PHILBROOKS and REYNOLDS

Legerdemainers of the highest class. Their work is clean cut and artistic. Refreshing elegance of manner in dressing.

HENNEY and STEELE

They are a pair of fine fellows on or off the stage, but this is a pair of fellows in this one.

DAUGHTER MADE A BRIDE AT PARENTS' SILVER WEDDING

Cambridge couple who celebrated silver wedding anniversary, their daughter and man she married on the same occasion.

Miss Ethel Altea Robinson was married last night to Wallace St. Clair Jones of New York at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jabez L. Robinson [illegible] the twenty [illegible] of the marriage of her father and mother.

The wedding and the silver wedding reception was attended by many persons well known in Boston and Cambridge society. [illegible] The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Woodman Bradbury, pastor of the Old Cambridge Baptist Church. It was a double ring service.

The bride is a Vassar girl [illegible] Mr. Jones is a Harvard man and graduated from the Lawrence Scientific School in 1905. Like his wife he has strong musical tastes. He was a member of the University Glee Club and other musical organizations. He is a son of Mrs. [illegible] Jones of Washington, D. C.

The bride and groom stood under a canopy of [illegible] asters during the ceremony. Bryant White of [illegible] a classmate of the groom, was best man. Miss Bertha Lowell Robinson, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The ushers were [illegible] of Brookline, Harry Ewing of Rochester, N. Y., [illegible] of Cambridge, a cousin of the groom, and [illegible] of Boston.

The bride was dressed in Swan silk with a bertha of Duchesse lace. She wore orange blossoms in her hair and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Her sister [illegible] wore [illegible] India silk trimmed with [illegible] and carried a bouquet of [illegible].

Parents Congratulated.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Jones, and Mr. and Mrs. Robinson received large numbers of their friends who came to offer their congratulations to the new bride's parents on their silver wedding anniversary and their best wishes to the newly wedded pair.

An orchestra [illegible] screened by palms, played during the reception. A large tent on the lawn was used as a refreshment room.

The house decorations were asters. Mr. and Mrs. Jones left on a wedding tour and will reside in New York.

Splendid Presents Given to Miss Alice Roosevelt from Rulers and Potentates Is Report from the Orient

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Sept. 23.—It is reported from Seoul, Korea, that M. Hayashi, the Japanese minister, today gave a luncheon in honor of Miss Alice Roosevelt and her party. The German minister gave a dinner this evening in honor of Miss Roosevelt.

According to reports that [illegible] here many splendid presents have been made to Miss Alice Roosevelt during her visit to the Far East.

Rulers and potentates have vied with each other in showing honor to the daughter of the President of the United States by the presentation of expensive jewels or rare objects of art.

The beautiful jade ornaments presented by the Empress of China and the splendid examples of Japanese art given by the Mikado are beyond price. Such things are reserved for Chinese and Japanese royalty and cannot be purchased.

A wonderful pearl was presented to Miss Roosevelt by the Sultan of Jolo, who being the master of the finest pearl fisheries in the world, has the most long of [illegible] collection of these jewels in existence. It is estimated that the gifts to Miss Roosevelt will exceed in value $150,000.

WINNER'S STORY OF RACE.

We ran easily all the way and won by 59 seconds, as I am told. We never saw anybody except the Haynes people, and we passed them in the first lap; they would not give us the road and we had to take the ditch. After we got by them we never saw a car.

There was only one place in the road I was afraid of, that was the turn at Bull's Head corner, but we took it nicely at good speed. When I first saw that turn I knew I would have to be careful there.

My car is in perfect shape and I hope to be able to make better time in the big race.—Bert Dingley.

CURZON MAY BE NEW LIBERAL LEADER.

Keen Interest Aroused as to Whether Former Viceroy Will Take Active Part in Politics When He Returns to England

IRISH PEERAGE MAY LEAD TO HOUSE OF COMMONS

Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.

London, Sept. 23.—Nothing probably interests English politicians more at the present time than the question as to whether Lord Curzon will take any active part in politics when he returns to this country.

The former viceroy was, it will be remembered, before he went to India, the most promising young man of the Unionist party.

In his gilded exile it is known that he accepted an Irish peerage only in order that he might be free to re-enter that arena on the expiration of his term of office.

When he reaches England he will undoubtedly take a much needed rest. His health, which has broken down, not as [illegible] controversy with Lord Kitchener makes this rest an absolute necessity, but he has no intention, his friends say, of retiring permanently from public life.

After his recent experiences in India he can hardly [illegible] as the [illegible] of the Conservative party.

It is significant that the Liberal papers refer most sympathetically to his achievements and [illegible] opportunity pass to deplore the unfortunate end of his brilliant viceroyalty. Years ago [illegible] papers spoke of him in a very different tone. Now they evidently hope to acquire in the disappointed Viceroy a new leader of the opposition.

FLED FROM CONVICT SETTLEMENT IN CORPSE'S GARB.

Dramatic Escape of a French Swindler from Guiana Reads Like a Page Out of One of Eugene Sue's Romances

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Paris, Sept. 23.—Details of the extraordinary escape from the almost impregnable French convict settlement in French Guiana have been disclosed by the recapture of Joseph Sporn, a swindler, who after eight years of liberty will soon be on his way back to French Guiana.

The story of Sporn's escape is dramatic. Sporn was sentenced in 1896 to eight years hard labor and twenty years exile for theft. The year after his deportation to French Guiana he was cutting rushes by the riverside close to the penal settlement. He had gradually wandered out of sight of a warder when he saw floating down the river the corpse of a sailor, who he knew had been murdered by some of his fellow-convicts a few days before.

Sporn secured the corpse, changed clothes and sent it down the stream again, dressed in his convict garb. Then he made tracks toward the river's mouth. There he saw a small Dutch steamer and made desperate signs that he wanted help.

A boat was put off, and he was taken on board, where in broken German he told the captain that he had been shipwrecked and wanted to get back either to Holland or to Dutch Guiana.

Sporn left the ship at Venezuela. There he made some money [illegible] Like all Frenchmen, the temptation to return to Paris was strong, and he succumbed. He went into business here and prospered. His methods of business, however, attracted the attention of the police, and he was taken to headquarters to explain. There a detective recognized him. He is now in Sancy prison, and in a few days will join a convoy of convicts being sent back to Guiana.

ONE FAMILY SERVES AS MAYOR 115 YEARS

Remarkable Record Furnished by Three Members of One French Clan.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Paris, Sept. 23.—The French are sometimes reproached for the instability of their sentiments and institutions, but it would be difficult to find another place in the world in which only three members of the same family have been Mayor during a period of 115 years.

This is the case in the small Commune of Marche Allouarde, Canton of Roye, in the Department of Somme. M. Daudre was Mayor from 1790 to 1837, a period of forty-seven years; Charlemagne Daudre was Mayor from 1837 to 1858, a period of twenty-one years; and finally, M. R. Daudre, who became Mayor in 1858, still retains that office, having occupied it for forty-seven years. He was made a Cavalier of the Legion of Honor in 1900.

SHAH BUYS JEWELS BY POINTING AT THEM

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Paris, Sept. 23.—The Shah has left Vichy for St. Petersburg on a visit to the Imperial family. The [illegible] of Vichy, who have reaped a [illegible] from the Persian monarch's stay there, are sorry he is gone. They are the only people who are sorry, as His Majesty had become a great responsibility to the authorities, which his Oriental caprices did not lighten.

He would spend considerable time daily, accompanied by his two sons, in visiting various establishments, where he singled out the articles which he intended to purchase by pointing to them with his finger without uttering a word. Some of the objects are worth $5,000, others about two cents, and he selected either quite haphazard.

PRINCESS'S HOME FALLING INTO THE SEA.

LADY DHULEEP SINGH.

Bromholm Abbey, the Romantic House of the Dhuleep Singhs, Will, It Is Feared, Be Washed Away in the Gales

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, Sept. 23.—The Prince and Princess Dhuleep Singh will not be able to enjoy their pretty little bungalow near the ruins of Bromholm Abbey, on the southern coast, much longer. If the October gales come on with their usual fury next month the whole place may fall into the sea.

A mighty jump of the low cliff on which it stands fell with a hollow rumble last year, meadow, high road and all sliding down with a rush of thousands of tons of earth. Millions of tons along that part of the coast are now ready to fall as soon as the strong winds and high tides of Autumn get to work on them.

The Prince and Princess Dhuleep Singh (who was Lady Anne Coventry) are much grieved over this, as they were fond of the place, and the dry, bracing air is beneficial to the Prince's rheumatism. They are now making a stay at Harrogate, which is very "stiff" compared with the boundless unconventionality of the lone Bromholm region.

KIDNAPPED IN 1858, HE NOW HUNTS FOR HIS PARENTS.

Wealthy Man Discovers After Reaching Mature Age That He Had Been Stolen Forty-seven Years Ago by a Nurse

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, Sept. 23.—Kidnapped forty-seven years ago and now endeavoring to find his parents and his real identity, is the astonishing story which the personal column of the Times reveals. This is the advertisement:

1858. £2 REWARD for information as to the [illegible] a mysteriously lost [illegible] baby boy about 1858. The son is alive and well. All particulars [illegible] to C. F. M., 8A Miverton st., Kennington road, S. E. London.

The story of this modern "Japhet in search of a father" is romantic. In 1858, about twenty miles from Manchester, a well-to-do landowner and his wife, whose names and exact place of residence are unknown, had a son who a few months after birth was kidnapped by his nurse.

For years the parents searched for their missing son, but no trace of the missing boy was discovered. The baby boy, in the meantime, had been handed over to a sculptor and his wife, who lived at West Gorton, near Manchester. When he was seven the boy and his foster parents moved to Toronto, Canada, where the boy was educated and started in [illegible].

For thirty-four years [illegible] there and became wealthy [illegible] crossed his mind that the man and woman he loved as his parents were no kin to him. Then with dramatic suddenness he learned the truth, but not all of it, for the death of his supposed father robbed him of complete information and forced him to a search for his real parents, with scarcely any clues to aid him.

Madrid, Sept. 23.—A report, which will [illegible] of the Alhambra, Don Miguel Gomez Tortosa, has warned the Spanish Government that unless measures are immediately taken to preserve it, the ancient and celebrated residence of the Moorish kings will crumble to pieces.

The news will especially strike a chord in the hearts of Americans who know Washington Irving's famous descriptions of this and other monuments of the Moorish domination.

DAUGHTERS SIT AS A PROTECTING FRINGE

BY MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Paris, Sept. 23.—The passion for bridge whist, as every one knows, has become an obsession in fashionable society. In Paris it has recently shown itself in its most glaring manifestations. Imagine to yourself a fine performance at the opera of Lohengrin or Tannhauser. The front of the boxes is filled with a line of young girls from fifteen to twenty-one years of age, all fresh and charming, but not very competent to judge of musical art.

Doubtless you think they are there to [illegible] but undeceive yourself, they are there simply to serve as a screen for their insensate mothers and fathers, who in the backs of the boxes give themselves up to the most unbridled devotion to bridge. So we see that this miserable game, which has already killed conversation in our drawing rooms, will very soon kill all art in our theatres.

The Coming Warrior.

Events make the men. Those which are now on foot in Morocco furnish a new proof of this, and thus it is that one of our youngest Generals, General Lyautey, has just come to the fore. As commander of the French troops along the Moroccan frontier, he has been entrusted by the French government with the difficult mission of keeping in check the Moroccan bandits and the representatives of the Sultan, who are not much more scrupulous, without having to resort to force.

No one was better qualified to fill this double role than the young General, who has for ten years [illegible] ticeship of good relations with Eastern people beside General Gallieni in Madagascar. The public before long will hear of him. General Lyautey is not only a soldier, but is also a [illegible] and a colonizer, and in all classes of society he has warm friends and admirers. It is because I anticipate his participation in serious events that I venture to sketch this soldier for the readers of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Ruined by M. Cronier.

A very large group of aristocratic persons is seriously affected by the unexpected suicide of M. Cronier, who shot himself and who speculated dishonestly with the funds of which he had the control. He profited by the fact that he was the titular head of several sugar refineries, the most important of which was the Say Refinery, one of the largest in the world, to carry on a speculation with this group. Hence the failure for about 100,000,000 francs.

M. Cronier himself only possessed 20,000,000 of these, and it is easy therefore to measure the losses which his victims will have to support. Almost all of these belong to the French aristocracy, and there is no doubt that a number of people of fashion who have hitherto lived in luxury will be reduced to a state neighboring on want. These include Prince and Princess de Broglie, Comte and Comtesse de Lubersac and the Duc de Brissac, and still others of importance are involved in this sensational crash. Socially speaking it is less an accident than a disease.

Madame Henri Say, widow of the late proprietor of the Say refineries, is also ruined, owing to the confidence she had placed in the self-murdered M. Cronier. She has given instructions to dispose of her beautiful residence at Lormoy and has cancelled the lease of her villa on the Champs Elysee. The only thing she has been able to save out of the crash is her jewels, which, however, are valued at about $800,000.

The house in the Rue de Lisbonne, which belonged to the late M. Cronier, although it was mortgaged to the extent of $100,000, contains a choice collection of pictures and articles of vertu which are insured for $1,400,000.

It is interesting to recall at this moment that J. Pierpont Morgan offered M. Cronier $40,000 for two splendid tapestry panels after Boucher's cartoons. The speculator, however, refused the offer.

Clemenceau Flops Again.

Dr. Georges Clemenceau has just shifted his gun to the other shoulder. Having been a Revolutionary up to to-day and author of the most destructive theories against the social order, suddenly he has turned against the avowed chief of French Socialism, M. Jaures. He has refused to follow this demagogue in his attacks against the social order, suddenly he has turned against the avowed chief of French Socialism, M. Jaures. He has refused to follow this demagogue in his attacks against patriotism.

Henceforth Mr. Clemenceau must be classed among Conservatives, and this, after his having taken part in the Commune of Paris is an unexpected climax. His attitude is explained by his atavism. Dr. Clemenceau descends in direct line from the Vendeeans, who in 1793 took up arms for the Convention and risked their lives for their democratic ideas.

What one calls antimilitarism, that is to say, the theory which repudiates all recourse to armed force in the disputes of people against people, is contrary to his combative spirit, and we who are the sons of old soldiers, and belong to a social class which is not ashamed of giving the first place in our thoughts to patriotism despite whether blood is to flow—we profit by M. Clemenceau's attitude. This last act of his, under the circumstances, will give him a good chance in the struggle which will take place in the month of February next around the Presidential chair.

CUNARD LINE HOPES TO WIN SUPREMACY

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Liverpool, Sept. 23.—With the two new gigantic turbine steamers now building the Cunard line hopes to wrest from the North German Lloyd and the Hamburg-American lines the supremacy of the sea and the cream of the passenger traffic between New York and Europe.

The two new Cunard liners will be the biggest ships afloat, measuring 800 feet in length, with 88 feet beam and 60 feet in depth; the horse-power of the four turbines aggregates 75,000 and the speed will reach 25 knots an hour, 23.5 being the present record. There are eight decks, and an important feature on the lower deck, devoted largely to third class passengers, is the subdivision into separate staterooms. The great dining saloon measures 80 feet by 125 feet, and seats 500 people.

The motive power consists of four turbines, with an indicated horse-power of 18,000 each. The boiler power is a capacity of 75,000 horse-power, which would give a speed of twenty-five knots with reciprocating engines.

Wicked Young Crown Prince of Servia Dubbed "His Highness the Hooligan!"

INVADES THE SACRED PRECINCTS OF A CONVENT.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Belgrade, Sept. 23.—Servia's Crown Prince George is the "Bad Boy of Europe," although he reached his majority only on September 9.

By the English in Belgrade he is referred to as "His Highness the Hooligan," and he has earned the title. His escapades are not those of a high-spirited, reckless young prince, for many of his acts would have disgraced his great-grandfather, the swineherd, who was the first of the present line of Servia's rulers.

Among the many acts of rowdyism marked against him are these.

With three companions he drove from the Cafe de Paris in the small hours of the morning, battered in the wicket gate of the Convent of the Blessed Trinity outside Belgrade, ran a sword through the body of the famous watchdog and was about to force his way into the heart of the convent, when the mother superior confronted him and offered him the alternative of leaving the place or causing her death.

He was turned out of the principal music hall in Belgrade for flinging champagne bottles at the leader of the orchestra, and for mounting the stage and publicly making love to Madame Beyla, a favorite performer of the Servian capital.

He has contracted a false marriage with a beautiful girl, the daughter of a general, three of the prince's friends acting as priests and witnesses.

Only a few months ago he shot a young Macedonian with whom he had quarrelled, but the affair was hushed up and diplomatically smothered under the description of an "unfortunate accident."

His father, who has had his own troubles, realizes clearly the danger of the position in which he is being placed by Prince George. It is openly declared in Belgrade that the Crown Prince will never be permitted [illegible] King of Servia [illegible] methods the people of Belgrade rid themselves of their former monarch and his queen realize that the prediction is very likely to come true.

"We make our own kings, and if they displease us we unmake them," is the grim and bitter word floating about through Belgrade to-day among those who look with nothing of further toleration upon the son of the father who was offered the crown of Servia merely through a sentimental regard for traditions. Their desire to see these traditions preserved in all respects is likely to cause them to do more blood-letting or to force the King to exile Prince George.

That the prince is a daring horseman and an expert swordsman has been shown by the manner in which he rid himself of his tutor, Major Levasseur. Last Summer Prince George was turned over to Major Levasseur by King Peter with these words: "The education of my son is confided to you. You must first make a man of him, then a good soldier and finally a King. Rely at all times on my assistance."

The prince outraged and confronted Major Levasseur and at the end of three months the major resigned and threw up his unpleasant task. In his short term of service he was twice thrown from his horse following the reckless princeling, who on one occasion put his mount at a pair of oxen barring his road. In a fencing bout he severely injured Major Levasseur, who was confined to his bed recovering from his injuries during the greater part of the time he was employed as tutor to the prince.

On one occasion, however, he was supported nobly by King Peter. Having called an offence of Prince George to the attention of the King, the sturdy old monarch personally chastised the prince, using a strap and welting him unmercifully. This punishment was called forth by the folly of the prince in driving four times in one afternoon before the door of a famous singer, making elaborate bows while the street looked on in displeased amusement.

GERMAN SOLDIER'S KIT IS A WONDER

It Is the Heaviest in the World and Contains Enough to Stock a Store.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Berlin, Sept. 23.—The German infantry soldier carries a heavier campaign kit than any other soldier in the world. The burden is so great that the War Office has decided to reduce it by replacing the heavy calfskin knapsack with one of light canvas.

Despite this reduction, the German infantryman will still be overloaded, for this is a list of the articles he carries in the field, aside from his rifle, bayonet and cartridges:

Cooking utensils.
Various parts of a tent.
An overcoat.
Thirty rounds of ammunition.
A linen suit.
A quantity of underwear.
Two pairs of boots.
Bootbrushes and blacking.
Numerous metal tools.
A hymnbook.
A box for trifles.
A variety of personal articles.

AMERICAN WINS IN DRESSMAKER'S SUIT

Paris Modiste Persists in Making Costume That Was Countermanded.

Carlsbad, Sept. 23.—A case has just been decided here which is not without interest for American women travelling in Europe. Mrs. Marx Brummel and her daughter, Miss Irene Brummel, of Boston, who were staying here, admired the models in a dressmaker's shop window, and went in and selected material for a frock for the younger woman.

[illegible] their hotel they reconsidered the matter [illegible] decided they did not want the dress selected, and sent a countermanding order at once. The dressmaker, nevertheless, made the dress and sent it to Mrs. Brummel, who refused it.

It was sent several times, and each time refused by the porter, and then the dressmaker brought suit in the local court for the value of the dress, something over $200. Mrs. Brummel put the case in the [illegible] J. S. [illegible] court to accept Mrs. Brummel's view, and the plaintiff was ordered to pay the costs.

Terrible Accidents DUE TO EPILEPTIC FITS

Young Man Burned to Death and Beautiful Girl Crushed by Cars.

Recently a son of Dr. M. Bartley, Moran, Texas, while suffering a paroxysm of Epilepsy, fell into the fire and was so badly burned that he died within a few days.

A short time previous a beautiful young lady of Paterson, N. J., while crossing the street was overcome by a seizure or fit, and falling in front of an approaching car, was run over and crushed to death.

Scarcely a day passes that we do not read of similar happenings. Quite different, however, was the experience of Harris Bray of Hodge, Mo., as the following letter from his father, written in reply to an inquiry, will verify:

Dear Sir:—Harris Bray, my son, to whom your letter was addressed, was cured by the German-American Institute, of Kansas City, Mo., some time ago. He lives in Corder, Mo. now and is married, and has never had any symptoms of Epilepsy since he was cured. I think you would find them thoroughly competent, and if they say they can cure you, I would have no hesitancy in taking treatment. They guarantee a cure, and if it ever was to return, you may be sure they would make it good. I must say Harris had Epilepsy awfully bad, and I feel grateful to them. Besides, I have taken treatment of them myself and find them to be perfect gentlemen and every ready to do just what they say. If Prof. Clark says they can cure you, I will guarantee that they can do it. Hoping you will try them and be cured, I am, yours respectfully, F. H. BRAY, Hodge, Mo.

F. E. Weimert of Larned, Kansas, furnishes additional proof of the German-American Institute's skill.

Dear Sirs:—It is now about three years since I took your treatment and I can truthfully say that I have been cured of Epilepsy. We placed my case in your hands four years ago last June under a guarantee. I had my doubts of a cure, for I had taken treatment from a prominent specialist in Epilepsy in Philadelphia, another in New York City, one in Kansas City, a medical institute in Michigan, another in Atchison, Kansas, and several other doctors, but none of them did me any good. I was having my attacks about every four or five weeks, but since commencing your treatment I have had but one attack, and that was about four months after starting with the medicines.

Prof. J. T. R. Clark, Founder

We are glad that I tried your method and hope that the many others afflicted as I was will take advantage of your skill and that you may have the same success with them that you had with me. I am, truly yours,

F. E. WEIMERT, Larned, Kansas, Box 194.

Dear Reader:—If you are afflicted with Epilepsy there is no reason why you should continue to suffer. The German-American Institute has perfected a method which absolutely cures, and so positive are they of their ability to cure Fits that all cases accepted are treated under an absolute guarantee of "no pay unless cured." This is not a "ready-made mixture" treatment or patent medicine humbug.

Each case is treated according to its individual requirements, and under a guarantee of NO PAY UNLESS CURED. Scores of people have been cured by this method after all hope was gone. Sit down right NOW and send for large free illustrated book containing proof of cures, reliability and much additional information of value to the afflicted. Fierce Fight Between Liberals and Moderates Precipitates Tragedy During Preparations for Big Election

Havana, Cuba, Sept. 23.—Government dispatches from Cienfuegos, the scene of yesterday's shooting affray, in which Congressman Enrique Villuendas, Chief of Police Illance and four others were killed, state that a plot on the part of Liberals to blow up the City Hall, courthouse and other public buildings with dynamite has been brought to light.

The plot was discovered through the action of the Liberals in taking into their confidence the secretary to Chief of Police Illance [illegible].

[illegible] was offered a large sum of money if he would join in the plot and assist in carrying it through. He agreed to do so in order to learn all the details of the conspiracy. He then informed the chief of police that the Liberals were preparing to [illegible] and the judges [illegible] followed.

The House of Representatives at its special session last night directed that the remains of Congressman Villuendas should be embalmed and brought to Havana where it was proposed that the body should lie in state, but instead the body was buried this morning at Cienfuegos at the same time that the funeral of Chief of Police Illance was held. Villuendas's body was carried to the cemetery on the shoulders of members of the Liberal party. Moderates attended the funeral of Illance and a conflict was narrowly averted in the cemetery.

The latest reports in regard to the voting for the selection of members of the election boards state that the election is proceeding quietly.

THAYER DENOUNCES THE HAGUE COURT DECISION.

American Delegate at the Peace Congress Says Finding in the Case of Venezuela Was an Error and Indefensible

Lucerne, Sept. 23.—Samuel R. Thayer, one of the American delegates to the International Peace Congress, was warmly applauded for an address in which he [illegible] the Hague tribunal for its Venezuelan decision. He said:

"Among twentieth century problems there is one that deserves more than a passing notice. To what extent, if any, shall preferential treatment be accorded to those nations that adopt coercive measures in enforcing pecuniary claims which are [illegible]?

"The utterly erroneous and indefensible decision of the Hague tribunal in the Venezuelan matter, whereby the court [illegible] equity [illegible] rights [illegible] to England, Germany [illegible] over the United States and other powers, has awakened the deep disapproval of and the condemnation of the friends of arbitration everywhere.

"That a precedent should be bestowed upon the powers in question for putting in jeopardy the very existence of a weak power over a matter which public opinion [illegible] compelled these same powers to submit to a third party for determination, has done much to unsettle the confidence of the public in the usefulness of that tribunal as well as the equity of its judgments.

"That this mischievous deliverance may not remain as a precedent to embarrass in the future, it behooves the friends of arbitration everywhere to pronounce against it through an organized public opinion of such force as to bring about a speedy revocation of that unjust judgment."

The congress telegraphed congratulations to King Oscar of Sweden and to the members of the Norwegian cabinet on the pacific solution of the difficulties between the two countries.

A resolution thanking Congressman Bartholdt of Missouri for his efforts to create a national parliament was passed unanimously.

Astonishing Prices American Millionaires Are Forced to Pay for Shooting and Fishing Rights in the Highlands

DISCLOSURES AT PHIPPS BOYS' TRIAL

Edinburgh, Sept. 23.—Wealthy Americans in Scotland are delighted at the outcome of the trial of J. S. Phipps and R. C. Phipps, found not guilty of shooting gamekeepers. They trust that the result of the trial [illegible] the high court [illegible] for better sport [illegible] and for [illegible] better treatment for [illegible].

Andrew Carnegie, H. C. Phipps, Sr., the Hon. Morrison, Carnegie's right hand man in Scotland and many other men [illegible] were present when the verdict was given. The news was [illegible] over the Highlands [illegible] castles [illegible].

[illegible] the rentals [illegible] and hunting through [illegible] extravagant [illegible] gamekeepers and [illegible] are ruinous.

$82 for Every Salmon Landed.

It appeared in the evidence that for the fishing on the little Beauly River at Beaufort Castle Mr. Phipps paid for three months $10,000. He had only the right of fishing in [illegible] Mr. Duff [illegible] $15,000 [illegible] for salmon fishing in the Highlands [illegible] Beaufort [illegible] all 170 fish, which works out at about $82 for each salmon landed.

In addition to his fishings Mr. Phipps pays a large sum for the rent of Beaufort Castle and also the [illegible] that he is an excellent tenant, as the factor for Lord Lovat [illegible] testified in the witness box [illegible] he has spent in gifts to the people of the district for public purposes during the few years he has leased the castle fully $30,000, besides, of course, [illegible].

Secretly and at Midnight.

When the Highland gillies decided to net the Beauly at a favorite spot near the castle they went there at midnight. Although they receive in addition to their wages lavish tips from the Beaufort castle party and as much game and fish as they wish for [illegible] friends, yet they seem to [illegible] the habit of organizing these secret expeditions.

No information was given either of Mr. Phipps or to Lord Lovat [illegible] they knew they were [illegible] allowed to poach. All of them [illegible] the court with as little that every [illegible] was done [illegible] possible.

They had succeeded in netting 40 fine salmon when the two young Messrs. Phipps hurried down from the castle and challenged the figures they could dimly make out in the darkness. No response was given and a fusillade and the poachers tried to escape without their identity being discovered.

The young Americans fired No. 6 shot and pellets [illegible] poachers. Unfortunately a sporting pellet or two lodged in the eye of one of the men and has [illegible] to be extracted. Had it not been for this nothing further would have been heard of the occurrence. He now receives a pension from Mr. Phipps for himself and wife of $8 a week.

But from the American lessees' point of view it is disturbing to learn that the head men on the estate in charge of the fishing net the river at night when he is supposed to be sound asleep and do not account to him for the fish.

Paris Woman Obtains Permission to Dig Up a Graveyard in the Quest for Riches Hidden by Monks 200 Years Ago

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Paris, Sept. 23.—Mme. Lamouche, who lives in Paris, has just written to the Municipal Council of Gilly-les-Vougeot, near Dijon, asking to be allowed to make excavations in the cemetery of that place at a spot where, according to a letter written in Latin in her possession, there is a buried treasure of enormous value which was hidden by the monks of a religious establishment which vanished over two hundred years ago.

The Latin letter was recently discovered among some papers belonging to this lady's family, which is a very old one. As she promised to hand over to the town a half of whatever she finds, the authorities have agreed to her making the search, and this has been begun.

So far, an ancient stone coffin has been found, but the town has not yet allowed the coffin to be opened.

London, Sept. 23.—Whitelaw Reid, who has lately been an ambassador [illegible] has just lost an old servant in the person of his French chef, who after a short illness died in the French Hospital in London. The assiduous care with which the Ambassador looked after the smallest wants of the dying servant was very touching. He went to the hospital many times at great personal inconvenience and did everything he could to soothe the poor fellow's pain and make his last days as comfortable as possible.

The Ambassador, who is making short stays at visitors' houses in Scotland, is to dine with King Edward at Balmoral shortly. The King singles him out from the whole range of the Diplomatic Corps for long chats on world politics and other subjects and His Majesty has quite taken to Mrs. Reid.

With the exception of Count Wolff Metternich and the Marquis de Soveral, who are always paying informal visits to the King, there is no one in all the Diplomatic Corps so well liked at the British Court as Mr. Reid of New York.

Equally popular are Mrs. Reid and daughter, who have received marked social attention from [illegible].

Mr. Reid has appointed as his private secretary William Walsh, son of Lord Ormathwaite. Mr. Walsh was formerly in the Grenadier Guards, but has lately acted as Comptroller to Lord Derby at Knowsley, an appointment he has recently resigned since his engagement a few months ago. It is expected that the marriage of William Walsh to Lady Norah Spencer-Churchill, sister of the Duke of Marlborough, will take place during the autumn, the ceremony having been postponed from July last, for which month it was originally fixed.

Mystical and Unexplored Field of Research Opened by Experiments Conducted by Very Clever French Scientist

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Paris, Sept. 23.—An unexplored field of research has, according to "Annales des Sciences Psychiques," been opened up by the announcement made by Commandant Darget on the subject of photographs by human radiations.

It was stated at the general meeting of the Societe Universelle d'Etudes Psychiques held here that photographs had been received from Commandant Darget, which had been obtained by the operator merely putting his hand over the plate, his fingers scarce touching it, for ten or fifteen minutes, at the same time fixing his thoughts upon a certain object.

On developing the plate the image [illegible] or even of [illegible] of the operator is [illegible] on the sensitive [illegible] action of [illegible] thought [illegible] were also obtained by applying the plate to the forehead. FRENCH GIRL CLIMBS THE ALPINE PEAKS

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Geneva, Sept. 23.—Mademoiselle Marie Marvingt of Nancy, who is a sturdy French girl of twenty-two, has made an extraordinary record among Alpinists.

This season she has successfully scaled most of the difficult peaks, including Monte Rosa, Wetterhorn, Dent du Geant, Breithorn, Gabelhorn, Aiguille du [illegible], Grand Charmoz and the Aiguille [illegible].

Mlle. Marvingt and her two guides nearly lost their lives while descending from the last mentioned peak a few days ago, as the result of an avalanch of stones.

MRS. ASQUITH AIMS TO BE A POLITICAL HOSTESS.

She Is Determined to Outshine Lady Colebrooke When Her Husband Gets His Seat in the Next Liberal Cabinet

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, Sept. 23.—Mrs. H. H. Asquith, wife of the [illegible] Liberal leader, is going to outshine Lady Colebrooke as a political hostess if she can. She admits she finds her husband something of a task, and they rarely go about together, but the prospect of Mr. Asquith becoming a big Cabinet Minister very soon when the Liberal Party jumps into office again and the sudden addition of $25,000 a year to his income, is inducing her to try and shine as a great party leader among women.

She has informed her friends that she will give two sets of parties when her husband gets into the Cabinet. One will be the highest set, the cooked, exclusive party, [illegible] gatherings given by Lady [illegible] at her lovely house and garden in Stratford place, near Marble Arch, where [illegible] society loves to [illegible] sipping iced coffee under the trees, with knowledge that Lady Colebrooke will steadfastly refuse to give out any list of guests to the papers.

The other sort will be what are called the "Tea and Hairy parties," where crowds of eccentric strangers, Liberal and Radical [illegible] and workingmen speakers will be allowed to come on their [illegible] to wear their boots and refrain from eating ices with their knives. Mrs. Asquith is full of personal charms and will enjoy it immensely.

For a Good Complexion

FOR Clear Eyes
—Sweet Breath
—Clean Tongue
—Calm Nerves
—Good Temper and —Poise

Eat a Cascaret whenever you suspect you need it. Carry a little 10c Emergency box constantly with you, in your Purse or Pocket.

When do you need one?

—When your Tongue is coated
—When you have Heartburn, Belching, Acid Risings in Throat
—When Pimples begin to peep out
—When your stomach Gnaws and Burns.

That's the time to check coming Constipation, Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

That's the time to take a Cascaret.

One candy tablet night and morning, taken regularly for a short time, is warranted to cure the worst case of Constipation or Indigestion that walks the earth.

One tablet taken whenever you suspect you need it will insure you against 90 per cent of all other ills likely to attack you.

Because 90 per cent of these ills begin in the Bowels, or exist through poor Nutrition.

Cascarets don't purge, don't weaken, don't irritate, nor upset your stomach.

They don't act like "Physic" that flush out the Bowels with a waste of precious Digestive Juice needed for tomorrow's Bowel-work.

No,—they act like Exercise, on the Bowels, instead.

They stimulate the Bowel Muscles to contract and propel the Food naturally past the little valves that mix Digestive Juices with Food.

They strengthen these Bowel-Muscles by exercising them.

This stronger action, producing greater nutrition from food, brings back to the Bowel-Muscles greater strength for self-operation.

The Bowel Muscles can thus, in a short time, dispense with any Drug assistance whatever.

Cascarets are safe to take as often as you need them, while pleasant to eat as Candy.

Then carry the little ten-cent box constantly with you in your purse, and take a Cascaret whenever you suspect you need it.

One Cascaret at a time will promptly cleanse a foul Breath, or Coated Tongue.

A thousand dollars a year spent in amusements could not buy for you half so much hearty Happiness, solid Comfort, Cheerful Temper and Health Insurance, as that little ten-cent "Vest Pocket" Box of Cascarets will bring you.

All druggists sell them—over ten million boxes a year, for six years past.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

A sample and the famous booklet, "Curse of Constipation," Free for the asking. Address Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago or New York.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.
HOW THE CLUBS STAND.

[illegible]

GAMES YESTERDAY.

[illegible]

ONE YEAR AGO TO-DAY.

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

For the first time this year the Champs are in third place in the American League race. The strong left arm of Jesse Tannehill and the equally strong right arm of Cy Young did the business at the Huntington Avenue Grounds yesterday afternoon, while the New York, Detroit and Cleveland clubs kindly dropped two games apiece.

The St. Louis Browns were outclassed at every stage of the games, Collins's men making enough runs in the opening rounds of each contest to put the results in cold storage. In the first game the Bostons rolled up seven tallies in the first three innings, and in the second they counted four times in the first and second cantos, putting in another run in the eighth by means of a couple of three-baggers.

The pleasing thing about the whole business was the way old Uncle Cy mowed them down in his game. Twelve of the Browns whiffed the atmosphere, and this strike-out stunt breaks the record of the year for right-handed pitchers and equals Waddell's [illegible] for the season.

Uncle Cy Invincible.

The old gentleman used only a straight ball throughout the game, but he mixed in the "spit" ball frequently, and as a result the Browns were let down with two measly singles, one of which was a hit that Parent knocked down but could not field, and the other a short fly that fell in front of Godwin.

Young's exhibition was one of his very best and the fans cheered him again and again for his work. In the [illegible] inning he retired the side on strikes and in the fifth, sixth and seventh, two out of the three batsmen went out the same way. Only two [illegible] got [illegible] first base, one in the first on a sacrifice and again in the seventh, when the veteran hit a man with the ball after Wallace had singled.

Tannehill was a little more liberal in allowing [illegible] was [illegible] as the men behind him [illegible] the game in the early stages. In the third inning the Browns bunched three hits and in the ninth they scratched two more, but in the other rounds the best they could do was to knock out a single [illegible] in a while.

Ferris Plays a Star Game.

Ferris played a star game at second base. In the first game he had eleven assists. Freeman put up a star game also and batted for keeps. Godwin and Rising looked better than they did the day before, both [illegible] the ball safely and taking care of everything that came their way. [illegible] and Armbruster caught fine games.

In the first game Sugden started in to catch, but when the Champs had rolled up four runs in the first inning he retired in favor of Roth. The latter did well until he came to grief in the sixth inning. Rising put up a foul which landed close to the press stand. Roth caught it going full tilt and then crashed into the stand, his [illegible] with a resounding whack. He recovered and fed and was [illegible] for [illegible] minutes. [illegible]

[illegible] weird [illegible] that Wallace [illegible] runs column with some [illegible]. Sudhoff was effective after the Bostons had made enough runs to win, while the same can be said of Glade. The latter artist was touched up for six safeties in the first two innings. Then he changed his delivery to a cross-fire and had the Champs guessing up to the ninth when Godwin singled and Freeman and Rising followed with three baggers.

Champs Start Right In.

In the first game Frisk singled in the first inning with two down, but was left and then the Champs started to put the game on ice. Parent walked and Stahl singled to left. Unglaub forced Parent but Godwin's single to left scored Stahl. Freeman grounded out and Rising walked. Ferris singled to left, scoring Unglaub and Godwin. On the throw in Ferris kept on to second [illegible] Rising [illegible] Armbruster grounded out.

In the second St. Louis went out in order but [illegible] by Tannehill [illegible] Unglaub's force of Parent and Godwin's single.

With one down in the third Sudhoff doubled to right and scored on Stone's single. Boston added two more in that inning on a pass to Rising, Ferris's single, Jones's error, and singles by Tannehill and Parent.

This made the score 7 to 1 and there was nothing more doing until the ninth when the Browns got another run on singles by Frisk and Wallace and an out.

Nine Horse Collars.

With Uncle Cy in the box there was nothing to the second game. It was one-two-three order for five of the innings, while two singles, a hit by pitched ball and errors by Parent and Ferris allowed a Brown man to reach first in [illegible] innings. Nine horse collars resulted.

For Boston the scoring began right off the reel. Parent walked for a starter, Stahl and Unglaub followed with singles. Godwin advanced the runners with an out at first and Freeman put in a two-bagger. Two runs came in and there would have been more if Stahl had not been caught at second base.

In the second inning Ferris and Criger singled, and these with an error by Van Zant and a single by Parent were good for two more runs. In the eighth, with one down, Godwin singled, but was out stealing. Then Freeman tore off a triple to the right field fence and Rising came along with another in the same direction, which gave the Bostons their last run. The score:

NOTES OF THE GAMES.

Collins sat on the bench in citizen's clothes, with his left hand bandaged. He may be able to play to-morrow.

Walter Badger, the old Yale player, enjoyed the fun from the second row of the grand stand.

Tip O'Neil, who played with the Bostons in the Spring of 1904 until he was traded for Selbach, was a spectator.

The Champs are happy to-day. They won two games yesterday and it was pay day to boot. Also they are in third place for the first time this year.

Grimshaw reports that the injury to his side is coming along nicely.

Things broke well for the Champs. But they hit the ball in fine style early in both games.

Freeman's batting eye has returned, and he is knocking out the swats in old time style.

There's no denying the fact that Godwin is a [illegible] fast fielder.

Four hits against him in the last two games he has pitched is Uncle Cy's record.

Stone fanned seven times in the five games.

On Monday the Chicago White Sox appear for a series.

BRACE FOR SENATORS.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The Washington Americans won a double-header with Detroit to-day. The first game was a gift after Killian blew up in the seventh inning. The second game was a pitchers' battle. Tate, Washington's new outfielder, made his debut, and looks good. Scores:

Providence, Sept. 23.—Providence justified the hopes of the most ardent followers here to-day by winning both games of the double-header with Rochester, and making it sure that the pennant will come here at the close of to-morrow's game, if it results in a victory, as the team is now tied with Baltimore, which has no more games to play.

The Bronchos were determined that the Grays would have no easy time in winning and played every minute of both games as if the season was but just commencing. The first game was a slugging bee with the batting on both sides about even. Poole was in the points for the locals and though allowing himself to be hit pretty freely was not so generous with passes. Every man on the local team except Cooper, got at least one hit off him. Cleary and Dunn clouted him safely three times.

Not all the heavy hitting was on the side of the locals, however, for Clancy, Smith and Wallace each swatted with a vengeance and Clancey once for a home run.

The second game was a dazzling windup of the afternoon. Rock figured in this with Conn, these two getting four hits for nine bases between them. Rock also fielded with the accuracy of a veteran. In order to break the tie with Baltimore and win the pennant the Grays must win their game to-morrow with Montreal, and it will be the last game to be played in the Eastern League. The score:

At the Columbia all this week will be shown moving pictures of the Britt-Nelson fight. This feature is added to the regular performance by Manager Farren, knowing the great interest the sporting public of this city has taken in the recent contest.

FAVORITES FALL BY WAYSIDE AT DOVER.

Special to the Sunday American.

Dover, N. H., Sept. 23.—Two favorites fell by the wayside at Granite State Park this afternoon. Harrison Wilkes, in Cox's stable, was a favorite in the 2.12 trot, but Elmitagro carried off the big end of the money. Dick Brino was the favorite in the 2.17 trot, but he never got a look in at the money, Whittens Wilkes winning easily in straight heats. Melphomene was the old favorite that made good, and it took him six heats to land the money.

"YOUNG CORBETT" TO MEET ERNE

Local pug followers will be given a chance to witness some grand milling this week, for on Thursday night Bill Crowley, matchmaker of the Douglass Athletic Club, Chelsea, announces a fifteen-round bout between "Young Corbett" and Young Erne, the premier boxer of Philadelphia.

This bout should prove one of the best ever pulled off locally, for both boys have international reputations. They are to meet at catchweights and, although "Corbett" is likely to weigh a few pounds more than the Slowtown lad, the latter is sure to make up for the difference by being in excellent form, while the ex-featherweight champion is very likely to be a trifle fat.

SULLY TO MEET MARTIN.

Peter Sullivan of Fall River and Terry Martin of Philadelphia, have been matched to box before the Highland A. C. of Marlboro, October 9. Both men have posted forfeits. This should prove one of the most interesting bouts ever held in this State.

BOOKMAKERS QUIT GRAVESEND $600,000 TO THE GOOD.

Special to the Boston American.

Race Track, Gravesend, Sept. 23.—The bookmakers picked up their traps, sealed their cash boxes and quit Gravesend for Brighton Beach to-day, taking with them $600,000 of public money.

This was "get-away day" of the most disastrous Autumn meeting from the standpoint of the public ever known in the history of the Brooklyn Jockey Club.

W. Cowan, O. A. Jones, Sol Lichtenstein and George Bowles are the biggest winners among the bookmakers, while Jack McDonald, among the plungers, is reported a $60,000 winner.

The Prospect Handicap, for two-year-olds, at about six furlongs, went to Plunger Charley Ellison's Lady Navarre, at 10 to 1, with Captain Sam Brown's Accountant, at 12 to 1, in the place, and Maxie Witt, in Brady's colors, third.

J. W. Colt's Gus Straus, the jumper, for which he paid $10,000 to Ed Corrigan, won the steeplechase of two and a half miles in a hard [illegible], Bonfire, with [illegible], at 6 to 1, third.

The Winners.

FIRST RACE—Selling, 3-year-olds and up, about six furlongs. Rusk 103 (Romanelli), 3½ to 1 and 6 to 5, won; Taxter, 96 (Schaffner), 10 to 1 and 4 to 1, second; Ida Davis, 101 (Cregan), 60 to 1 and 20 to 1, third. Time—1.11. Platoon, Water Mirror, King Pepper, Girdle, Blucher, Irene Lindsey, Hannibal Bey also ran.

SECOND RACE—[illegible] four-year-olds and upward, about 2½ miles. Gus Straus, 145 (Rodrock), even and 2 to 5, won; Bonfire, 9 to 5 and [illegible], second; [illegible], third. Time—4.57 2-5. Ivan also ran.

THIRD RACE—The Prospect Handicap, two-year-olds, about six furlongs. Lady Navarre, [illegible] (Burns), 10 to 1 and 4 to 1, won; Accountant, 115 (J. Martin), 12 to 1 and 5 to 1, second; Maxie Witt, [illegible], third. Time 1.12. Oak Duke, Holscher, Vendor, Early and Often, Clark Griffith, Snow, Kings Daughter, Tiptoe, Bill Phillips, Oaklawn also ran.

FOURTH RACE—[illegible] 121 (Dominick), 8½ to 1 and 3 to 5, third. Time—2.33 1-5.

FIFTH RACE—Selling, three-year-olds and up, one and one-eighth miles. Hippocrates, 98 (McIntyre), 5 to 1 and 2 to 1, won; [illegible]; Errant, 111 (J. Martin), 8 to 1 and 3 to 1, third. Time—1.53 4-5. Flinders, Ascot Belle, Voladay, The Southerner, Gamara, Maznar and Father D. also ran.

SIXTH RACE—Selling, three-year-olds and up, about six furlongs. Consideration, 101 (Horner), 15 to 1 and 6 to 1, won; Emergency, 101 (B. Smith), 6 to 1 and 2 to 1, second; Invincible, 99 (Ogilvie), 8 to 1 and 3 to 1, third. Time—1.11 1-5. Lochinvar, Quadrille, Belle of Portland, Colector Jessup, Dapperdod and Caseline also ran.

HARVARD PLAYS FIRST GAME THIS WEEK.

So Far Coach Reid Has Taught His Men Only the Elements of Football—Real Work Begins Now on Soldiers Field

The work on Soldiers Field yesterday finished the first stage in the development of the Harvard eleven for 1905. Coach Reid has now had his charges at work [illegible] seven days and in that time has taught them the A B C's of elementary football and at the same time hardened the candidates so that they are now ready for the opening of the real work of the year — the scrimmage between the first and second teams.

Next Saturday the Crimson eleven opens the season in the Stadium with Williams. [illegible]

Reid has a team [illegible] picked a team that has a code of signals [illegible] week [illegible] stronger than the [illegible] up and down the field.

No Real Football Yet.

What changes five days of real football will make in the personnel of the eleven Harvard men who will line up for the initial game of the year remains to be seen. Certain it is, notwithstanding the fact that in Reid's first combination there [illegible] only [illegible] that the team that has been scrimmaging [illegible] past week has shown [illegible] speed in executing their [illegible] around the [illegible]. The men have also seemed to [illegible] combination, all being fast enough to keep from tripping up and blocking the fastest men on the team.

Though Coach Reid has as yet made no definite announcement, it is almost certain that [illegible] Blair and Graham on the ends in the Williams game there is a very good chance that Harvard's goal line will [illegible]. Neither man has had any experience [illegible] rushes, and the five days that remain between Monday and Saturday of this week is the only time available for them to learn [illegible] the Williams [illegible].

The tackle problem looks better. In Karl Brill and Squires Reid has a good, reliable pair of veterans to begin on. In the opinion of most Squires is more of a guard than a tackle. He lacks the agility that is necessary in a successful tackle. He is experienced, strong and a very hard worker and ought to be a valuable man somewhere on the team.

Speer May Be Tackle.

Roy Speer, who reported for the first time last Friday, looks to many to have the making of a tackle in him. He is mature, weighs 195 and stands close to six feet. His weight is muscle and he moves as though he had speed. What he can do has to be proven yet in actual play. Carr is another man who looks as though he would be able to hold up his end in a stiff game. He is lighter than either Brill, Squires or Speer but is fast and a fighter. He weighs about 185. Montgomery, though a shorter man than Carr, weighs as much and is fast.

Reid has [illegible] Parker from [illegible] in the last few days out to guard. Parker is very heavy, weighing close to 220, and is active on his feet for such a big man. He is hardly rangey enough for an ideal guard, however, and it would still be no surprise to those watching the work daily on Soldiers Field to see Parker go to centre again [illegible] of either Squires or Brill [illegible] has not amounted to much in the past three years. McFaddon, who is the tallest man on the squad, may push some one for guard. He is playing hard and fast in the preliminary work.

Starr Shines at Quarter.

At quarter, Starr is still the only man in sight. Kempner is being worked as Starr's substitute on the first combination. He is small but quick and fast. Quigley, another new man, is working with the second combination. Morris, a second team man last year, is second choice to Quigley now.

From present indications the Crimson backfield will be light this year. Hurley is a light back and his running mate will probably be selected from Foster, Wendell, Nesmith, Lincoln or Boyd. None of these men weigh over 170.

GAMES YESTERDAY.

Special to the Sunday American.

St. Louis, Sept. 23.—St. Louis won from Boston this afternoon in a brilliant pitching battle between Jack Taylor and Little Cy Young, a wild throw giving the former a victory, 2 to 1, after the teams had batted on even terms up to the last half of the eighth inning.

It was a masterly exhibition of twirling on the part of both men, the older one showing great headwork, while the youngster pitched the cleaner ball. St. Louis making but six hits off Young, while Boston made twelve off Taylor. But for the break by Wolverton which eventually resulted in the defeat of Boston, the game was almost an ideal one from every point, with both pitchers going at top speed and the fielding behind them all but perfect.

St. Louis Didn't Make Error.

St. Louis did not make a single error behind Taylor, while Boston made two behind Young. The first was not costly, Tenney dropping a pop foul and the batter afterwards fanning, but when Wolverton shot a low throw past Tenney in the eighth and Hesketter went around to third, it all but ended the contest, there being no one out at the time.

For the first two innings of the game neither team was dangerous, St. Louis pulling off a fast double play in the second. Boston was dangerous in the third and it took all of Taylor's skill to keep the visitors from crossing the plate and with Needham and Young down. A [illegible] singled and Tenney walked. Dolan scratched a hit into McBride, filling the bases. Delehanty could not fathom Taylor, however, and dumped the ball in front of the plate, Grady throwing him out at first.

Honors Even to Sixth.

Honors were then easy up to the sixth, Young fanning the entire side in the fifth. In the sixth Dolan fanned, but Delehanty singled and stole second, leaving it up to Raymer. The latter rolled a grounder to McBride, and died at first.

St. Louis was more fortunate in its half. McBride singled, but was forced by Taylor when the latter tried to sacrifice. Shay singled to centre and Taylor reached third by some good base running. Shannon hit a bad bounder into Raymer and died at first while Taylor came home.

The one run looked like the winning one up to the first half of the eighth. Then, with two gone, Delehanty scratched a hit through the box, Wolverton singled to left and Cannell followed with a single to right, Delehanty scoring. Raymer fouled to Grady, but the score was tied.

Wolverton made his fatal break in the second half of the inning. Helsketter hit toward third, and in hurrying the throw Wolverton sent the ball through Tenney on a low bound. Helsketter went to third on the break and came home with the winning run when McBride singled to left.

Needham singled the first thing in the ninth, and Boston began to regain courage. Moran batted for Young and fanned. Abbaticchio sent a short fly safe to right, but Needham hugged the bag, and was unable to leg it to second in time to beat Degraff's throw. Abby went out trying to steal and ended the game. Attendance, 9,800. The score:

POPE-TOLEDO WINNING CAR IN TRIAL RACE AND DRIVER DINGLEY AND MECHANIC NICHOLS

The fifty-horse power Pope-Toledo which B. F. Dingley piloted in the long race has a four-cylinder motor, six by six. The gasoline tank carries but twenty-five gallons, and a single Pope-Toledo carburetor is used. It has three speeds and a reverse, with a direct drive on the high speed. The wheel base is 96 inches and the front tires are $3\frac{1}{2}$x34, while the rear tires are $4\frac{1}{2}$x24. It is geared to eighty miles an hour at 1,000 revolutions of the engine.

LYNN ASSOCIATION TEAM DEFEATS LEAGUERS.

Lynn, Sept. 23.—Lynn Association tied the series in the sixth game with the Lynn League team this afternoon, by a score of 7 to 3, in a contest characterized by terrific batting, in which the home product excelled. Swope, who started the game for the league team, was batted from the box in the first inning, and Bushey, who relieved him, fared but little better, the opposing batsmen finding them often and hard.

MEDFORD BOYS TOO FAST FOR THE DORCHESTERS.

The Dorchester High and the Medford High opened the football season on the Dunbar avenue field yesterday and the Medford boys had no trouble in getting away with the youngsters from Dorchester.

Siney kicked off and Perrin got the ball and carried it twenty yards. The backs made several gains and in five minutes scored a touchdown. Mather carrying the ball over. Medford failed to kick the goal.

The ball was kicked to Dorchester, who lost it on downs. Pray of Medford gained ten yards in a [illegible] was the best play of the game. The Dorchester boys lost five yards at this point. [illegible] and Mather carried the ball [illegible] yards. Medford then [illegible] the ball by [illegible] Dorchester's [illegible] and Pray made the touchdown, Mather kicking the goal.

In the second half, when the ball was close to the Dorchester goal Siney made a pretty punt, Medford getting the ball on their twenty-five yard line. One of the Medford boys attempted to pass the ball, but Vanderwart, by a remarkable spurt, got in front of the pass and dropped on the ball. Dorchester then made several [illegible] plunges [illegible] for Dorchester's only [illegible] [illegible] Siney [illegible] was not caught perfectly [illegible] Dorchester [illegible] and they missed their chance to [illegible]. Do you know that the average retailer makes from 100 to 200 per cent on every fountain pen he sells? It is a fact. Why not save this profit by dealing direct with the manufacturer? We sell you the $2.50 self-filling pen, 14k solid gold for 89c., the $4.00 size for $1.50, $6.00 size for $2.50. It costs you nothing to try the self-filling Criterion Pen, as we hold your money in trust until you are suited, and if it is not the best and cleanest fountain pen you ever had your money will be refunded.

AIN'T IT A CORKER?

Dear Doctor Conway: I write to know if you are in same place, as I have a friend who wants to try your Bustoids. When I hear she will send, through me, for two boxes, she does not wish her husband to know at present. Reference to your books will show I used a few boxes of your Bustoids and have often intended to write, thanking you for advice sent with them. I had splendid success. I consider your Bustoids the finest thing in the world, as they not only develop the bust, but they improve one's general health. I take great care of myself, weigh 137, Waist Measure 23, Bust 38, and it's plump and firm, as a young girl's. I am delighted with the success. I have tried many things, but as for developing the bust without your Bustoids, it is impossible. They seem to act in a few days. I cannot praise them enough. Hope to hear at once. Mrs. A. G. S., West 79th St., New York. Come, read original, or we forfeit $1,000. We enlarge the bust 4 to 10 inches every time, or forfeit $1,000. Call for FREE INSTRUCTIONS. Sealed facts, 4c. stamps. ACTOR PLYMPTON SAYS HE PLAYS PART OF A REAL CRIMINAL POORLY

JULIAN HAWTHORNE GIVES INTERESTING ADVICE ON EXERCISE AND HYGIENE

By Julian Hawthorne.

M[illegible] tation, the other day, to the readers of this column, to ask me questions on [illegible] response. I [illegible] not answer all these letters, even if I did nothing else. But, as might be [illegible] I can select one which fairly represents all of its sort. Moreover, a great number of the questions will be answered in the articles as we go along. Others, of a more special kind, I will now tak[illegible] space allows.

Mr. [illegible]nard Goetges writes:

> [illegible] since [illegible] began them in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. I have picked out [illegible] fitted my case, and have been greatly helped. I have been living in ig[illegible]nce all my life, so to say. I have made all the mistakes which pertain to [illegible] condition; about three years ago I read some books on exercise and hygiene, and tried hard to correct my mistakes, but failed of success. I wish [illegible] join some athletic club, but my position does not allow me time. I am [illegible] alone in the world; I have my mother with me, but she can give me [illegible] I have the advice of plenty of friends, but they are not of [illegible] kind I would like to have. My health is running down. I have been going to doctors and have spent much money, but got no satisfaction; I could find no health or happiness. I am encouraged by your offer to ask your advice as to what I should do. I am thirty-two years old."

You did not say what your occupation is, Bernard, or your hours of work, or what is the matter with you, so I am somewhat in the dark. But I think you need airing and watering. Go to bed half an hour earlier than usual to-night, and to-morrow get up half an hour earlier. [illegible] go out in the street and run eight blocks. Rest a minute, turn around and run home again. Wash off, rub down, dress and breakfast. When you return from your work in the evening and have had dinner, walk a mile at an easy pace, and before going to bed take some general exercise in your room with[illegible]. For this exercise follow the directions in any of the scores of manuals and magazines of exercise that are published, but aim to exercise your trunk more than your arms and shoulders. Ten minutes' vigorous work will do, for the present. Rub down again and go to bed. Keep your windows open all the time, day and night, and whenever you have opportunity go out in the open air.

DRINK WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Now for your diet. The moment you get up in the morning, and before you run, drink a glass of water not too cold. Midway between breakfast and lunch drink two more, and do the same thing between lunch and dinner. After your night exercise, and before going to bed drink two more. Drink no water with meals. If you are used to coffee take [illegible] at breakfast. Eat meat but once a day—at dinner; for breakfast and lunch, some breakfast food, milk and fruit, with a boiled egg, if you think you need more. With your meat at dinner take boiled rice, or a potato and some green vegetable—spinach for choice. You may have all the whole-wheat bread you need, without too much butter, but don't eat too much of anything; you can hardly eat too little.

After [illegible] weeks lengthen your morning run to ten blocks, and run a little faster, and put more vigor into your night exercise. Walk home from your place of business in the evenings before dinner. After that, and after any exercise that moistens the skin, [illegible] well all over with a towel before sitting down. Don't mind the trouble; it is well worth it. Unless you are willing to take pains with yourself, and keep it up, don't come to me for advice. You will find great benefit from your seven or eight glasses of water a day, and from abstaining from all liquids at meals, except your morning cup of coffee. After six weeks of this regimen, faithfully carried out, let me know how you are.

A [illegible] gentleman who signs the inspiring name of "Robert, a True Man" wants to know how many hours of sleep does a young man require."

EIGHT HOURS' SLEEP IS ENOUGH.

Too little sleep is bad for the brain, Robert; I should say that you need at least twice as much as you have been having. But to a number of persons who have put the question in intelligent form, I will say that more sleep is needed for those who work hard with their [illegible] than for those who work hard with their bodies. If you are wakeful at night don't try to sleep, but get up and walk about; take a bath; go outdoors [illegible] for an hour or two. Then go back to bed and get up at your [illegible] not read or smoke. If you do not exercise regularly, and eat sensibly, [illegible] regularly. Eight hours is enough, but when you wake naturally, get up. If you wish to curtail your sleep don't go to bed later, but get up earlier. Ten at night to six in the morning are the best hours for sleep in Summer; eleven to seven in Winter.

Mr. Frederick C. K.—he wishes his initials only printed—writes:

> "Having become interested in your series on walking, will say I am one of the many not knowing there could be so much benefit derived from it. I have tried an hour's brisk walk every evening and now think there is no other exercise more beneficial. Would you commend running? If so, how long a [illegible] with, and how often? I also wish to know if the following measurements of myself are in any way good: I am eighteen years and seven months old; height, 5 feet 9 inches; shoulders, 46 inches; chest expanded, 40 inches; waist, 29 inches. I weigh 150 pounds net."

Fred[illegible] between your shoulders and chest and your waist is sensational; it reminds me of the pictures of the hero in the old fashioned New York Ledger stories, which you are too young to remember. I suspect that the girth of your head is [illegible] it should be. Until you have added six inches to that waist you are in [illegible] danger. The pouter pigeon proclivity of your chest will doubtless subside about the time you are willing to have your whole name published. I presume [illegible] you weigh 150 pounds net you mean you weigh that naked, but the form of contraction is new to me. As for the running, you will have an opportunity to read about it before long. The benefit you have derived from walking is even more [illegible] I had expected [illegible] as your letter is dated two days after my article was [illegible]ed. Probably, however, you have already practiced jumping at conclusions. Moderate this tendency; you may have several years yet to live, and you can afford to [illegible]de your time.

MENTAL SCIENTIST SEEKS ADVICE.

To others who send "measurements" let me suggest that only height, weight and age are necessary. Tell what your business is, your hours of work, and what, if anything [illegible] heretofore in the way of gymnastics or athletics. Some people welcome advice in order to enjoy the luxury of disregarding it. Here, for example, is a sybarite from Los Angeles, in California—Mr. Fenner H. Webb:

> I have been reading your lectures on athletics, and they do me much [illegible] combining them with mental science I am able to lie in bed two [illegible] each day than I formerly did and dream of the exercise I intend [illegible] way I have made numerous excursions to the beaches, taken [illegible] the foothills, and followed the river up through the San Ga[illegible] I am feeling much better and maybe the time will come when I shall be the picture of youth and health."

That gentleman is evidently a poet, and poets live on a higher than the common plane [illegible] which preclude the necessity of exercise, and his being a Californian of course augments his advantage. A mental scientist, too! I am proud to be the cause of his exercising even so much as his imagination.

Mr. Samuel Buel, Jr., who apparently belongs to the leisure class, writes me a letter of three foolscap pages. He begins by saying that he is now about as old as I probably am. It would be interesting to know how old, then, Mr. Samuel Buel, Sr., is. He goes on to state that he has investigated rest, diet and exercise, and has derived no benefit from any of them. "Set us, therefore, some easier task than exercise. Let us eat and drink health. What and where should we eat and drink?"

There is a proverb to the effect that a man of forty is either a fool or a physician. My venerable correspondent must be at least a score of years past forty, and yet he declares that he "does not even know whether to drink at meals or not, or what to drink, when to drink, or how much to drink." But perhaps he is a humorist, entertaining himself at my expense. I am inclined to think that cold water and cold air would serve him best for nourishment. Hot water might be occasionally used, but hot air should be eschewed altogether.

ADVOCATES "ALL-ROUND" ATHLETICS.

I must stop here for the present. I thank my many unanswered correspondents for their letters and rejoice at the widespread interest in exercise and hygiene which they uniformly manifest. There has been a great advance in this respect within a generation, and we have now a thousand persons more or less athletic where formerly we [illegible]. But the number of "all-round" athletes still remains very small, and that is the only kind of athleticism that I shall advocate in these papers. The tendency to cultivate some one branch, such as running, weight throwing, pole vaulting, and so forth, is unnatural and unwholesome, and has been brought about by the mania for competitions, which, in turn, has had the effect of honeycombing athletics with professionalism.

Until our athletic societies make the rule that an athlete who competes in any event at their meetings shall compete in all of them, and that the prize shall be awarded to the highest average winner, the best possibilities of athletics will be missed in this country. What we want is not monsters, freaks, distorted specialists, but well-balanced men, efficient at all points. Let that be our ideal, and then competitions will become rarer, and men and women sound in wind and limb more common. It is the population as a whole that we want to make strong and well; the evolution of a handful of fantastic and one-sided individuals, covered with special medals, like an eruption, is of no use to anybody—not even to them.

TELLS OF STAGE CRIME HE ENACTED.

In Plymouth Jail Cell the Famous Actor Talks About Charge That He Assaulted Friend with Intent to Kill

DECLARES HE IS INNOCENT OF WRONG

Plymouth, Sept. 23.—His voice trembling with emotion, his eyes looking by the bars of the jail corridor through a glaze of tears, Eben Plympton, famous actor and country gentleman, charged with assaulting his life-long friend, Captain George Martin, "with intent to kill," talked of his stage past to a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN to-day, and rehearsed the part he formerly played which was the prototype of that he plays so seriously to-day.

"Almost a Life" was the drama, a London success of a score of years ago. He was the hero. Committed to jail, he wore garb not unlike that he wears to-day. He gazed through bars of mimic iron, as to-day he looks through bars of strongest [illegible]. It was only a play. When he had listened to the plaudits of the hand-clapping multitudes he had only to slip to his dressing room and doff his prison clothes and pass out into the air and freedom while the stage hands shifted the scenes. To-day the play is real. The locks click and clank. The scene-shifter never appears. And Eben Plympton knows what it is to be a prisoner indeed.

Strain Tells Upon Him.

The actor is ill, overcome by the nervous strain of the last few days. His face is pale. His gray-tinged hair is disheveled. There are lines in his face stronger than the limnings of his make-up stick. His eyes were moist as he said:

"For fifty-two years I have lived an honorable life. It is hard to think of going so long with a clear record, and then, at the age of fifty-two, of being charged with intent to kill.

"Intent to kill," he repeated slowly. "Intent to kill. Why, I would not harm the most miserable being living, even my own enemy, and I think the world of my old friend, the captain.

"I can't talk about the case," he said. "[illegible] I have promised my attorney not to, but I can't help saying how badly I feel to think of my old friend in the hospital, with me charged with assaulting him. I wish I could go to him. Of course I cannot."

Then it was that he fell to talking of the stage, and of his successes, and finally the talk came around to "Almost a Life," the old play in which he made one of his early successes.

"It was a grand success in London," he said. "We played for a continuous run of six months to crowded houses. We had previously played New York. We toured the big cities of the country. Everybody went wild over the show.

"I was the hero and the prisoner. I was dressed, in one scene, as I am dressed now. I was thrust in a cell, even as I have been now. Little did I dream I would ever be locked in a real cell, charged with assault with intent to kill.

"I think I played my part in the show better than I play this real part. I do not think I make a very good criminal." He smiled. "I do not feel like one, anyway. I am not one."

The jailer had allowed the actor to come out into the corridor to talk with the reporter. Plympton gestured back toward his cell.

"You wouldn't think a cell could be comfortable," he said, "but I want to say that I never stopped in any hotel where they treated me with more consideration than I get here. I can never thank the sheriff and his deputies enough for the manner in which they have treated me. Won't you please print that, so the people of this county can realize what kind of officers they have here?

Appreciates Kindness of Friends.

"I never realized before how many friends I had. I have learned that a friend in need is a friend indeed."

The actor unbuttoned his blouse, thrust his hand into an inner pocket and drew forth a bundle of letters.

"These are letters and telegrams from friends all over the country," he said with fervor. "They have been pouring in since I have been here. Why, some are from friends whom I had lost all track of. [illegible] I am especially proud of. It is from Stephen Fiske, the noted author and dramatic critic of New York.

"Each letter is brimming over with kind words of cheer. They tell me they know I am innocent of any wilful wrong-doing. It does one good to get so many letters of sympathy in a case like this. Nearly all have asked if I need money, food or the like. Each seems to want to do something for me.

"Not only have I received scores of telegrams and letters, but local friends have sent all manner of fruit and flowers. There goes a bouquet now," he said, pointing to a man who was going up to the second tier with a massive bunch of cut flowers. "This is moving day," h[illegible] with a smile.

Moving to a Larger Cell.

"I have been in a small cell since being here. I am not well, so the sheriff is giving me a larger one in the hospital ward. I shall like that better, I think, although I have no cause for complaint where I am.

"I am glad you came to see me to-day," he continued. "I am glad to see any one from Boston. I have played in nearly all the big houses there. Boston is my birthplace.

"Perhaps you do not know that I was born on the site of Keith's Theatre. A queer coincidence, is it not? Yes, when the old Boston Theatre was being built I was born on Mason street, just where the rear entrance of Keith's is. Guess I must have caught the fever with so many theatres around me.

"My last stand in Boston was at the Hollis Street Theatre when I played there last Fall in 'London Assurance.' It is a good play and we did a great business with the show.

"What I will play in this year I cannot say. But I am not worrying about that. When I am out of this difficulty I guess something will turn up."

The actor arose and extended his hand again.

"When you come to interview me again," he said, "it will be about some show."

> In "Almost a Life," I was dressed in one scene as I am dressed now. I was thrust in a cell, even as I have been now. Little did I think I ever would be locked in a real cell charged with assault with intent to kill.—Eben Plympton in interview with a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter in Plymouth jail.

DOES LOW HURDLES IN 34 3-5 SECONDS

New York, Sept. 23.—Harry L. Hillman, Jr., of the Thirteenth regiment, N. G. N. Y., running in the colors of the New York Athletic Club, established a new world's record in a 300-yard hurdle race to-day, at Travers Island, the time being 34 3-5 seconds. This is exactly two seconds better than the previous time, by Dr. A. C. Larazen, formerly of the University of Pennsylvania, who did the distance over the low hurdles in 36 3-5 seconds at Chicago on May 12, 1897.

J. W. Morton, of the South [illegible] Harriers, England, made his American debut in a special sprint of 100 yards, but although he won rather handily, his time, [illegible] behind Champion Duffy's figures. Morton is the English and Canadian [illegible] sprinter and three weeks [illegible] Canadian prize by run[illegible] in 10 seconds.

L. D. Lambrakis, Athens, finished 5.45 o'clock [illegible]

MAJOR DELMAR DOES HALF MILE IN RECORD TIME.

Special to the Sunday American.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 23.—A [illegible] by Major Delmar, the champion trotting gelding in the stable of [illegible] in :59¼, the fastest half mile of the season, was the feature of the racing at the Glenville track this afternoon. Major Delmar was carded to go a mile against 2:04, but warm sun and high wind dried out the track so rapidly this morning that by the time the horses got on it this afternoon it was cuppy the whole route, making extreme speed [illegible].

Previous to this great half Delmar had been a half in 1:01½, this being the first half while his big performance of the day was made in the last half, after going the first half in 1:08¾.

Both miles were made in 2:08¼. "Doc" Tanner, who drove the gelding, holding him back in the second half of the first mile, while in the record breaking half he sent him easy for the first part of the route, and cut him loose after picking up the runner at the half mile post.

BOSTON RUNNER IS SECOND IN BIG MARATHON RACE.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Straining to the last limit, the extraordinary fortitude and endurance which had borne him there, Bhud Metzner, member of the New Illinois Athletic Club, staggered to the goal in the Washington Park Race Track this afternoon the winner of his club's first annual open Marathon race of twenty-five miles, from the Evanston Golf Club grounds. While Metzner lay on the ground being massaged by a physician, John J. Kennedy, Boston, [illegible] a close second and [illegible] extreme exhaustion [illegible] over the prostrate form of the winner in dire need of medical aid. All along the course of the long, grueling run contestants for honor fell to the street victims of extreme fatigue, and narrowly escaped being run over by autos and other vehicles.

The order in which the six of the sixteen contestants finished and the officia[l] time in which they covered the course are as follows:

Bhud Metzner, winner, finished 5:1[illegible] time, 3 hours 1½ minutes; winner of gold medal and trip to represent the West at Athens in the monster Marathon race of all nations.

John J. Kennedy, Boston, finished 5:15.30; time, 3.15.30; second prize.

S. H. Hatch, finished at 5.20 o'clock; time, 3.20; third prize.

John Anderson, finished at 5.34 o'clock; time, 3.30; fourth prize.

E. B. Bohman, finished at 5.31 o'clock; time, 3.31; fifth prize.

ELECTRICITY USED TO KILL INSECTS

Washington, Sept. 23.—The Electrical Magazine, according to German papers, describes a series of successful experiments for destroying insects injurious to the products of the soil. An engineer at Monaco observed that metal rods put into the ground and then connected with a dynamo of 110 volts made insects in the vicinity leave their hiding places in the ground. He argued that electricity might therefore be used on a large scale to kill these insects, which all came in great haste to the surface.

It is probable that for the killing of various kinds a different voltage will be used. Further experiments will be made to this end.

FAST BALL AT LYNN.

Some fast ball playing is expected when the St. Johns of Peabody and the Lynn (N. E. League) teams meet, the first game to be played at Lynn September 30. The team winning two out of three takes the series.

FIRST LINEUP AT TUFTS.

The Tufts football squad lined up for the first scrimmage of the year yesterday afternoon on the "old campus."

Only one fifteen-minute period was played. The varsity had much the better of the play, although neither side scored. Chase and Claffey showed up best of the new material.

TENDERLOIN DARK AT MIDNIGHT HOUR

New York, Sept. 23.—The Tenderloin was closed to-night at midnight for the first time in many years. Police Captain "Farmer" Dooley, who was transferred from Coney Island to the Tenderloin [illegible] days ago, made it pretty plain to-day that he is going to enforce the law in his precinct.

BRINGS "ANGEL" TO MAYOR

Logansport, Ind., Sept. 23.—Leo Spellman, of Anniston, Ala., was found in the Panhandle shops here demented, a cash fare receipt showing him to be en route to Chicago. "Those Chicago Mayors all have little black men," he declared. "I am taking an angel to Carter Harrison." When told that Dunne was Mayor he added: "Well, I've an angel for him, too."

HORSE DEFEATS AUTO.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—At last the horse has asserted itself and temporarily at least vanquished the automobile. The victory was won in Evanston, when a horse hitched to an express wagon boarded Dr. E. H. Webster's touring car in a collision on Davis street and kicked the front of the machine to pieces. The horse came out of the encounter with only a few scratches.

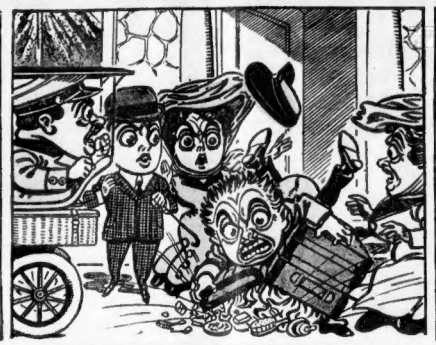
1. CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "Well, good-bye, Lulu. I wish you happiness on your automobile tour. I wish I were going with you."
LULU: "I wish you were, Charley. You are such good company."
LEANDER: "Great Scott; just listen to that. Any wonder I'm jealous?"
POPPER: "Hurry up with that trunk, Leander. It's time to start."
MOMMER: "Be careful of that trunk, Leander."

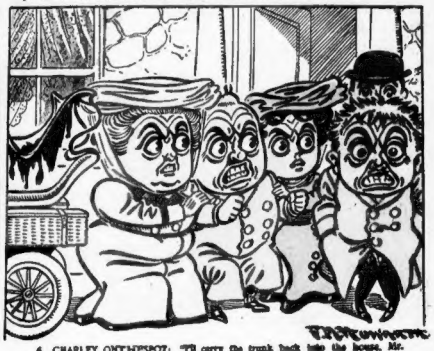


2. CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "Gee! There goes Leander again."
LULU: "Oh, Leander, why aren't you careful? You don't appear to be able to do anything without making a mess of it."
LEANDER: "O-O-O-O-F ! ! ! ! ! ! ! !"
POPPER: "Confound that tumble bug! He can't be trusted."
MOMMER: "I knew something would happen. I knew it would."

3. CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "Don't get rattled, old man; accidents will happen."
LULU: "Leander, your carelessness is a simple outrage!"
LEANDER (aside) "I know it. That butter-in IS my brother."
POPPER: "Hurry up, now, and pick those things up. Quick!"
MOMMER: "I have a presentment that some misfortune is going to happen us on this automobile tour. Here's a mirror broken at the very start."

4. MOMMER: "Oh, I'm fearful of starting. Leander is bad luck."
POPPER: "Just throw that trunk up on top. Come, mommer."
LILLI: "Oh, Leander, hadn't you better let Charley help you?"
CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "Yes, Leander; let me give you a lift."
LEANDER: "Bah! Go away! I could throw this trunk up there if it was twice as heavy."

5. POPPER: "W-E-O-W ! ! ! ! !
MOMMER: "HELP! MURDER! , POLICE! He's killed Popper!"
CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "Heavens, old man, be careful!"
LULU: "Oh, Leander, see what you've done. Oh, Popper, Popper, Popper. Oh, Leander, why did you do it? WHY did you do it?"
LEANDER: "Ye gods! Again I'm up against it."



6. CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "I'll carry the trunk back into the house, Mr. Peachtree. You'll not be able to start to-day."
LULU: "Oh, Leander, WHY did you try to kill poor Popper?"
POPPER: "The vampire! I'm going to forbid this marriage, I am."
MOMMER: "A clear case of attempted assassination, I say."
LEANDER: "My ill luck again. I wonder which is the easiest death to die?"

FOXY GRANDPA

THE BOYS WAIT FOR HIM TO FALL ASLEEP—AND HE'S NAPPING ALL THE WHILE!

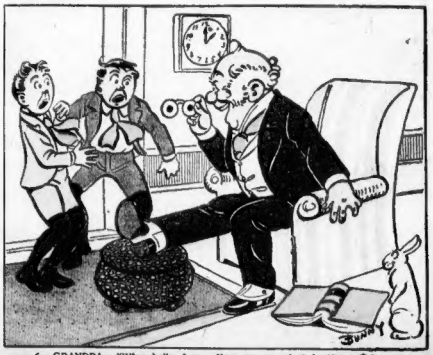
1. BOYS: "That looks as if Gran'pa intends taking a nap. We will soon have a chance for a little fun."

2. GRANDPA: "Dear me, but I am sleepy. But how dare I close my eyes with those young mischiefs so near."

3. GRANDPA: "I will just paint some eyes on my glasses and see if I can't fool them."

4. GRANDPA: "Now for a nice, comfortable snooze."

5. BOYS: "Goodness, wont Gran'pa ever go to sleep? He has been snoring away for an hour with his eyes wide open."



6. GRANDPA: "Why, hello, boys. Here you are, just in time. Get me a cloth to wipe my glasses and then we will have some luncheon."
